The leaders, Mrs. H. Molley and Miss Marion Conklin, then took the meeting over by handing out pamphlets on the new project and leading in a discussion. The topics for discussion were — "a pattern for everyday eating and what do we mean by cereals." It is stated that wheat is the most common cereal in Canada with oats taking second place.

Mrs. Herbert Smith read a humorous selection about a Scotchman; Miss Ruth Linn sang a popular selection, "Those Dear Hearts and Gentle People."

The presentation was made by Messrs. Ronald Johnson and Geo Weaver.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips were the recipients of two occasional chairs, upholstered in turquoise blue, quilted tapestry, and Carleton received a honey leather "Henry Perkins" billfold.

All graciously replied, extending thanks for the lovely gifts and a special "thank you" to the many friends who helped the affair end on such a story evening.

In Mrs. Phillips' message, she spoke of her arrival at Mount Pleasant 25 years ago and her associations in the community and Woman's Missionary Society. From September 1950 until the end of the year there were seven couples married in the Mount Pleasant community. Mr. and Mrs. Phillips have resided at Anson since their marriage.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

Tim Wesse was wheeling his chair along the corridor of the veterans' hospital when Midge entered. The silhouette immediately caught his eye and his admiration but he did not recognize Midge.

Tim knew the dress was one he had designed but there was something else that begged recognition which eluded him. He called his wheel chair after her.

She glided easily down the corridor giving no indication that she had seen him, and turned the corner into the cross corridor. Tim wheeled slowly along after her, reflectively trying to place her.

After a short distance, Midge stopped, turned. "I beg your pardon," she said, tilting her chin, as if in annoyance at being followed.

It was a moment even after she had spoken before he recogized her.

"Holy mackerel!" he cried out. "Midge!"

"How do you do?" She spoke easily, smiled the small restrained smile she had seen Jean affect.

"Come in here!" He indicated a door opening into a reception room. "Come in here and let me try to figure out what's happened to you."

Inside still amazed, he studied her. She modeled the costume as she had seen the model costumes. She removed the coat, modeled the dress.

"Remember this?" she said still with chin high.

"Uh-huh." He nodded, disbelief still in his eyes. "I can't believe it's you Midge. I'm overcome."

"I'm glad." Midge felt the first happiness she had felt in weeks. She told him the source of the gift.

Tim was puzzled. "Why do you suppose Jean sent you that outfit. Grey, black and silver. I would never associate them with you."

"I guess she got tired of looking at me in blue jeans."

"Well, you're certainly smart enough looking now." He laughed contritely. "Are you really the little girl in pigtails who's been coming up here all these years?"

Midge was glowing. "You like me now."

He hesitated a moment, studied her, "I like you, Midge but—but somehow you seem to be out of character," he said. "You look stunning but I have a feeling you look like someone else. You are not you."

Instantly, the sunny morning went dark for Midge. Anger, the agony of frustration and jealousy flashed in her eyes.

But Tim did not notice. "For a moment just now when I recognized you," he went on lightly, "I felt very much like I'd lost a friend."

"Well you have!" Midge's feelings finally found words. "I'm tired of being the funny little tomboy around here. I have feelings, too! Midge, the simple little country lassie is leaving! Goodby!"

She turned and started swiftly for the door. He was stunned for a moment by her sudden burst of sharp emotion. He could not realize this was Midge, the quiet-spoken, smiling youngster from down the road. When he recovered she was already at the door.

"Midge! Please! Don't go!" he cried after her.

But Midge kept on going. He whirled around and raced after her with a speed that had come from years of mastery of the wheel chair. But just as he neared the door she slammed it fiercely after her. He ran head on into the closing door.

The collision threw his head sharply forward, jolted every bone in his body, dazed him.

After a moment, the door was carefully opened and Midge, concerned, stood in the frame.

"I'm sorry Colonel," she said her anger completely gone. "Was it an awful bump?"

He shook himself sharply to shake himself out of the daze.

Midge went quickly to him. "I didn't mean to slam the door on you like that," she murmured contritely.

But Tim did not hear her. A sudden strange expression of amazement shone on his face. He stared down at the front of the wheel chair.

"No!" he whispered in trepidation, "No, it can't be, It can't be."

Midge was more concerned than before. "What's happened Colonel? Did the bump do any harm?"

He held up a trembling hand for silence, while he kept his eyes fixed on the front of the wheel chair. Slowly the look of amazement faded and his face began to glow with a subdued light of awe and joy.

"Midge," he whispered, "I can move my toes."

She stared in astonishment and disbelief.

"I can, Midge, I can move my toes." His eyes began now to fill with tears. "I'm going to be able to walk."

He put his arm around her, rested his head against her body and sobbed.

There was nothing miraculous about Tim Reese's cure. The bump against the reception room door was purely an accidental cause.

The operation in Boston had been slow to work, or, rather, Tim had been slow in co-operating with the operation, and that was about the truth of the matter. The Boston surgeon had records of other cases similarly late in response.

The staff at the hospital which had been skeptical of the value of surgery in the first place was now skeptical about the first indications of a cure. Time and Tim however proved the staff wrong.

Tim's long stay in the wheel chair had fortunately brought no serious impairment of the functions of the legs and feet, and diligent and determined exercise, especially exercise in the hospital's swimming pool, soon had him dragging himself about on crutches.

From the crutches to canes was a short if difficult transition.

In the first shock of happiness, Tim sat down to write to Jean of the wonderful thing that had happened to him. He wrote the letter trying hard to discuss the new hope but now possessed him. But his hope bubbled up from every sentence he wrote and finally he tore up the letter.

She would be home in a few weeks and he decided, he would then surprise her in person.

The more he thought of the idea of the surprise, the more dedicated to the idea he became. Hardly was he on his feet on crutches when he had a tailor come out from New York to measure him for a suit of clothes. He bought shirts, ties, shoes a hat and overcoat. He had natural taste in clothes and he knew how to wear them.

He plotted his first meeting like a dramatist. He saw himself, when she came, seated in his wheel chair with a blanket over him as he was, on the memorable day when she had intimated her affection for him.

They would talk a while. Then without comment or preparation of any sort, he would casually roll off the blanket and get to his feet. He would be wearing the new suit and she would see him as he was meant to be.

This was his dream, or, more correctly, scene one of his dream drama. For his future, as he projected it, was a play with many scenes and many curtains, so many indeed that they stretched far into an indefinite distance and were lost in a golden haze.

There was the little apartment in New York, for example. Perhaps downtown around Tenth St. Oh, business permitting, up on Park Avenue.

"Business permitting" was a condition in all his plans though the exact nature of the business permitting was vague except in one concept—the concept of a house called Jean Roland, with Jean the beautiful young executive in charge and himself the unobtrusive designer. Always in his future, whatever the scene, was Jean.

Midge, in the wings, so to speak, watched Tim dream his drama.

At first, Midge had shared in Tim's excitement over his recovery. Her indignation at his unawareness of her devotion faded and she became more dedicated to his happiness than before.

But, as Tim began to move about and confidently plan his future, her feelings became confused. So long as he was in a wheel chair, she was sure of his presence at the summit hospital, but on his feet he could walk away, walk away from the hospital and Cedarbrook, walk away completely out of her life.

Midge watched Tim progress from wheel chair to crutches, from crutches to canes and knew that his cure was getting very close.

Now as she saw him moving about in his new clothes, saw color return to his face and laughter to his eyes, saw how tall and attractive he was, she began to realize the day was not far off when she would lose him.

She who had loved Tim through years when he was ill, helpless, would soon surrender him, she told herself, to one who could love him only in his able and handsome manhood.

Little by little, in the madness of her heartbreak, she began to wish, vaguely and reproachfully but still to wish that Tim had not jumped into the door in the reception room that Sunday morning.

HOPE FADES SUBMARINE CREW STILL ALIVE

CHARGED WITH FIVE DEATHS

John Henry Schmidt, 31, charged with murdering five members of his family, leaves Winnipeg court dressed in work clothes and flanked by R.C.M.P. and plainclothes men. Schmidt was remanded a week without plea after the five were killed April 14 on their farm near Graysville, Man. — (CP Photo.)

Story of Sadism Related At Hearing on Abduction Of 13-Year-Old Kingston Boy

Kingston, April 18 — (CP) — A story of sadism was detained in court today before Owen C. Dulmage was committed for trial on a charge of abducting a 13-year-old Kingston boy.

The sandy-haired, 29-year-old prisoner wore an unconcerned look during the 30-minute preliminary hearing. He chose trial by judge and jury and didn't apply for bail. No date was set for his trial.

The Ottawa civil servant also faced a charge of careless driving. He read before his remand on that count to April 26.

Main witness Teddy Wainwright told of being hit over the head on Division Street while walking home on the night of March 23. He then related a series of happenings that included being tied up, gagged, taken for an automobile ride, forced into different positions while clothed only in bathing trunks, and having the initials "TW" carved into his thigh.

The accused was arrested Easter Sunday after his car hit a culvert. It is alleged that he was returning the boy to Kingston at the time.

Mrs. Ethel Wainwright, mother of the boy, said she noticed marks, which appeared to have been made by ropes on the boy's throat when she first saw him after his disappearance. She also said she saw the initials "TW" scratched on the boy's thigh.

Prisoner For 36 Hours

The boy told police at the time that he was bludgeoned on a Kingston street, gagged and carried to an automobile, then driven to a farm house which he thought was 20 miles north of Kingston. He said he was stripped to the waist and then tied him up in one position after another. At one time, he was left hanging downward from a beam in the cellar of the house.

He said he was held prisoner 36 hours.

Dulmage, bespectacled government clerk and boys' worker, has been in custody since his arrest March 25. He has been examined by psychiatrists.

Police investigation of a traffic accident led to the man's arrest. He and the boy were treated for injuries after Dulmage's car left the highway near Kingston.

Raises Objections

Before the first witness was called, Dulmage's lawyer, Edmund Hall of Ottawa, said he agreed to proceed with the preliminary hearing although he was registering three objections.

He said he was given the impression that we was not allowed to speak to witnesses. He said the witness' names were not on the back of information given him and said for the Crown refused to name them. He criticized the form of warrant remand.

He said his client should have been examined in Kingston General Hospital where the necessary facilities are available. He said Dulmage was not even allowed to be examined by his personal physician.

"There is no use protesting that in this court," Magistrate Marvin said. He said the sheriff and government would take care of examinations and "if you did not know how to do it, it is your fault."

Brother Answers Criticism of Quints' Doctor in Book Recently Published

Toronto, April 18 — (CP) — Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's brother today pointed to the health and wealth of the Dionne Quintuplets to answer to criticism of the Quints' physician in a recently-published book.

Dr. William A. Dafoe, prominent obstetrician — gynecologist, commented in an interview on "The Dionne Legend: Quintuplets in Captivity" by Lillian Barker, published in the United States by Doubleday and Co.

The book was withheld from sale in Canada by Doubleday Canada Ltd. and review copies were recalled because of "certain inaccuracies in the text." It is a general criticism of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe who died in 1943 after caring for the children from their birth on May 28, 1934.

His brother said he was "somewhat saddened" by the book's "general tone and its considerable number of inaccuracies, and my conclusions were:

"1. The children are alive, healthy and I am sure they are happy.

"2. My understanding is that at present their estate if worth well over $1,000,000.

"3. From the description of their present circumstances I consider that it is beyond the fondest expectations that the parents could have had at one time.

"4. In my opinion these three results of the Quintuplets' birth would have never taken place without my brother's contribution."

Dr. Dafoe said that "in going over the complete set of contemporary medical, newspaper clippings, magazine articles, editorials and everything pertaining to the birth and survival of the Quintuplets—which are in my possession, I am struck by the repeated mention of my brother's perseverance, skill and unassuming manner. He gave credit to other agencies than himself for the successful carrying out of the task which I am sure would have dismayed abler people.

"His last and only words when giving up his stewardship were: 'I feel that my period of usefulness is over. I hope I have done a good job.'

"My opinion still is that he did."

MANY DEMANDS MADE OF GOVT. DURING DEBATE

Increase in General Sales Tax Attacked

Ottawa, April 18 (CP) — A variety of demands were placed before the government as the Commons continued a free-swinging debate on the budget.

The discussion ranged from taxation to the employment of older workers, from irrigation to wheat, and from coal to immigration.

Donald Fleming (PC-Toronto Eglinton) suggested the "government withdraw the increase—to 10 from eight percent—in the general sales tax. He said Finance Minister Abbott could not have done worse than to boost that tax. The increase in commodity taxes had fallen heavily on many things that were needed in the average Canadian household.

The government, when it had a choice between reducing non-essential expenditures or "soaking the people" was "deliberately" chosen to "soak the people" and contribute to the rising cost of living.

Robert Cauchon (L-Beauharnois) moved that parliament set up a special house committee to investigate means of providing and finding employment opportunities for older workers,

Murder Suspect Remanded Eight Days on Charge

Pembroke, Ont., April 17 (CP) — Lloyd Robert Wyse, 34-year-old Golden Lake, Ont., farmer, has been remanded eight days on a charge of murdering Lila Killaby, taxi driver, while police continue their investigation.

Brought over Monday from Hamilton, where he had been arrested Saturday night, Wyse was formally arraigned late Monday before Magistrate W.K. MacGregor on the charge of slaying Killaby.

Barber, 51. Remanded without plea, he is lodged in the county jail.

Police allege that the husky farmer brutally killed Barber for his money.

CONFESSES TO MURDER

Forsyth, Mo., April 18—(AP)—A 25-year-old mother of four pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of murder in the "instalment plan" slaying of her husband. She was Mrs. Carrie Marvin Sale. He said the sheriff and government would take care of examinations and "if you did not know how to do it, it is your fault."

Platoon of Pats Mixes it Up With Enemy North of Parallel

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

West Central Sector Korea, April 18. (CP)—At least 12 Chinese were killed and more wounded late Saturday when a platoon of Patricias led by Lieut. Michael George Levy of Vancouver, mixed it up with the enemy atop a ridge about six miles north of the 38th parallel.

A company under Major Bob Swinton of Vancouver, tangled with the enemy at dusk after a long afternoon climb up a 600-foot rock face through a spring mist thickened with smoke from Canadian gunfire.

The Patricias were assigned earlier in the day to help the Middlesex regiment take a position which had been holding up the front for almost two days.

Companies led by Swinton and Major Jack Cooper of Edmonton advanced unopposed until right among the enemy positions.

Then the fog and smoke cleared to reveal Levy's men in a relatively flat, bare area, although stronger than the opposition the Patricias have been meeting lately.

Rain of Grenades

The communists let loose with a rain of grenades—a defensive type resembling the Canadians' little grenade and not like the stick variety that causes concussion on which the Chinese have been relying lately. The kind Levy's men got were made with good steel with high fragmentation effect. Still, casualties were light.

Levy jumped into the fray with pistol and grenade, his men right behind him. After a spirited exchange, the Chinese decamped and the position was secure in Canadian hands by nightfall.

Indications are that the United Nations forces are entering the fringes of a line the enemy intends to hold, he having virtually conceded the Eighth Army's move to the parallel and its advance toward a tactically sound line to the north. Apparently he will contest the final phases of that approach.

Sunday the Patricias patrolled aggressively forward.

Flushing Operation

Meanwhile in the battalion's perimeter or "civilian" in blue coat and white trousers was the object of a flushing operation by "constant force" from a platoon under Lieut. Rich Constant of Calgary.

Constan popped up from behind a cluster of rocks to heave an object at a Canadian cutting wood. The Canadian caught it with his left hand just as the "grenade" was believed to be a grenade—exploded. The search was unsuccessful. It resulted in a further increase of front-line security against fifth columnists in the sector.

Four College Teachers Fired After Argument

New York, April 18 — (AP) — The Journal-American said Monday that four Vassar College teachers lost their jobs in a heated argument over the ancient Greek philosopher Plato, who died in 348 B. C.

Fists swung at one point in a room — long quarrel, the newspaper said.

The Women's College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., had no comment on the story. Mrs. Jean Michaels, public relations director, did not deny it, however.

She said the circumstances, as related by the newspaper:

The trouble began last September when the philosophy department split on whether to give the basic credit in favor of more modern philosophers.

At a departmental meeting Jan. 26, Professor Mary Ely Lyman allegedly got into a fist fight with Professor Joseph Katz, a Plato adherent.

Professor Feuer favored department expansion on a non-Platonic day philosophers as Herbert Spencer, an Englishman who died in 1903.

President Sarah Gibson Blanding is due to confer later altogether and later offered the antiPlato group a chance to resign.

No resignations were forthcoming, so the president announced their contracts would not be renewed.

State Seeks Court Order For Permission

Chicago, April 18. (AP)—The State of Illinois today asked a court order to permit physicians to give blood transfusions to a week-old girl in an attempt to save her life.

The infant, physicians said, may otherwise die. Her parents have refused on religious grounds to permit transfusions, despite pleadings of medical and legal authorities.

Mrs. Merrell Labrenz, 25, and his wife, Rhoda, 20, who described themselves as Jehovah's Witnesses, said they would be violating biblical directives if they allowed their daughter, Cheryl Lynn, to receive blood.

The infant's life can be saved, physicians said, by a complete flushing of her blood stream.

The state's attorney's office prepared to petition family court to have a guardian appointed for Cheryl Lynn on a technical charge that the parents are neglecting her health.

Peterborough Pilot in Flight Of Vampire Jets

Odiham, Hampshire, England, April 18 — (CP) — Vampire jets of Canada's Red Indian fighter squadron scuded low and high over the English Channel and The Netherlands yesterday in their biggest training flight so far.

Taking off from their base at the RAF airdrome here, Canadian Planes flew at 30,000 feet to simulate combat with Russian-made RAF fighters stood by to "attack" the Canadian aircraft in practice interception exercises.

The Red Indians were led on the 645-mile flight by their commanding officer, Sqdn.-Ldr. Bob Davidson of Vancouver, who flew the same route during the war as Wing Commander leading a wing of Typhoon fighter-bombers.

Others used in the German fighter base just south of Rotterdam, Davidson revealed before taking off, "and they were always sitting up waiting for us when we arrived. I guess they'll be up there up."

Pvt. Fred Evans of Ottawa and Saint John, N. B., leader of the "blue" section in today's flight; Flt.-Lt. Jack Grimes, Hamilton FO. Al Milne of Galt, Ont., have also flown over the route covered Tuesday.

Others on the trip were FOs. Lloyd Hall, Kamloops, B.C.; John Greatrix, Peterborough, Ont.; J. Debenham, Sintaluta, Sask.; Bill Price, Prince Albert, Sask.; Bruce Sheasby, Medicine Hat, Alta.; Jack Grimes, Rimbey, Alta.; Bob Wood, Lloydminster, Sask.; and Howie Tellock, Maxwood, Sask.

Body of Former Foreign Secretary Bevin, Cremated

London, April 18 — (AP)—The body of former Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin was cremated today at a private service attended only by relatives, close friends and government and trade - union associates.

Hundreds of men and women, many of them in working clothes, filled the Golders Green Crematorium, heard the funeral service over loudspeakers.

Mrs. Clement Attlee, wife of Britain's premier, represented her husband, who is undergoing hospital treatment for an ulcer.

Bevin, who died Saturday at the age of 70, once was a Baptist lay preacher. At the request of his family a Baptist minister conducted today's service.

THOUSANDS JOIN IN WELCOME TO MACARTHUR

Parade Will Climax Home-Coming Party

San Francisco, April 18. (AP)—Gen. MacArthur's dramatic homecoming was growing today into the wildest emotional jag this city has seen since the tumult of V-J-Day.

Tens of thousands of citizens poured out of their homes to give the ousted general a welcome expected to overshadow the riotous greeting of last night. It is his first return to the United States mainland in 14 years.

MacArthur captured San Francisco as surely as his troops conquered Manila and Leyte and two Zims in the Second World War.

And his parade this morning (starting at 12:45 p.m. E.S.T.) will climax the homecoming party.

Once the welcome is extended, the general will hurry to Washington to defend the Congress tomorrow the Asian policies which caused President Truman to fire him.

Already the dispute between MacArthur and Truman has left Republicans and Democrats in bitter rift. People throughout the country are choosing up sides.

Canadian Scenery Second to None Association Told

Toronto, April 18 — (CP) — Canadians were told Tuesday that they should speak out loudly and often about the attractions of their country to bring additional tourists to Canada.

R. Haxley of the Parks and Recreation Association of Canada told the Canadian Government Tourist Conference that Canadian scenery is second to none. But it often seems to him that Canadians themselves do not appreciate it.

However, Maj. - Gen. H. A. Young, federal deputy minister of resources and development, said Canadians strike a happy medium by being not too reserved and not too "gushy" about their country. Gushiness was a selling point to visitors from the United States, he said.

Leo Dolan, director of the Federal Travel Bureau, said all travellers' and fraudulent tourist advertising must be exposed if Canada is to get its share of tourist dollars from an increasingly-competitive world field.

T. B. Blake of the Ontario planning department's conservation branch said a major problem is to get tourists to stop in Southern Ontario while on their way further north. He urged roadside shield resort areas. He said municipalities should do more to develop parks and picnic areas near historic sites.

46-FOOT TUMBLE

Hamilton, April 18 (CP) —Absorbed in painting a fence, Douglas Henderson stepped back to survey his work and tumbled down a 40-foot embankment into Lake Ontario. He survived with a bad shaking up and loss of his paint brush.

Family Must be Centre of Thinking If Free World Is to Win Battle

Detroit, April 18. (CP)—Health tion of today is whether mankind is to go steadily forward or whether progress will peter out in communism's dead-end street.'

There were messes of people in the world who knew little of economics, democracy but a great deal about hunger and poverty. By their weight of numbers they would have a powerful effect on the course of human affairs in the years to come.

These people must be helped and help must begin with the individual.

To this end the United Nations and its agencies and the Commonwealth countries now were working. And in helping these nations and peoples "we are not doling out charity, we are investing in humanity."

Oxygen Supplies Will Last Until Thursday Night

Early-Morning Tappings Weaken as Time Passes

Portsmouth, England, April 18 — (Reuters) — Planes and ships still scoured the English Channel late today as hope lessened for the British submarine Affray, with 75 aboard, missing since she dived Monday night.

The submarine still has not definitely been located though contact has been made and the British Navy admitted that the long submersion reduced the prospect of rescue.

But the navy added that there is "increasing evidence" the search is being concentrated in the right place.

FLURRY OF EXCITEMENT

A brief flurry of excitement was caused this afternoon when a R.A.F. plane sighted a white-and-yellow object on the sea down the channel from Portsmouth but it turned out to be a false alarm.

Ships sent immediately to the spot in hopes it might be a marker buoy from the missing Affray reported back that it was not a buoy and had no connection with the submarine.

The squalls hampered the hunt for the Affray, now in its second day.

Hopes raised by early-morning tappings from the sub's marker buoy are steadily fading as time passes and without sign of the sub's marker buoy or surfacing survivors.

May be Canted on Side

The belief grew that the 1,800-ton submarine — stuck on the bottom 200 feet down about 30 miles off the Isle of Wight — was canted on her side, preventing release of the buoy or escape of her men from the hatches.

Search - plane pilots reported rain was falling despite forecasts of fine and sunny weather.

Capt. William C. Shefford, British naval expert from the submarine depot ship Forth at Malta, was being rushed by air to Britain today to help in the rescue effort.

At nearby Gosport, the home of many of the submarine men, weeping women waited by their radios for the latest bulletins.

Grim Picture

Navy experts painted a grim picture Tuesday of the fate of the Affray if any of the 75 still lived.

With oxygen supplies running out, they would have to sit still, hardly talking. By nine tonight their discovery would be grave. Even though they could last out until Thursday evening provided the submarine was undamaged and they were distributed in different watertight compartments.

Out in the channel the navy's mustering every modern scientific aid and developed many of the lost sub.

They sought to plot weak supersonic signals heard earlier today after hours of ominous silence.

The only previous signal from the sub, sent at 1230 E.S.T. Monday (6:30 p.m. EST Tuesday), had led the rescue fleet of 22 ships to the area 15 miles south west of the Isle of Wight.

The rescuers signalled to the entombed crew to try an underwater escape, one by one in special equipment through the vessel's escape hatches. But by mid-morning none had bobbed to the surface.

The rescue boats fired down new depth charge signals in an attempt to re-establish contact.

Requests Will Be Far Greater Than Production

New York, April 18 (AP) — About 75 percent of the United States' total finished steel output will go to military and "essential civilian" users during the fourth quarter of this year, the Iron Age, metalworking trade weekly said today.

It might be even more unless the national production authority cuts down on demands, the publication added.

It said that "competition among consumers for the 25 percent or less of 'free' steel will be lustrously intense," so much so that "it is questionable whether this half-slave, half-free market can survive."

The controlled materials plan will mean more steel only to those who are proved essential to reviewing officials, the Iron Age said. Manufacturers of consumer durables, especially autos and appliances, are listed as among those who will be hard hit.

"Total requests for steel will be far greater than available production," said the trade weekly.

Packet Freighter 'Glen Allan' Makes Last Trip on the Bay

Old timers along the Belleville waterfront suffered a tinge of nostalgia this morning as they saw the packet freighter Glen Allan" move away from the local dock on her last trip up the bay.

Out of commission since 1947, when she laid up after nearly a quarter century run between Belleville and Montreal the old "Glen Allan" has since that time tugged gently at her hawsers at the Belleville dock.

Now her owner, Mr. W. R. McCreary of the Bay of Quinte Transportation Co. Ltd., has sold the old freighter and she is being taken to Hamilton to be junked for scrap. The old boat is being towed to her graveyard by a tug.

Built for the lumber trade on the Rideau Canal and across Lake Ontario to Montreal the old Glen Allan plied this route for a number of years until in 1925 she was turned into a coal and lumber running from Belleville down the St. Lawrence to Montreal. From 1925 until 1946 when she went out of service the old boat carried thousands of barrel of cheese in Montreal and brought in sugar on the return trip.

During her heyday she was a familiar sight as she moved slowly up and down the bay. In 1946 she was replaced by the new City of Belleville.

Built for the canal trade the old boat was of shallow draught, drawing only nine and a half feet of water fully loaded. Her capacity was roughly 300 tons.

"I am not sorry to see her go," Mr. McCreary commented this morning as the old freighter passed for the last time through the swing bridge across the bay.

Only the Smelt Could Say How They Got Into Landlocked Lake, But They're not Telling

The Landlocked Smelt Caper, a piscatorial whodunit, is causing Lands and Forests Department officials at Tweed some conjecture and concern.

Just how the silver "slivers" reached Loughborough Lake, inland smelt water, 5 miles north of Kingston, is puzzling the official gentry.

Not only are they there in numerous they are, and what effect they will have on the finish in the area, are other posers.

First intimation of the presence of the smelt in Loughborough came last spring when Kingston fisheries owner, stated he purchased the fish caught in the lake. The confirmation was available at the time.

This spring, the fisheries owner reported he bought 700 lbs. of smelt from a Sydenham fisherman who claimed he caught them in Cranston's Creek, a stream flowing into Loughborough.

The standard equipment of the ordinary smelt consists of nets and tail for swimming purposes and a head which usually gets him into trouble.

No smelt caught yet has been equipped with wings, an undercarriage, two wheels and a tail, a cab, or relations ashore who would transport him to Sydenham Lake or Tweed.

Young smelts, they say, are the china dolls of the piscatorial family. They are delicate and cannot stand rough treatment nor can they travel overland. So transportation to the lake via road in the summer months, is out of the question.

Department officials believe they were "warned" when they arrived, the opinion the fish were left in the lake by a visiting angler, or a fish fan who was ignorant of what he was doing.

Even "hotter" is the reasoning that the smelt reached Loughborough Lake via a winter angler's hook, or they were refugees from his bait bucket at the end of the day's fishing.

All of which proves nothing.

Only the smelt know and they're not talking. . . . . .

Advisory Board For Institute Of Blind Meets

Provisions for the blind of the county were explained to the Hastings-County Advisory Board on Tuesday evening at their regular meeting by Mr. F. I. Timmins, field secretary, who included procuring healers for needy cases, radio repairs and batteries, coal, oil, glasses for eye cases, Braille watches, money allowance and assistance with funeral expenses.

Mr. D. Bews, president of the board, read a statement of the statements of expenses and income were read by the secretary, Mr. F. Fairman. This report showed that the county had realized $5,091.30 in the campaign. The Christmas cheer fund distributed $346.87. A deficit for the year of $479.91 was partly due to increased expenses of the Kingston office as Mr. Timmins' district had been cut from nine counties to six.

Mrs. H. Rollins gave a report of the Christmas party, and related how much the party enjoyed this and with what anticipation they looked forward to it. This annual party has been provided by the Rotary Club, who arrange transportation for sighted guides and pick up the cheque afterwards.

Kinette Club Praised

The Kinette club were praised for their assistance at the monthly meetings of the White Cane Club.where they provided refreshments. The Kinettes also supply white canes to the blind.

The result of the one-day sale of Bluebird goods was read.

After some discussion it was decided to collect the annual campaign independently of other organizations. Since this is a county organization it was felt that it would not be advisable to join with any local community campaign.

Mrs. H. Rollins was named convenor of the May meeting and will be held in September.

Mr. A. C. Bates of Frankford, was appointed to the board to succeed Mr. J. A. Warren, who has moved from the county.

Resuscitation Methods Shown At Game Club

The "prone pressure" method of resuscitation, used in cases of drowning, electric shock, smoke or gas poisoning, was demonstrated to members of the Belleville Rifle and District Game Association Monday night. Harold McElhone, of the local hydro staff, assisted by a pair of volunteers from the audience, demonstrated the method.

The demonstration was held after members and their families had finished their knew little about the method, and wanted to acquire a knowledge of it. Mr. McElrath told them that the most important feature was to get at the patient right away, that every second at the first was extremely important. He told them that hydro records relate how men have been brought around after lying dead on for four hours.

In between the resuscitation demonstration and an auction sale conducted by Don McKinnon, four films were shown — "Pin High" "Fishermen of the North", "Battling Bass", and "Underwater Sports". The April meeting was originally scheduled to be the last in this season, but the meeting voted last night to hold another one in May.

Bogus $10 Bill Passed in City

Although there has been no apparent attempt to pass numbers of the bogus bills at any one time there have been isolated cases in recent months where counterfeit ten dollar bills have been passed in the city, it was reported today by a local bank manager.

The latest instance was yesterday when a counterfeit bill was passed at a local restaurant, the bill being turned in at the bank. Isolated cases of bogus $10 bills being passed have also been reported at Perth and Smiths Falls, it was stated.

The bill passed in the city yesterday was said to be an exceptionally fine reproduction, the main difference from a genuine bill being slight blurring on the pictures of Mr. King. Also the numbers would blur if wetted.

When counterfeit bills are detected they are turned over by the banks to the R.C.M.P. who investigate.

New Constables Taken on Force

Constable Martin was born in Quebec, but has lived most of his life in Belleville. He served in the R.C.A.F. as area engine mechanic from 1942 until 1945.

Constable Redding was born in Trenton, son of the late Rev. Kenneth Redding, Anglican minister, and Mrs. Redding who now lives at Brighton. Until joining the local police department Constable Redding had been living with his mother at Bannockburn.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Prices continued moving in a narrow path as the session progressed on the stock exchange today.

Activity continued its eight weeks of quiet dealings and volume for the first three hours of 719,000 shares was about 76,000 more than the same yesterday.

In industrials, papers, utilities, foods, and refining oils showed a majority of gains.

Price changes were mostly in small fractions.

In the mixed base metal section Steep Rock, Sherritt Gordon, Consolidated Smeltery and Falconbridge advanced while Wells Amulet, United Keno Hill, Quemont, International Nickel and Noranda declined.

Golds showed a slight increase from their recent inactivity but were still fairly dull and mixed.

TRENTON

Gets Seven Days In Trenton Court

Trenton (Special) — Charles St. Hilaire was sentenced to seven days in the county jail at Belleville yesterday when he was found guilty of having care of a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor.

Called by the defence, Dr. J. V. Byrne testified that he was treating Mr. St. Hilaire for a stomach ulcer and a cough aggravated by threshing dust. He said he had prescribed two different medicines containing drugs which would create sleep if taken in large doses.

The two police constables who picked St. Hilaire up on West Street about 6.30 p.m. on the evening of March 27 testified that St. Hilaire smelled of alcohol and found it necessary to support himself while standing up. They contended that his speech was slurred.

Testifying on his own behalf, Mr. St. Hilaire said he had only taken three bottles of beer in the afternoon.

In passing sentence, Magistrate T. Y. Wills observed that he felt the accused was guilty on the evidence, and even if St. Hilaire had said he had taken large doses of the medicine containing the hypnotics, he would still maintain the same opinion.

BANCROFT

Work of Lions Club Reviewed At Past Presidents' Night

Bancroft—Five years of service to the community were reviewed by the Bancroft Lions Club held their annual past presidents' night on Monday evening in Bancroft. With Lion Mike Burns, third vice-president in the club in the chair, the program revolved around honoring the men who had led the organization since its inception in 1945.

After a turkey banquet and a special birthday cake, the gathering heard Lions Bill Hutton and Mike Burns tell of the projects, that were handled by each president. As many events have been yearly, events the speakers concentrated upon the innovations introduced during each club year.

When the club was formed in September, 1945, Lion Jack Pollis, a former member of Huntsville Lions Club, became the charter president. To him was given full credit for the fine organizational work during the infant year. The first project of the baby club was re-establishing the village outdoor rink and forming teams of younger hockey players. After that year under the local Lions approached the postal authorities to have the mail delliveries, instead of one per day. This was granted, in 1945 the first large community Santa Claus parade was staged. Besides this the club organized a local safety committee and helped to improve the organization of the district volunteer fire brigade.

Annual Field Days

In 1946-47 when Lion Rolly Harrett was president, Bancroft Lions started their annual field day on Dominion Day. The municipal fitness and recreational council was rejuvenated by the efforts of a number of interested Bancroft Lions. The present swimming pool on a bend of the York River was converted from a section of supposedly waste land. Financial aid was given to the local girls' softball league and monthly parcels were sent to England. During this year the Lions provided a home for the Davidson triplets.

Bill Hopper became president in 1947-48, when the young club had grown into an established organization, that was called upon whenever disaster struck any section of North Hastings, or whenever help was needed by individual families. The tornado of August 1947 left a number homeless and the Lions established a fund to help these people. An annual Christmas cheer campaign to defray the expenses of chest X-rays was begun and from the first year it netted a profit of approximately $500. President Bill held the reins of office, when the movement to build a covered rink in Bancroft was started.

Built Community Rink

During the year that Whitney Martin was president, Bancroft Lions completed one of the largest undertakings ever to be accomplished by an individual service club in a community of 1,500 people, the building of a $35,000 arena and community centre. In order to help stage large indoor and outdoor events a public address system was purchased.

Muskrat Trapped in Grating

Believed to have made his way up from the river, a lone muskrat became trapped under the grating in the sidewalk in front of Shaw's Book Shop on Dundas Street sometime last week.

Presence of the tiny fur-bearing animal attracted hundreds of curious onlookers and although many attempts were made to rescue the trapped "rat" it was decided to leave it there when the grating could not be lifted.

It was thought the muskrat would return to where it came from, but eventually it was rescued, it died later from the ordeal.

Garbage Collection Starts

Ross Willman, who bargained earlier in the year to collect garbage in the town for $9,000 annually, started his duties yesterday after posting his bond. Mr. Willman is operating with two trucks, one of which he purchased from the town.

Y's Men's Work Outlined At President's Night

A year of accomplishments was recorded by the Y's Men's Club with emphasis on boys' work, young men's work, and world outlook according to the report presented by the retiring president, Gerald R. Hyde, at the recent president's night held at the Y.M.C.A. Numerous instances were cited to indicate that the club, by finance and service, had accepted responsibilities in the Y.M.C.A., the community and the broader field of world affairs.

Club membership had mounted and participation by members had increased. The president suggested however, that the year's greatest single accomplishment must be recorded as the organization of the Y's Menettes club. As tokens of esteem to the Y's Menettes, the Y's men presented the members with beautiful red blazers with a specially designed Y's Menette crest. Other luncheons preceded with perfume and all of the ladies received in addition beautiful corsages of red carnations.

Guests included President Ken Griffith and Mrs. Griffith of the Rotary Club, President Everett S. Fairman and Mrs. Fairman, of the Kiwanis Club, Mac Smith and Mrs. Smith of the Optimist Club, Miss MacDonald, of the Soroptimist Club, and Norman E. Edwards, president of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A.

Y.M.C.A. Dream

In a challenging address Rev. David P. Johnston, Kitchener, regional director for Ontario, referred to the great heritage of Y's Men's work. He took as his subject "Dreamers" and reminded his audience of the many great accomplishments in the world because of some one's imagination. The Y.M.C.A. he said, grew out of the dream of a man, George Williams, who more than 100 years ago pursued a purpose of meeting youth needs which developed into the widespread extension of the Y.M.C.A. into all parts of the world. In fine humorous vein the speaker encompassing all races and creeds made it a theme for everyone.

The same spirit was dominant in the minds of those who dreamed of the values of youth, and for 29 years have served in Y's Men's clubs in 25 countries in the world. It has given us proof that men can live together in brotherhood. Christianity at work and Christ's dream can come true, but the task of fulfillment is for people who will accept an attitude of love and not hate. The speaker concluded that God could dream, and he dreamed of the elimination of hatred, through changed attitudes in people and the development of understanding by the "Y", the youth and service clubs.

Ed. L. Littlejohn expressed the thanks of the club to the speaker and hoped that Y's men would not only be dreamers but doers in the future. He was introduced by Gordon H. Trill. A pocket book was presented by the chairman to Mr. Johnston.

A humorous and sincere tribute was spoken by Ronald W. Cass, to which Mrs. W. D. Richardson made a reply expressing appreciation.

Head Table Guests

Seated at the head table were, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hyde, and Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Trill, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bryson Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred J. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Donald O. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie F. Reid, Mr. and Mrs. R. Peter Best, Mr. and Mrs. F. Robson Clarke, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Ross Booth.

In an impressive ceremony, regional director Johnston Inducted president-elect J. Bryson Leslie and the incoming officers, past president, Gerald R. Hyde; vice president, Linton D. Read; secretary, Ross Booth; treasurer, Robson Clarke and directors, Roy Best Ronald Cass, Alfred J. Davis, Ed. Littlejohn, Leslie F. Reid, and Gordon H. Trill.

President Leslie spoke briefly, complimenting Gerry Hyde on his outstanding leadership, and offered as his theme for the year "Service".

Mrs. H. Fatovic gave excellent Mrs. H. Fatovic gave excellent numbers. For the balance of the evening a program of dancing was enjoyed.

Fund Raised to Fulfill Dying Mother's Wish

Ajax, Ont., April 18 —(CP) — The wish of a dying mother to take her family to her home in England will be fulfilled.

Mrs. Douglas Walker, 35, slowly dying of cancer, wanted to take her husband and three daughters with her when she returned home for the last time. There wasn't enough money available to transport the entire family, and airline officials had refused to let her make the trip alone.

Four days ago, the Ajax War Brides' Association heard of her wish. A fund was started and $1,734 collected with the assistance of radio stations in Toronto and Hamilton.

Friday morning, Mrs. Walker and her family will board a train for Montreal. They will fly to England Saturday.

TOURIST RATINGS

The plan to class tourist resorts in Ontario according to their record in the past embodies many points of merit. It will protect the tourist, in that he will know without doubt what type of resort he is inspecting, and it will curb the few fly-by-night operators in the province.

Accommodation approved by the province will be placed in one of three gradings — One Star, Two Star or Three Star. In the same order, the ratings will mean that the service provided by the operator is good, very good, or outstanding. Operators who already have a good record with the province will be granted a One Star rating in the autumn or winter months of this year. Any operator who believes he merits higher classification may appeal for it, and his submission will be judged by a referee committee. The same committee will state reasons for denying even a One Star approval.

Next result of the plan will be that operators who have been content in the past to make their money from a strictly transient trade by providing a service that would not encourage guests to come back will now find themselves out in the cold. Operators who have been inclined to price their services high will be in the same company. At the other end of the scale will be the resort men whose service has always been high class, and who have every desire to do it that way.

Millions of dollars are spent each year by both Canadians and Americans in tourist accommodation. The new system, if it is maintained over the years, can ensure that those dollars are being spent in the right places. Travel Minister Louis P. Cecile, when he announced the plan in Toronto this week, told resort men that they could not afford to become smug in their assumption of their position, and that they must endeavor to keep those tourists something better.

The tourist industry is just like any other business — it must continually strive for repeat business through good, even excellent service. A controlled system of grading can become a wonderful agency for the advancement of the industry.

REPOSTORIAL PROBLEMS

A few months ago, one of our contemporaries complained in a half-joking manner that its reporters were being asked to provide coverage for events that were not of much interest to the ordinary newspaper reader. The editors of the paper were being hounded by members of organizations who desired great amounts of publicity about small events, and who complained bitterly when no reporter was sent.

The editors of that particular newspaper told their readers that they could not expect coverage if the staff was not informed of the event. Any newspaper is glad to do its best on the coverage of live local news, but circumstances arise that often place it in such service.

An invitation is the official of a club or association who phones the newspaper office two days after the event has taken place, wanting to know why nothing was in the paper about it. In all probability, the editor did not even know about the event. Telephone calls made two days before the meeting will make the situation a little easier for the editor, and will give him a chance to provide coverage for the more important events, even with his limited staff. Mention about the event after it has taken place is not of much use.

Another common fault of many organizations — and one which does not increase the stature of the organization in the eyes of the press — is cancelling a meeting a half hour or more after it has been scheduled. The reporter, despite the fact that he may know many people at the meeting, and can find someone to talk to during the time that is usually wasted, may appear happy and willing, but underneath it all, he is bored. He has accepted his lot of working nights when the occasion demands, but he cannot accept or approve of an organization that does not have enough businessmen-like sense to get its meetings started at a reasonable amount of time.

The result of such a situation is that less and less attention is paid the organization by the press, because it cannot be relied on to provide coverage as it is scheduled. It seems that no type of organization is exempt from the bad habit, even though many business men, who insist on punctuality and precise work in their own day's labor, constitute the membership of the various associations. When their working day is over, they lose their penchant for punctuality, and the members of the press suffer for their faults.

In many cases, the event is an enjoyable one for the working newspaperman. In many more, it is merely another job of work for him, and he is anxious only to get it over with. He asks for no more than a chance to do just that, and do it well. Co-operation and consideration from the people he is working with can make his evening's work something more than a mere chore.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

April 18th., 1931.

The Springer Lock Manufacturing Company Limited, which has been operating here for the past thirty years, has been purchased by a new company. The firm is known as the American Hardware Corporation of Canada Limited, headed by George W. Kimball, now president of the American Corporation in which the smaller operating companies are D. & F. Corbin Company, Corbin Cabinet Lock Company, Corbin Screw Corporation and Russell and Erwin Manufacturing Company. The Springer Lock will have an authorized capital of $200,000. Mr. W. C. Springer, president of the Springer Lock, will remain with the company in an advisory capacity. All members of the office and factory staff will be retained. None of the officers of the new company reside in Belleville; they will remain at the head office in New Britain, Connecticut, Mr. W. S. Trask of New Britain Conn. will be the plant superintendent here and will come to this city to reside.

30 YEARS AGO

April 18th., 1921.

Will the aldermen of Belleville give their time to the public at the rate of $3 a meeting? It is known that some members of the city council have continued to meditate upon this question and are convinced that they should receive remuneration. They may have something up their sleeves for tonight's session as some consideration was given to the matter last Thursday. Two weeks ago in the council chamber the matter would not have the recommendation for an allowance of $3 per meeting come before the council. Mrs. Robert Tanner is visiting friends in the city.

40 YEARS AGO

The business men enjoyed a fast game of volley ball at the Y. M. C. A. last evening.

The Rev. A. L. Geen spent Easter in Kingston and preached in one of the Anglican churches in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Hinchey have returned from their wedding trip and are receiving the congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends.

No more gas will be used to light the city streets. At a recent meeting the city council gave the contract to the Trenton Electric Company to light the streets for a term of five years.

At the adjourned meeting of Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church Mr. J. D. Ford was named Rector's Warden and the following officers were elected: People's Warden, Mr. T. Ed. Ketcheson; Vestry Clerk, Mr. W. J. Ridley; Auditors, Messrs. George Anderson and William Thompson; delegate to the synod, Mrs. John W. London; alternate, Mr. Frank S. Wallbridge.

The steamer Ella Ross arrived in the harbor this morning. This is the first boat to arrive here this season.

New Restrictions May be Placed On Properties

Toronto, April 18 (CP) —Attorney-General J. Porter Tuesday hinted Ontario might impose a partial restoration of rent control for properties now exempt.

However, he disagreed with a suggestion that immediate need exists for freezing all lease due to expire April 30.

He told the first meeting of a seven-man committee set up by the legislature to pave the way for the province to take over rent controls May 1:

"The real basis of inequity today is that between those who are controlled and those who are off. It's not fair to either tenants or landlords. It seems to me we have to consider some restoration of controls across the board."

He suggested that the committee work out a "practicable fair reasonable rent across the board" in some particular area, perhaps Toronto.

MEMBERS OPPOSE RATE

St. Catharines, April 18 (CP)— Despite opposition by five members, Lincoln county council yesterday set the tax rate for 1951 at 14.2377 mills. Reason given for the one mill increase over last year's rate were higher wages to county employees and increased welfare costs.

War Enlargement Would Jeopardize World Peace

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

General Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, yesterday came out in support of the thesis that enlargement of the Korean war would jeopardize world peace.

The general admitted that this "could possibly result for a time in a military stalemate," he added:

"As long as we are able to confine the battles of Korea and countries to destroy the enemy as aggressors, we are making progress toward our international objective of preventing a general war three."

I return to the hotly-debated subject of the expanding military operations in Asia because this is the vital issue of the time at the moment. Britain, France and other western allies are dead against such expansion in the Far East —say by launching an attack against red China.

Why? Well, one reason is that this might precipitate a third world war.

Russia Is Watching

Another highly - important point is that a conflict with communist China would give Bolshevism a chance to overrun western powers down militarily and economically in preparation for the day when they find Russia and some of her satellites virtually untouched by the Asiatic conflict.

On that basis we might be smart and play into the hands of Bolshevism by launching a "preventive" war against China.

Agreed in advanced before, all western observers generally regard the fresh move as a pregnant development.

However that may be, our president program in Korea appears to be the one most likely to result in peace proposals in due course. As General Bradley indicates, it's a case of keeping up the good work in Korea and preventing a spread of the war if possible.

80 P.C. of U.S. Tourists Come To Canada

Toronto, April 17, (CP)— Canada tops the list for holiday-seekers in the United States.

Eighty per cent of Americans who left the U.S. on vacations last year came to Canada, Clinton Woolsey of the Curtis Publishing Company, told the Ontario Tourist Conference yesterday. About 12.3 per cent travelled to Europe.

He said the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity intends to build on that 80-per-cent figure. Travel Minister Louis Cecile has said the department will take to television airways in the fall, plugging Ontario from every angle, especially in such highly-populated areas as Pennsylvania.

WILL MEET IN PARIS

United Nations, N. Y., April 18 (AP) — The United Nations has accepted an invitation that was never offered to move its 1951 General Assembly.

This year the Assembly sessions will stretch into 1952. Some observers think that the move, it costs too much, they say, to transfer from New York to Paris.

The session is scheduled to open Nov. 6 and end some time in March.

Enough votes were found at a decisive meeting in March to carry the move by a small margin.

EVERYBODY PLEASE CALL IT C-R-I

After all, even those who persist in calling whatever they may be coming down with "colds," in the early stages when the indispositon or illness is most communicable, do not necessarily believe or deny that they caught it from some ignorant or careless so-and-so. All they mean to imply by calling it 'cold' is that they themselves cannot or will not identify other persons who happen to be caught within their conversational spray range in the stage of incubation or the stage of onset when the thing is highly infectious.

Take one Common Respiratory Infection (C-R-I; pronounced krea) for instance—measles. Measles isn't the most fatal C-R-I, but it does have its own standards. Therefore, everybody recognizes that epidemic measles is criminal—particularly parents of a child carried off by pneumonia following as a complication of the illness.

Well, in the stage of incubation—the time between exposure or infection and the onset of symptoms—a period of about two weeks in most cases—no one, not even the doctor, can tell what the illness is coming down with. Then when the first symptoms develop—sneezing, running at the nose, chilliness, feverishness, redness of eyes and nose, slight headache, etc., it is still difficult to determine whether the illness is going to be coryzallitis, measles, infantile paralysis, meningitis, or what, until the rash appears after three or four days.

Meanwhile, if the illness is called just a 'cold' there are no possibilities of sharing whatever it proves to be with the scores of parents who take "just a bad cold" at face value!

Other acute or Common Respiratory Infections—common in that they invade the body through the mucus membranes lining the breathing passages and present in the early stage symptoms indistinguishable from the symptoms of measles just described—are diphtheria, scarlet fever, whooping cough, mumps, tonsillitis, laryngitis, bronchitis, influenza, chicken-pox, smallpox, German measles. Altogether the Common Respiratory Infections (C-R-I, kree) and their complications and sequels account for about three-fourths of illness doctors attend.

The answer to this: The individual who, in this day and age, peddles indiscriminately germs and influenza is deeply developing, under the pretense that it is "just a cold," when employing fair and reasonable precautions he and she might remain harmless to those within effective range, I call a stinker.

The precautions a decent citizen is bound to take in the circumstances are (1) to remain isolated (beyond cough, sneeze or conversational spray range) of other persons until the acute, feverish, invasion stage is past; (2) wear a suitable mask when other persons are within spray range.

Effective cough or sneeze spray range is up to 10 to 12 feet. Effective conversational spray range is up to 6 feet. Suitable masks are described in the booklet Call it C-R-I.

I wish I could afford to distribute this booklet free of cost to readers. A gratifying number of readers have told me that lessons they learned from the C-R-I booklet have materially reduced the frequency of such illnesses in their homes—and that's why I regret I have to ask that the reader who wants the booklet send 25c and a stamped and self-addressed envelope for it.

On the other hand, I have found that even school teachers, whom I formerly supplied with the regular 35 cent C-R-I booklet in the Ways of Health at my own expense, rarely ever indulged in use of the literature, much less use of it in their school work. The conclusion of the experiment was a great disillusionment. It taught me just one thing: If you don't get something for nothing they rate it at what it costs.

Still, in order to get the C-R-I book into the hands of as many young people as possible, from whom some day I'll recover some 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope for the booklet Save Your Skin may have a free copy of the C-R-I book along with it if you prefer. Save Your Skin Both booklets contain recipes and instructions for the use of numerous home remedies.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

SEX

Sex is the dominating power of the universe. Male and female did God create human beings, as well as the animals, birds, fish and the flowers of the field. Masculine and feminine traits are to be cultivated by us on every side. These traits are manifest in the moods of human beings and almost everything they create.

In nature these sex elements are in constant conflict. Even days that seem masculine and those that seem feminine. The poets sense this fact and so give to the world rare beauty of expression in lines of delicately sexy masculine and feminine elements. I was once amused by a gardener with whom I was talking who referred to some plants as "he" and some as "she." We all do it in our thoughts. It is something intimately beautiful.

Even in the structure and arrangement of books you will note the influence of sex outside any reference to it as physical attribute. There is a delicate poetic beauty to so many, and to others a strength and virility suggested in the very cover and arrangement of contents. Margaret Fuller Ossoli wrote an immortal little book called "Woman Rediscovered," under a man's name—Michael Fairless—because it fitted the subject of the book to do so.

From both sexes in life are we to learn and made aware of the elements that contribute to our wealth and understanding and appreciation of beauty in nature or among human beings it is this sex consciousness that distinguishes us from animals. Were it not for the insect world much of the beauty that is exhibited in the flowers of the world would not be totally lost.

There is no song so beautifully expressed as the love-song of the bird outside one's window, or a letter a man writes that he forces into every cell of life does seem to give to it its form, substance and beauty. That bee that creeps into the parlor of a flower for a taste of its flavored wine, and the fluttering card of promise of future life to the species of the flower.

Only as we ennoble sex do we get the significance of the beautiful and its immortality, and of its relationship to every happy experience in life.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The Scottish race is reputed for its dour and taciturn nature. If any people may be said to weigh their words, it is the Scotch. But when it comes to blatherskites, a Scottish blatherskite may be said to top them all.

You know the kind: the amiable, loquacious, elaborate, fine-spinning, hair-splitting, tenacious and uninterruptible Caledonian compendium.

An Irish blatherskite is purely lyric. You can easily shut him off. He takes offence easily, and can be sent into the skulks with a mere word.

The English blatherskite is not so lightly handled. He is commonly of two types: the heavy blatherskite who booms in a large and deliberate tone, like an organ-pipe; or else the light, and wittyish type, a sort of Wodehouse character, who imagines he is killing you. He bubbles and quips and fizzes. Either kind are the offence to their own shipmates if the freezer was allowed to stop functioning. — Central Press Canadian.

The Scottish blatherskite is generally rude, themselves, and of the conversation. They wander off to find less valiant victims.

But the Scottish blatherskite is a desperate character. Once he pins you, he pins you not only with his tongue, but with his glinted eye and his argument. He encourages you to refute his every argument, and nails you down on your own barn door before you have got half a sentence uttered. Yet this device involves you. You hate to be nailed. He's got you.

The very accent of the Scotch thought developed by a race given to few words, lends itself miraculously to the blatherskite. The Irish accent has humor and pathos in it. The English, in all its dialects, has slightly authoritarian irritant in it. But the Scotch has bullets in it, arrows, javelins, stones, projectiles. When a Scotch blatherskite nails you to your own barn door, he has such a barrage behind him around you that you dare not move.

G. Bannerman Speaks To U.W.Club On 'Trade Fairs'

The regular monthly meeting of the University Women's Club of Belleville and vicinity was held recently at Kiwanis Centre. Mrs. A. C. Locke presided at the short business meeting. Further arrangements were made for the Regional Conference which will be held early in May at St. Thomas Church Parish House and also for the Peter Smith piano recital to be given at the end of April. It was also decided that the name of Mrs. Mary Gilliland, M.A., be sent in for nomination as Education convener for the Canadian Federation of University Women.

Guest Speaker

Mrs. D. I. MacKinnon introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Glen Bannerman, who has charge of Canadian governmental exhibitions and trade fairs. Mr. Bannerman's subject was "Advertising Canada at Home and Abroad". He told of Canada's first recorded exhibit in 1851 at the London Fair of that year, and described the print of it which was hanging in his office. Among the objects exhibited were cutters, fur robes, false teeth and fire engines.

Going far back into the history of International Trade Fairs, Mr. Bannerman said that the first recorded one was described in the Bible, Ezekiel 27:12. It was held in Tyre, Phoenicia, in the year 976 B.C., and seven countries participated. The products displayed and sold were pretty much the same as today with one exception—slaves.

International Trade Fair

Mr. Bannerman then told of his experiences in carrying out the plans for the International Trade Fair in Toronto, four years ago. The first one ever to be held on the North American continent. No one on the staff had ever before even attended a trade fair; the language problem was an exceedingly difficult one to handle. Six hundred and fifty exhibitors were expected, and 1,122 materialized. Ninety per cent of the exhibitors had never even been in Canada before. However, the great difficulties were ironed out and the fair was pronounced a great success.

Mrs. Douglas Burr expressed the thanks of the club to Mr. Bannerman for his exceedingly interesting address and for his real contribution to the advancement of a knowledge of Canada to other nations.

Coffee was served and a social half-hour was enjoyed when members and guests were happy to meet and converse with the genial speaker of the evening.

TEARFUL, SOLEMN FAREWELL AS MacARTHUR LEFT TOKYO

Cheering crowds jam the sidelines behind solid rows of Tokyo police (top) as the car carrying Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his family moves slowly toward the airport from which the former U.N. commander and his party took off on their flight to the United States. Above, among the last to be bidden farewell by Gen. Douglas MacArthur (left) is M/Sgt. Domingo Adversario, who grips the general's arm with emotion as the latter boarded his plane. The sergeant had been with MacArthur since 1938, except for period when he was captured during the last war. Lisbon, April 18 (Reuters) — Marshal Antonio Oscar Carmona, president of Portugal since 1926, died today. He was 81.

With the members of his family gathered around him the aged president confessed to Msgr. Carneiro de Mesquita and was given communion this morning. Attendants described him as calm and hopeful.

His son, Dr. Antonio Aderito Carmona, arrived at his bedside today from Madrid and his daughter, the Duchess of Dusmet, came here from Rome.

Student Combines Education With Job as Hostess

New York, April 18. (CP)—When Mary Boyle cuts her classes at Columbia University she is likely to give a novel explanation. Something like this:

"Sorry I was absent. I was in Cairo." Or, "I didn't finish my homework. I was in Paris last night."

Mary, whose home is in Philadelphia, is combining a college education with her job as international hostess with TransWorld Airlines.

It started five years ago when she enrolled on a language class at Penn — one of her many flights. Since then she has studied at the Sorbonne in Paris, getting credits which will count toward her degree at Columbia.

It's not easy working your way through college as an airline hostess, Mary says. You have to cut too many classes, and the explanations are apt to cause lifted eyebrows.

STOCKS DECLINE SHARPLY

Ottawa, April 18 (CP)—Stocks of creamery butter in the Canadian cold storages declined sharply on April 13, amounting to 4,956,000 pounds, compared with 19,212,000 on the corresponding date last year, the Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday.

On graduation she lectured in the English department at U.B.C. until 1943 when she went to the University of California to do post-graduate work. She will use her scholarship to study the writings of historian James Anthony Froude in England.

Miss Black awarded the Federation's junior scholarship, now is taking her doctorate at Radcliffe College, Harvard. She is a graduate of the University of Manitoba.

The Federation's Professional Scholarship was awarded to Dr. Mitchell, a pathologist at Montreal General Hospital. A graduate in Medicine and Surgery from McGill, she plans to study abroad on a scholarship offered by the British Post Graduate Medical Federation through the auspices of the University of London.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Old-fashioned "gumption" is what's needed here

Sometimes it seems to me that the quality most needed for solving certain types of problems is the one sure ingredient not called for by the homely but very descriptive name of gumption or "get-up-and-go".

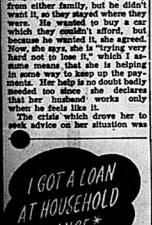
For instance I feel quite sure that many cases of marital discord in which the wife complains that her husband shows little or no respect for her would attract always improve if the wife were to display a little of this old-fashioned characteristic. What makes me think of it right now is a letter I have just received from a young woman of 24, who seems to me greatly in need of it.

She tells me that she has been married for four years to a man three years older than herself. For the entire four years, the couple have always lived with his family or hers. They made the move from his to hers because the people lived in the country and his in the large city, and he preferred the county. "I gave up the city because I wanted to live in the country," she says, adding that she hates country life.

She has, she explains, always been out of her way to give her husband what he wanted. She wanted them to get a place of their own and live alone, away from either family, but he didn't want it, so they stayed where they were. He wanted to buy a car which they couldn't afford, but because he wanted it, she agreed.

Now, she says, she is "trying very hard not to lose it," which means means that she is helping in some way to keep up the payments. Her help is no doubt badly needed too since she declares that her husband works only when he feels like it.

The crisis which drove her to seek advice on her situation was his recent announcement that he is in love with a girl of 17—ten years younger than himself.



Apparently in spite of this man's utter selfishness, neglect and, now, his infidelities, his wife still loves him, as she repeats over and over again that she couldn't love it if he left her. Gumption Needed

This is exactly where I think the exercise of a little gumption would be well advised. If she is completely under the control of her emotions that she will keep on taking whatever kind of treatment this man wants to hand out, then I doubt if matters ever will improve. On the other hand, if she were to show him that she didn't intend to go on indefinitely with that sort of thing, she might be surprised to find it made an impression on him.

My idea would be that the quicker she gets away from under the same roof with the latter, as long as she continues to live there, the harder it will be for her to assert her independence.

Since she has always wanted the country and the man the city, I'd stone, I would suggest, that she take a firm stand on that matter and tell him it's high time for them to get out on their own. If he demurs, she would apply the "get-up-and-go" in its very literal sense; go out and find a job somewhere, even if only one room and even if she had to work to earn enough to pay for it herself. She should make to clear to her husband, of course, that she wants him to be with her and that any time he decides to come and take her home she will cheerfully she'll be very happy indeed. But she should impress it upon him that the life they're living now is getting them exactly nowhere, except drawing them farther and farther apart, and that the only right thing is for them to strike out for themselves immediately.

For a wife who has meekly given her husband his undisputed way for four long years to suddenly show a little spunk, will undoubtedly give him the shock of his life. Which will be all to the good. But it will be perfectly useless for her to make loud noises and lay down ultimatums if she doesn't really intend to translate them into action. Continual yielding, repeated giving-in to her husband will only get her deeper into trouble. This is a problem that shrieks aloud for gumption.

BEAUTY

Changing the hair-do

If you have been arranging your hair the same way for a long time and decide that you'll [illegible] newer coiffure you can [illegible] that your hair is going to [illegible] tantrums for a while. It doesn't know precisely what is happening and, apparently, is pretty mad about it. If you have been wearing a side parting, and decide to look quaint and native with a middle one, some of the shafts will have to do a turn-about. It will take much brushing and coaxing, and several days, sets, to make those rebellious locks behave.

There are women who follow the style trends. If the upswept is in vogue they'll adopt it, even though the topknot make a long face look longer. When shearing goes on they are the first to flaunt the latest crop. And there are the ones who feel they must accept the standardized mode. Others seek what is known as the personality hair-do. They accept whatever is becoming, but arrange it their own way, find interesting variations that make for individualism.

It is a matter of taste

The art of the hair stylist is to bring out a woman's individual beauty. He considers the shape of the head facial contour and, most especially, the nose, since certain arrangements will give emphasis to it if it is large, while others will do the opposite. He will never neglect a centre parting to a woman whose eyes are close set. If the forehead is high and the chin receding, the fashionable sleek coiffure simply won't do. Bangs are a must in this type. There should be soft waves at the sides.

If the neck is short and plump, an extremely short cut is advisable; if it is long and narrow the hair should hide as much of it as possible.

The figure must be taken into consideration. A fluffy, childish arrangements on a tall, stately or heavy woman throws her completely out of form, while the mature, high mode makes the cute little trick look topheavy. One sees these beauty errors all too frequently. It is a matter of taste; the mirror should be one's guide.

A woman with a low forehead, beautiful regular features, a well-shaped head and pretty ears can get away with almost any kind of hair-do. She 'can indulge in fifty-seven varieties if she wishes, will look chic and lovely.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Join the express-your-appreciation crusade!

Appreciation is an inspired vitamin. It's a wonderful tonic. It makes us happy. It enriches our hearts. . .stimulates our spirits. It's deeply, tenderly touching to see how a few words of appreciation will give encouragement or confidence or courage to someone yearning at just that moment for "the human touch". And everyone thrives on it. . . people of all ages, but most particularly children and old people. Join the express-your-appreciation crusade!

She shouldn't worry about not being able to send wedding presents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I were both born and raised in a rendezvous New England town and lived there until several years ago when my husband lost his position and his health and we came out here to live as distant relatives effectively as possible. Now the daughters of quite a few of our friends back East are of the age when they are getting married, and although their parents must realize that we cannot possibly afford to send wedding presents, they send us announcements for ceremony and reception. Don't you think this is very thoughtless thing for them to do?

Mary M.

No, dear lady . . . It's very thoughtful gesture for them to make to you and your husband and the sharing of friend-ship they obviously cherish. For these good old-fashioned-type friends to send you a wedding invitation is a compliment and an honor and should be done so as such. Think how you would feel if they didn't send you these invitations which carry the endearing message, "You are on our list of dear friends, and we hope that by some good fortune it will be possible for you to be with us on this important occasion."

And also please don't worry about not being able to send wedding presents. There is no obligation to send a wedding present unless you are a relative of either family or an intimate friend of either the bride or groom. It would be gracious however, for you to write a warm-hearted letter of good wishes to the bride-to-be and one to her mother and father.

Bridal attendants may correctly wear ankle-length dresses

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At my June wedding I am going to wear a floor-length gown with a train. I am going to have a maid of honor and two bridesmaids. I wanted them to wear ankle-length gowns, but everyone is telling me that this wouldn't be correct, wouldn't look right, as I am wearing a full-length gown. Please tell me what you think is right.

Doubtful

You are right . . . at many of today's weddings, with the bride wearing a floor-length gown, the bridal attendants wear ankle-length dresses, the picturesque length called "ballerina length", with full skirt.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

What is a perfect apple?

A botanist calls it perfect if it has ten seeds that is, if the five points of the fruit's plan were all pollinated by the bees.

A cook wouldn't mind if there were no seeds, not to mention core, stem and skin. The cook does, however, want apples that when cut in a rusty brown the instant the cut fruit is exposed to the air. The apple flavor must be distinct and sweet, especially when making a batch of light, crisp apple fritters.

There are two kinds of apple fritters: those in which apple rings or slices are used and those in which the apples are cut into small cubes (today's recipe.)

To preserve the apple's tartness, a small amount of lemon peel is added to the batter. The batter is quite thick. Egg whites must be beaten in slowly and carefully to keep the batter firm and yet not cause the whites to collapse.

Apple Fritters, Lemon Sauce
Serves 4-6

1 1-2 cups all purpose flour
1 1-2 teaspoons double action baking powder
3-4 teaspoon salt
1-4 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
2-3 cup water
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1 cup diced, peeled and cored apples
Kettle of deep fat
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1-3 cup sugar
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons butter

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and 1-4 cup sugar

Separate egg yolks from whites. Beat yolks and water.

Mix liquid and dry ingredients. Add 2 tablespoons melted butter, lemon rind and apples. Do not overmix. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into batter. Drop batter by tablespoons into deep fat heated to 370 degrees. Fry fritters until brown on both sides.

Mix together the cornstarch and 1-3 cup sugar. Gradually add the boiling water. Simmer over a low flame until thick and clear. Remove from flame. Stir in lemon juice and 2 tablespoons butter.

Pour warm sauce into deep dishes. Put fritters on sauce.

Mrs. Clarence Martin favored with a musical number.

Hymn "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing" was explained by Mrs. Guy Leavens.

Refreshments were served at the hostess after the close of the meeting.

Taste the difference in a loaf of bread made with milk powder. It's rich and mellow . . . toasts evenly to a smooth, golden brown . . . stays fresh longer. Of course added milk solids mean more food value for you. More proteins, riboflavin, calcium and other essentials. That's why progressive bakers add at least 6% milk powder to their bread. For more flavour and nourishment, serve your family bread made with milk powder.

MANY DEMANDS

Hazen Argue (CCF-Assiniboia) urged the government to make an early start on the South Saskatchewan River irrigation project. Saskatchewan had agreed to pay $33,000,000 towards the cost of the project and there could be no reason for further delay. The federal government's share of $66,000,000 could be spread over a number of years without harming the defence effort.

Wants National Fuel Policy

F. D. Shaw (SC-Red Deer) called for inauguration of a national fuel policy to save the Alberta coal industry from collapse. He said the development of oil and gas in the province had placed the coal industry in a serious position. New markets and new uses for coal must be found.

Arthur Ross (PC-Souris) charged that western wheat producers through the International Wheat agreement, were subsidizing Canadian consumers to the extent of 36 cents a bushel. There should be provision for an annual adjustment to compensate the prairie farmers for the difference.

Leon Crestohl (L - Montreal Cartier) said an effective immigration policy is essential for the industrial, commercial and defensive future of Canada.

Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre) said all medical expenses should be deductible for income tax purposes. Under existing legislation the taxpayer can deduct only expenses in excess of four percent of his income.

Make Three Changes

The House earlier adopted a bill making three changes in the constitution of the Canadian Legion.

The bill, sponsored by David Croll (L-Toronto Spadina) at the request of the veterans' organization, will take from the Dominion executive the power to make by-laws. That power will be invested in the Dominion convention of the Legion.

The legislation will give provincial conventions the right to make by-laws and rules for provincial commands. A third change is aimed at preventing the unauthorized use of badges and other regalia of the Legion.

About a dozen members of the Commons paid tribute to work of the Legion before passage of the legislation, already adopted by the Senate.

Jean Francois Pouliot (L-Temiscaouata), who said he "is an honorary member of the Legion although he is not a veteran of either of the world wars, suggested that the official name of the organization should be changed from the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League to the Canadian Legion of the Commonwealth Service League.

He said the British Empire no longer exists since India and Pakistan have obtained self-government.

Frank Leonard (PC-Hamilton Wentworth) and George Cruickshank (L-Fraser Valley), veterans of the First World War and active members of the Legion, said they would oppose any change in the name.

In the opening stages, External Affairs Minister Pearson reported that a "broad measure of agreement" exists between Canada and the United States on the basic issues of a proposed Japanese peace treaty, now under negotiation.

Distributed Evenly

Defence Production Minister Howe said every effort is being made to see that available supplies of steel are distributed evenly.

Mr. Fleming criticized Mr. Abbott for what he termed a consistent practice of under-estimating budgetary surpluses and said this meant merely that he was taking from the people more money than he needed.

If he overshot his forecast surplus of $30,000,000 this year, said Mr. Fleming, the Finance Minister would have little excuse for his increase in commodity and sales taxes.

Mr. Argue argued that the end result of the tax hikes would be a further increase in the burden of those in the low income groups. The boost in the income tax should have been limited to single and married persons earning more than $1,500 and $3,000 respectively.

While individuals faced higher taxes, he held, the big corporations would be able to add the amount of their tax increases to the price of their products. This would mean higher prices and stepped-up inflation.

$20,000 FINE

Arthabaska, Que., April 18 — (CP) — J. Richard, widely-known dealer from Victoriaville, Monday was fined $20,000 and costs for defrauding the federal government of $94,455 in income taxes in 1947 and 1948. Richard pleaded guilty April 5. The Crown said he kept nine bank accounts at one time.

FAINT SIGNALS

Reports trickling back from the rescue ships said the second set of signals were heard "intermittently" around 3.30 a.m. Then they faded, became mysterious again.

A circle of ships ringed the area this morning. In the entire two sister submarines bobbed on the gentle swell.

Salvage Crew on Hand

The outer ring included small craft carrying doctors and nurses. Also waiting were salvage craft and pontoons capable of lifting the sunken sub to the surface.

It was sunny and mild, but easterly breezes raised a slight swell. The admiralty said conditions for a rescue operation were good.

An admiralty spokesman said rescue attempts had been delayed until daylight to make certain that any man coming up through the escape hatch would be spotted.

Submarines of the Affray class have three hatches with canvas escape chambers attached. Trapped men pass through the chambers and out the hatches, one at a time. They are equipped with portable breathing apparatus for the time necessary to reach the surface.

One submarine expert said the men aboard, if the vessel is not badly damaged, might be able to stay down without harm for 48 hours. The rescue fleet had found no sign—such as debris or floating oil—of any such damage.

THOUSANDS JOIN

But the crowds who greeted MacArthur last night left no doubt of their deep admiration of the hero-soldier, regardless of how they felt about his policies.

People began gathering three hours before MacArthur's shiny Constellation plane was due from Hawaii.

The ship landed at 8:29 p.m.

The cheers swelled into a roar as Mrs. MacArthur stepped from the plane. Then came the general, wearing his familiar gold-braided cap and a trench coat buttoned high around his neck. Behind him was their 13-year-old son, Arthur—wide-eyed and grinning.

Spectators, reporters and photographers surged forward and the welcome almost got out of hand. Flash bulbs popped and the general was caught in the glare of television lights. Artillery pieces boomed out a 17-gun salute.

Inspects Honor Guard

The general posed briefly for photographers, then walked slowly to inspect the honor guard.

Old friends grabbed his hands and shook them. Men and women patted him on the shoulders and surged around him. Others were rolling cheers from the mass of people hemmed in behind the fence. The general waved and smiled.

Mrs. MacArthur and son Arthur were trapped in the swirling throng. Mrs. MacArthur clung to a huge bouquet of roses, handed to her by a tiny South Korean girl, daughter of a South Korean government official.

"MacArthur for President" signs appeared over the bobbing heads. Youths waved flags reading "Hi Mac!"

MacArthur made his way to a battery of microphones, and said with deep emotion: "I can't tell you how good it is to be home . . . during these long, long, dreary years Mrs. MacArthur and I have talked and thought about it . . . this is marvelous hospitality and a reception that we will not forget."

Led Procession

They then climbed into a car to lead a procession of thousands of automobiles into the city, 15 miles away.

Barely creeping, the procession moved into San Francisco through hundreds of thousands of people. The general obviously enjoyed the spontaneous outburst.

Still another tumultuous welcome awaited at the St. Francis Hotel, where the party was to spend the night.

Another 10,000 persons were packed into Union Square in front of it. The lobby was jammed.

Tempers flared and several brawls broke out in the crowd. Police enlisted Marines, sailors and soldiers to form a cordon.

With difficulty, police cleared a path for MacArthur to walk the few feet from his car to the hotel door.

Need for Clean Clover Seed Emphasized

With the season for seeding rapidly approaching, the importance of farmers sowing only clover seeds which have been properly cleaned and graded is being emphasized by seed men and by officials of government agricultural departments.

To illustrate they cite a case where an Ontario farmer brought a sample of what he believed was pretty clean red clover to a seed dealer. The sample was analyzed and the farmer was astounded to find that it contained no less than 450 buckhorn or ribgrass seeds per ounce.

This is what is quite apt to happen when any farmer takes in weeds and sows some ungraded seed he has purchased over the fence from a neighbor. Such ungraded seed may be polluted with buckhorn, the seeds of this weed being about the same size as a clover seed and to the inexpert eye, hardly noticeable.

It is pointed out that the difference in price between clean graded seed and that which comes from the farm thresher is only a few cents per pound. Yet the risk of getting a poor crop and a polluted farm is almost unlimited.

As has been pointed out repeatedly the only absolute control the farmer has over his crop is the quality of seed he chooses.

In accepting the office, the president thanked the members for the honor, and stated that there is a great increase of interest in horticulture throughout the village at the present time and he felt that the society faced a year of great opportunity. Increase in membership, more profitable and interesting meetings, greater service to the community through projects of beautification and the revival of the annual flower show and supper, were some of the aims the society must work for.

Society Over 50 Years Old

Mr. J. B. Belshaw reminded the members that the society was over 50 years old and among other things had built the cement wall around the pond, commencing in 1931, which together with fill and plantings was part of a project to beautify the eastern approach to the village, still needing completion. The planting and distribution of several hundred trees, assisting the Red Cross to raise over $400 by flower shows and suppers during the war years, and the annual care of the cemetery bed, library boxes and Memorial Park, have all been part of the society's activities during the past years.

Mrs. Charles Vance gave a most interesting talk on flower arrangement, demonstrating with a bouquet of daffodils and pussy willows.

It was decided to have a canvass for membership immediately.

If you have a horticultural problem write to J. B. Belshaw, secretary, and these will be dealt with at the next meeting.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1951

Fighting in Korea Brings Red Cross New Responsibilities Says President Ont. Division

LABOR LEADER

P. J. Clarey, Labor member of the Australian Parliament, is mentioned as likely successor to party leader J. B. Chifley, whose health is poor. Mr. Clarey will defend his seat of Bendigo, Victoria, in the April 28 general election. The election was called when bills passed by the Liberal-Country Party coalition government in the House of Representatives were continually blocked by the Labor-dominated Senate. —(CP Photo.)

Toronto, April 18 (CP) —The fighting in Korea has brought the Canadian Red Cross Society new responsibilities, L. G. Mills, president of the organization's Ontario division, said today.

In an address prepared for delivery at the division's 31st annual meeting, Mr. Mills said that "until the cease-fire sounds," there will be "increased responsibilities" for every branch of the division.

"The tradition of the Red Cross is to assist men of the armed services in peace or in war," he said. ". . and the department of national defence has asked the Canadian Red Cross Society to be responsible for the supply of whole blood and plasma to the armed forces and to stockpile plasma for civil defence purposes."

One of the most important Red Cross functions in Ontario is its chain of 29 outpost hospitals, said R. E. Gras of Toronto, chairman of the outpost hospitals committee. He announced the opening of a new replacement hospital centre at Atikokan and construction of an outpost hospital at Rainy River.

Four of the larger hospitals, at Dryden, New Liskeard, Wiarton and Huntsville, will be turned over to their own municipalities at the end of 1951, Mr. Gras said this was in line with the Red Cross policy of transferring the larger hospitals to local administration.

Reports also were heard on volunteer nursing services and junior Red Cross activities.

C. B. Routley of Toronto, reported the junior group has 372,536 members who last year contributed $35,413.86 for crippled children's work.

1,096 Members Added

Florence Emory of Toronto said 1,096 members were added to the volunteer nursing services in the last year. A total of 2,068 completed their class training in home nursing only.

Reporting on the welfare committee, Hamilton Cassels, Toronto, outlined the activities in this branch which among other things helps to obtain eye-glasses, dentures, artificial limbs, for needy persons.

Mrs. J. E. Lawson, also of Toronto, outlined the work of the nutrition and home-making service. More than 2,680 families last year were assisted by Red Cross members who helped in the homes when sickness struck.

The chairman of the women's work committee, Mrs. Edward Coleman of Toronto, reported 46,504 articles of clothing shipped to Britain and Europe.

Supplies also were sent to refugees from the Winnipeg flood and the Cabano and Rimouski fires.

FOUR MORE TURN UP

Peterborough, April 18. (CP)—Four more counterfeit $10 bills turned up here Tuesday to add to the two that were discovered last week. This brings to 14 the number of bogus bills found in the district since Friday. Six have turned up in this city, five in Lindsay, two in Bewdley and one in Bailieboro.

Three men were arrested by Provincial Police last Wednesday night and charged with being in possession of counterfeit bills. They will appear in police court in Cobourg Wednesday.

Flooding Waters Of Ottawa River Continue to Rise

Ottawa, April 18 (CP) — The levels of flooding waters of the Ottawa River Valley continued early today to inch higher and higher— river men called them higher than anytime since 1909— but the main pressure appeared to have shifted down river from the capital.

At Rockland, 25 miles east of here, more than 50 persons had to leave living quarters, chased out of the turgid Ottawa River. Three feet of water covered the highway east of town.

At Hawkesbury, Ont., 50 miles east of Ottawa, the river invaded the low-lying section of the town and washed over the bridge leading to the town's pumphouse on an island in the stream. A hand-ber mill was shut down.

The swollen Ottawa at Hawkesbury also prevented the recovery of the body of Omer Duscheneau, 41. He was buried into the frothing stream after being struck by a CNR locomotive while he was working on a railway bridge.

The flooding Ottawa also still held the bodies of three men from Vinton, Que., who were drowned Monday night when the surging current swamped their boat 60 miles northwest of Ottawa.

May Use Pump

A huge pump, capable of pumping 15,000,000 gallons in a day, which Ottawa had—and didn't use—for 22 years until it was sent to Winnipeg last year to help beat the rampaging Red River, may be put into use this week. It is to be put to use in the Ottawa suburb of Bellows, which has been flooded by waters backing up through railway culverts.

The situation was little changed in other sectors.

At Quyon, Que., 30 miles west of here a slight rise in the river was reported but no more damage. A number of streets previously were under water.

FEAR FOR LIVES OF 75 MEN ABOARD U.K. SUBMARINE

Destroyers, motor torpedo boats, helicopters and planes are searching the ocean south of Britain for survivors of the British submarine Affray, missing with 75 men aboard. Though the sub is equipped with snorkel breathing apparatus which would allow her to remain submerged for weeks, she was engaged in a test dive when last heard from and was due to surface in 11 hours. Shown here is the Acheron, sister ship of the Affray. — Central Press Canadian.

Farmers Rush To Sow Fields After Wet Winter

London, April 18 (CP) — A warm, forgotten sun shone on Britain this week, and farmers raced against time to try to make up for the wettest winter in memory.

With about two weeks left to plow the land and sow spring cereal crops, farmers in some hard-hit districts prepared to work night and day on their sodden fields.

But even if the present good weather holds, for what is known as agricultural "artists fortnight" experts expect that the wet winter—with the wet days out of 90 in some sections—will cost Britain about 500,000 acres of wheat.

If the missing wheat has to be obtained from North America, it will mean a payment of up to £15,000,000 ($43,250,000).

Sir James Scott Watson, adviser to the Agriculture Ministry, said during the weekend he expects wheat may be down at least 500,000 acres from the target of 2,500,000 acres.

So far it appears that spring wheat sowing will be the lowest on record.

"It now seems almost inevitable," one British agricultural correspondent wrote, "that we cannot escape some loss of food and money through this year's unprecedented weather."

L. F. Easterbrook, writing in the News Chronicle, said the lesson for Britain is that she has become dependent on her home harvest to a degree unknown for nearly a century.

Now, he said, "we cannot just buy food from somewhere else" if unable to produce it at home.

The correspondent said there are still hundreds of thousands of acres which could be used for food production. The only reason they are lying idle is "because we have lost the habit of using them in the days of unlimited imports."

ACCORDION STAR FOUND

Los Angeles, April 18 (AP) — The Mirror said Tuesday it has located missing accordion star Dick Contino in Los Angeles area sanitorium in a highly-emotional state."

The paper did not disclose the location of the sanatorium but added that Contino is suffering from "an illness bordering on neurosis."

Contino, 20, disappeared from Fort Ord, Calif., last Friday, shortly before he was to be inducted into the army. No action has yet been taken in the case by the army or his Burbank, Calif., draft board.

Where the Affray is believed to have sunk.

Peron Orders Taking Over Of Newspaper

Buenos Aires, April 18—(AP)—President Juan D. Peron today signed a law ordering the government to take over the independent newspaper La Prensa.

The president's action ends the independent career of the 82-year-old opposition paper, which, before it was closed by strikes of pro-government unions and federal court action, has been a consistent critic of Peron's regime.

The signature apparently dimmed one of the paper's last hopes —an appeal to the Argentine congress that the properties be returned to the owners. This demand, filed Monday by the paper's counsel, was based on the fact that the president at the time had not yet signed the bill passed by congress last week ordering the paper's seizure.

WILL GAS STARLINGS

Buffalo, N. Y., April 18—(AP)—Buffalo plans to kill thousands of starlings in one fell swoop. The death-house will be an old brick boiler room, a refuge for starlings which are a nuisance in nearby Central Park. When the birds return to the boiler house Thursday night, the sanitary squad will gas them with carbon monoxide.

General Petain Reported Dying In French Prison

La Rochelle, France, April 18—(Reuters)—Philippe Petain, former hero of France condemned to finish his life prisoner for wartime collaboration, is dying, a source at his fortress prison said today.

A telephone call to the mainland from the French Atlantic coast Ile D'Yeu said the former marshall, who will be 95 Tuesday was in a coma. He has been suffering from congestion of the lungs since last week.

Petain's condition became critical overnight following a relapse. A secretary of Georges Isorni, Petain's principal lawyer, planned to leave for the island, where the victor of Verdun has been interned for treason since 1945.

Police Chief Accuses Mayor Of Interference

Orillia, April 18 (CP) —Police Chief W. G. Carson Tuesday accused Mayor Wilbur Cramp of interfering with two constables who were questioning a man about having liquor in a taxi.

The chief's typewritten statement, released to the press, said the mayor swore at Constable Murray Robinson and grabbed him by the tunic during an altercation in the police office.

Mayor Cramp commented:

"The Liquor Control Act today is long outmoded and 100-percent enforcement is impractical. I see no reason why so much emphasis should be placed on one aspect of law enforcement when we cannot get the police to enforce local by-laws."

Top Military Officer Supports MacArthur's View

Tokyo, April 18. (AP)— The top Commonwealth military officer in Japan has voiced support of Gen. MacArthur's proposal to bomb red Chinese bases in Manchuria.

Lt.-Gen. Sir H. C. H. Robertson, administrative commander of Commonwealth forces in Korea, last week told a confidential conference of Commonwealth reporters that MacArthur's proposal offered the best hope of forcing Chinese reds out of the war and preventing a costly stalemate. He said the only alternative would be to send a tremendous land army—larger than anyone has contemplated— into Korea.

The Australian general is the first important Commonwealth officer to speak in favor of bombing Manchuria. The British Foreign Office and Commonwealth governments have strongly opposed MacArthur's program for fear it would spread the war.

A man who attended the conference said Robertson expressed his off-the-record view April 10 —the day before President Truman dismissed MacArthur.

It was presumed that Robertson, like MacArthur, had spoken without consulting his government.

Robertson said failure to act will result in a disastrous stalemate. He saw little hope of maintaining an Allied defence line along the 38th parallel, and even less of holding positions farther into red Korea.

Robertson left the impression that serious consequences face United Nations forces if Manchurian bases are permitted to operate freely as the supply funnel into Korea.

FRANKFORD

Car Hits Dog $100 Damage Caused to Car

Frankford—There is an old saying that accidents don't just happen, but are caused. Carl Lohnes has lost faith in this saying after a freak mishap Saturday afternoon. Carl and his wife and Mr. Gerald Turley were driving to Trenton and as they passed Mr. John Parker's farm, a large collie dog ran after a truck which passed them. The dog did not see the Lohnes car at first and ran in front of it. Just at the time the car struck the dog, the dog jumped and hit the top of the radiator, causing an estimated $100 damage. The impact drove the radiator back onto the fan, and caved in the upper part of the grill. It seems hard to believe that a dog could hit a car with such an impact for the car was travelling at less than thirty m.p.h. The dog? He suffered a broken leg, but otherwise is as good as ever.

FIRST OF ITS KIND

A miniature atomic explosion set off within the brain of a woman suffering from a tumor, was controlled by scientists of the Brookhaven, N.Y., National Laboratory, in a scene shown by the drawing above. After an injection of boron, the woman, on a block or concrete, was lowered into a sunken room walled and floored with lead. Doctors at a safe distance watched in a tilted mirror as they bombarded the patient's brain with neutrons when the boron reached the brain tumor, a short time later she was cleared and after a week was out on the hospital's sun porch. The doctors, however, say that full results may not be known definitely for a long time, possibly years. — Central Press Canadian.

Toronto Leafs Defeat Montreal Habs 2-1 to Lead Series

Kennedy Scores Winning Goal In Four Minutes of Overtime To put Leafs one Game Ahead

Montreal, April 18—(CP)—A brilliant overtime goal by centre Ted Kennedy last night gave Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens and shot the Leafs back into the commanding position in the Stanley Cup hockey final.

Kennedy's goal dramatically broke up the third game of the best-of-seven series and put his team in the lead 2-1 on games.

It was the first game of the series played on Montreal ice. The teams divided the last two games last week in Toronto.

Canadiens once more take over the underdog position, and must win Thursday's game to keep up with hustling Leafs.

It was the third overtime game by the closely-matched teams. Maurice (Rocket) Richard, ace goal getter of Canadiens, sent his team in front in the first period and Sid Smith tied it up for the Leafs in the second.

Canadiens thrilled the 14,433 home-town fans early in the overtime when Richard and Ken Mosdell came within a whisker of scoring.

Then at 4:47 of the extra session the Leafs struck swiftly and wrapped up the game. Smith intercepted a pass from Montreal's Calum Mackay inside the Canadien blue line and snapped a short pass to Kennedy. The Toronto captain, one of the Leafs' outstanding players in the series, took a couple of strides and let drive from just outside the face-off circle on goalie Gerry McNeil's left. The puck, travelling no more than two feet above the ice, caught the net with a swish.

The game was one of wide-open play, close checking and stellar netminding. Both teams lost chances to settle the outcome without necessity of overtime.

Leafs outshot Canadiens 30-24, and the penalties, which played a part in the first two goals, were evenly divided. Canadiens were handed four minors by referee Bill Chadwick and Leafs three, plus a 10-minute misconduct to Howie Meeker for too much backtalk.

Rollins in Goal

The advantage of the bitterly-fought match shifted first one way and then the other.

Canadiens started out well, but Al Rollins, who took over the Leafs' goaltending job from veteran Turk Broda, was at his best and the Montrealers helped to thwart their own efforts by gumming up plays when in scoring position. Mackey missed one of their greatest chances when he skated in alone on Rollins and fired dead into the goalie's pads.

The Leafs were short-handed in the opening period when Richard scored. It was the 62nd scoring point in Stanley Cup playoffs, tying the record held by Toe Blake, a former Canadien.

Captain "Teeder" Kennedy piloted his Toronto Maple Leafs to victory last night scoring the winning goal in the third overtime game of the Stanley Cup series against Canadiens.

The Leafs came back in the second period and, aided by Montreal penalties, controlled play practically throughout. They outshot Canadiens 13-4, and only in the final minutes of the period were Canadiens able to get within striking distance of Rollins.

Montreal defenceman Doug Harvey was serving a penalty when Smith took Max Bentley's short pass near the blue line and whipped home the tying goal. Smith fired from near the left boards, the puck whistled into the short side of the net.

Canadiens put up an argument claiming Bentley was back of the blue line when Smith took the pass and that the goal was offside. The protest got nowhere but the fans contributed a few offerings to the ice. A pack of cards flew out and Canadiens' centre Elmer Lach gathered them up and dumped them into the lap of Conn Smythe, Leaf general manager, sitting in a rail seat. Smythe stood and doffed his light grey hat.

Barrie Flyers Two Games Up On Quebec Cits

Barrie, Ont., April 18 (CP) — Barrie's aggressive close-checking Flyers hold a two-game edge over Quebec Citadelles in their quest for the Eastern Canada junior hockey crown and the right to meet the west in the Memorial Cup finals.

Flyers, given little chance against the highly-touted Quebec youngsters at the start of the series, last night chalked up their second straight victory before more than 4,000 home-town fans, whipping Citadelles 6-4. Barrie won the opening game of the best-of-seven series 6-2 Saturday.

With the series shifting to Quebec for games Thursday and Saturday, Coach Hap Emms of Barrie said: "I'm just keeping my fingers crossed and hoping for the best."

Emms predicted Citadelles — "a good club"—would be tough to beat on their home ice, but added:

"If my boys play as they played tonight we'll make it rough for Citadelles. I think we can check them and manage to score goals too."

Citadelles, who took their second straight loss hard, dressed quickly and headed for home without making any predictions on the outcome of the series.

More To Liking

Citadelles, who appeared to find the smaller Barrie ice surface more to their liking than Maple Leaf Gardens' big sheet, battled the Flyers on even terms in the first and third periods, but fell apart in the middle session when Flyers outscored them 3-1.

Doug Towers and Leo Labine sparked Flyers with two goals each, while Jerry Toppazzini and Real Chevrefils added singletons.

Jean Belliveau, high-scoring ace from Victoriaville, Que., was a constant threat for the losers, scoring one goal and assisting on another. Bernie Guay, Camille Henri and Copper Leyte tallied the other Citadelles markers.

The fast-stepping Flyers used the same close-checking tactics they employed so successfully in the opening game to defeat the heavier, but slower Quebec sextet. They kept a close check of Belliveau throughout and broke up Citadelle attacks before they could get organized.

Monarchs Even Series With Pats By 2-1 Victory

Regina, April 17 — (CP) Winnipeg Monarchs last night staved off the driving Regina Pats for a 2-1 decision that tied the Western Canada junior hockey finals at one game apiece. One contest was tied.

The speedy Monarchs nursed the 2-1 lead through the third period in the third game of the best-of-seven series against wave after wave of Regina drives.

The next game is scheduled for Winnipeg Thursday where the series will finish.

Laurie Mitchell scored in the first period for Monarchs and Dave Trainor netted the winner in the second against Regina's lone counter by Eddie Litzenberger.

ASKS FOR SUPPORT

St. Thomas, April 17 — (CP)— City council Monday night instructed city solicitor W. Scott McKay to prepare resolutions for submission to the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves and to the Ontario Municipal Association asking support of a move to have the federal government assume all costs of civil defence.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By. GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Way back around the roaring twenties, the name of Belleville was synonymous with the best baseball in Ontario. "Them were the days" when the Central Ontario Baseball League composed of teams from this city, Kingston, Peterborough and Oshawa, rated on a par with the Intercounty League of Western Ontario of more recent date.

Provincial championships came 'more than often' to teams of the COBL. In those golden glowing days when the Williams, the Daintys, the Tysons, the Heckmans, the Dalys and others carried the baseball banners of Eastern Ontario to the wars, we had "baseball as was baseball."

But later dark days befell the COBL. It gradually slid down the skids until three to four years ago when baseball men from this city, Oshawa, Kingston and Peterborough, former hotbeds of COBL baseball, attempted to resurrect the loop from what appeared to be a permanent grave.

They met with a certain degree of success. But all was not well it seemed, and Oshawa and Peterborough withdrew to cast in their lots with the Toronto Viaduct League.

Teams from Batawa, Napanee, Picton, Kingston, Brockville and Smiths Falls, carrying on under more or less difficulties, met with varying degrees of success last year. And in case you have not noticed it, this city has not been represented in the COBL since its resurrection, nor in fact since the middle thirties.

This year a group of courageous baseball enthusiasts of the city decided it was time Belleville got back into the baseball swim, or at least the COBL pond. (This, with no reflection on the fine group that took the intermediate Cubs through a tough season last year).

They decided to form what is now known as the Belleville Baseball Association, an organization which is not confined to senior activities alone, but baseball for everybody down to the "peewees". In fact a strong minor division of the association has organized and is meeting with what could be termed "sensational" success in its efforts to provide baseball for the young players of the city.

The strength of any organization lies in that of its executive. We believe, that this year, Belleville baseball is represented by a sturdy group of citizens, who are willing to give of their time and efforts to put their city back on the baseball map and try to retrieve some of its lost glory. Headed by President Jack Carson and secretary Roy Robinson, the executive consists of Malcolm Robb, Orliff Lloyd, Jack McNab, W. H. Lockyer, Frank Grandame, Charles Mott, Claude D. Tice, Fred Rawson, Paul Haggas, Treasurer Drury Denyes, with the minor division committee consisting of Messrs. Grandame, Lockyer, Walter Bent and secretary Vic Picknell.

The first step in the organization of any athletic team or association is finances. A tough one, in these days of rising prices. But an optimistic executive is confident that its city is ready for senior baseball and if given the right calibre will give it all out support. It feels there are enough baseball - minded people in the city who are willing to give their financial support to a project that will bring them a baseball team worthy of the old days.

After studying costs and striking estimates, the executive at a special finance meeting, found that at least $3,000 will be needed to get matters under way. Equipment must be secured. Transportation taken into consideration. There will be player costs. And other minor expenses that add up.

With this in mind, it was decided to form what is known as the "Belleville Baseball Century Club". This will be composed of those who are willing to contribute $100 or more to the association fund. Remember this fund is not for senior baseball alone. It will finance baseball as a whole from the "big fellows" to the peewees. It was felt that a number of citizens would be willing to donate this amount to aid a project that will help Belleville reach her rightful place in the baseball sun. And every cent will be expended toward that end.

A special names committee was appointed and within the next few days will start a systematic canvass of the city. Of course, smaller donations will be welcomed, in fact anything from a dime to a thousand and will be gratefully received.

The last two or three years, Belleville had the reputation of being the only city between Toronto and Montreal which did not boast a senior baseball club. A fine state of affairs for a town that in the 20s boasted provincial champions. Never let that be said again.

And it is up to the baseball- and civic-minded people of the city to support the move. That they will support a high class senior team in any form of athletics, was evidenced last winter in the senior 'B' hockey group.

So dig down and help dig up a baseball team that will be worthy of the diamond traditions of a city that on more than one occasion paid tribute to her sons as senior provincial champions.

"THAT AINT HAY, BROTHER!"

And speaking of baseball costs, the Intercounty League of Western Ontario has found the game a very expensive pastime. In fact the Stratford Nationals have already tossed in the towel, as they estimate it would cost at least $25,000 to operate, which would necessitate not only a guarantee of 1,200 fans at each game but a starting fund of $10,000. Every club in the loop lost last year anywhere from $3,000 to $9,000, the players' payroll running around $20,000. These facts, plus the gloomy picture painted by the Intercounty League and the OBA at the latter's convention a short time ago, would indicate that the erstwhile wealthy western loop is on the financial skids.

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

Saskatoon Coach Seeking to Dent Monarchs' Armor

Toronto, April 18 (CP) — As coach Riley Mullen sees it, the big obstacle to his Saskatoon Quakers tonight will be Phil Hughes in the net for Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs.

Quakers go into the third game of their best-of-seven Alexander Cup semi-final trailing Monarchs 2-0. Toronto won the series opener 8-5 and took the second 4-1.

Coach Mullen says his team completely outplayed Monarchs in the second game, but just couldn't get the puck past Hughes. To back up his remark is the fact Quakers outshot Toronto 48-20, and only one got past their goalie.

So if the westerners can discover the password tonight that will let them past the lanky boy from Port Arthur who graduated to Monarchs from North Bay Black Hawks, Mullen figures they'll do all right against the Toronto team.

A look at Hughes' record in the Ontario Hockey Association's regular schedule reveals why Mullen holds so much respect for his prowess.

In 32 games, he let in only 103 goals for an average of 3.21—best in the league. His ability to hold Monarchs together when they threaten to fall apart, as they did several times during the season, is another valuable asset.

Monarchs say Quakers' winger George Senick is the fastest man they've opposed all year. Along with Bobby Weist, former Toronto Marlboros junior, he paced Saskatoon scorers in the round-robin Western Canada Major League final.

Incidentally, the westerners have been extended the privileges of a local golf course. Looks like Riley Mullen didn't bring his golf clubs along for nothing.

APPEALS TO MOTORISTS

Toronto, April 18 (CP) With the tourist season and its crowded highways just ahead, Highways Minister Doucett Monday night appealed to motorists to observe safety precautions and help build a safety record during the summer.

"To the drivers who will not listen to the dictates of care, courtesy and common sense, I suggest they consider the possibility of death, injury, property damage and the resulting fines, imprisonment and loss of the right to use the highways," he said.

His talk was prepared for delivery over a CBC Ontario network in the free-time "provincial affairs" series.

Will 1951 See Red Sox Left At Altar Again? Same Old Story As Yankees Down Boston

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Is this going to be another bridesmaid year for Boston's perennial bet-on-them-and Red Sox?

Vic Raschi's 5-0 handcuffing of the Red Sox sluggers for New York Yankees yesterday smacks too much of "the same old Red Sox" of the last four years.

Watching Boston being throttled with six singles made it almost impossible to visualize them as the same pulverizing team that was picked by most of the experts this year to win the American League pennant.

Cold weather held the inaugural crowds to a disappointing 171,678 fans at the eight parks. Last year the eight openers drew 283,700 fans.

Philadelphia's defending champion Phils downed Brooklyn Dodgers 5-3 at Ebbets Field. Robin Roberts, whose final-day triumph over the Brooks last year gave the Phils the pennant flag in 10 years, again thwarted the Dodgers.

Bob Lemon, king of the 1950 pitchers, threw a two-hitter to pitch Cleveland Indians to a 2-1 triumph over Detroit.

Murray Dickson pitched and batted the Pirates to a 5-4 victory over St. Louis Cardinals. The little righthander walloped his first major-league home run and contributed a single to achieve his ninth victory in two seasons plus over his former mates.

Chicago Cubs shelled Ken Raffensberger, their old tormentor, off the mound in three innings to whip Cincinnati Reds 8-3. Don Fowley, a rookie first-baseman, drove in four runs with a triple and two singles. Andy Pafko chipped in with a homer, triple and single.

Jensen Steals Show

The biggest crowd of the day—44,630 Yankee Stadium fans—saw Jackie Jensen steal the show from Mickey Mantle, the publicized a rookie flash. Jensen, former Californis football star, smashed a two-run homer to account for the first two runs.

A crowd of 43,670 watched a splendid pitching duel between Lemon and Hal Newhouser in Detroit. Tied at 1-1 after eight innings, the tribe won in the ninth inning when Tiger shortstop Johnny Lipon bobbled Jim Hegan's grounder. Larry Doby, who had doubled and moved to third on a sacrifice, scored the winning run.

The White Sox accumulated 19 hits and received 14 bases on balls from loser Ed Garvert and four successors in their 17-3 victory. Al Zarilla and Gus Zernial drove in four runs apiece. Nelson Fox, Chicago—second-baseman, tied a major-league record with two doubles in a seven-run eighth inning.

Dick Sisler, Del Ennis and Mike Goliat led the Phil's nine-hit attack to win Brooklyn's opener as fore 19,317 fans. Sisler hit two singles and scored twice. Ennis batted in the runs with a homer and single. Goliat socked a four-bagger in the second inning. Carl Erskine was the loser.

Only 6,081 saw Larry Jansen shut out the Braves 4-0 with five hits to gain his first victory for New York's Giants in four opening day attempts. The righthander outpitched Vern Bickford. Bobby Thomson drove in two runs with a single and a long fly.

Washington Senators defeated Philadelphia Athletics 7-4 in the first night opener in American League history. Little Con Marerro tamed Connie's on seven hits. Mickey Grasso wrapped up the decision with a three-run homer off Bob Shantz in the second inning.

Smythe Denies Rumors Primeau Will Resign

Montreal, April 18—(CP)—"I hear coach Dick Irvin has resigned," laughed general manager Conny Smythe to reporters last night after his Toronto Maple Leafs edged Montreal Canadiens 3-2 in overtime in the third game of the Stanley Cup final series.

The Toronto boss denied rumors that coach Joe Primeau of Leafs tendered his resignation shortly before the game started.

"First I've heard of it," said Smythe.

"But I did hear that Irvin has resigned and will leave Canadiens at the end of the series."

Howard Lovell, veteran news man that "I can still win a popularity contest in Montreal."

During the first period a fan tossed a pack of cards on the ice. Montreal's Elmer Lach picked them up. Then skated over to the Toronto bench and dumped them into the lap of the Toronto general manager, Smythe got to his feet, bowed toward Lach and then doffed his fedora to the jeers of the capacity crowd.

Coach Joe Primeau was none too optimistic after the win.

"This is going to be a series of breaks," he predicted. He agreed with Smythe that the series will go seven games and of the team that gets the breaks.

Ted Kennedy was modest about his overtime goal.

"The real credit goes to Rollins (goalie Al Rollins)," he said as he patted the tall netminder on the back.

Across the rink in the Montreal room, Montreal Canadiens were a picture of gloom.

In one corner, big Bill Durnan, former Canadiens' netminder, offered words of encouragement to little goalie Jerry McNeil.

"It was a tough game to lose, kid," he said. "It's not your fault. You played a swell game."

Maurice (Rocket) Richard, who scored Montreal's lone goal, was dejected.

"Gosh," he said, "I threw away

Baseball's Most Famous Scorecard Missing as Mack Becomes Spectator

Philadelphia, April 18—(AP)—The most-famous scorecard in baseball has been retired along with its owner.

Of course you've guessed we mean none other than Connie Mack without his storied scorecard.

The 88-year-old Mack, wrapped in a heavy overcoat and thick muffler sat in 40-degree chill last night watching his beloved Philadelphia Athletics lose their 1951 opener to the Washington Senators 6 to 7.

It was the first time in 51 years that Connie himself was not managing the A's. The man whose name is synonymous with baseball huddled in a box three rows back of the team's dugout. On the field, one of Connie's prize proteges, Jimmy Dykes did the managerminding.

You might think that deep down Connie would take it a bit hard, that merely being a fan could not hold a candle to being skipper. But he's honestly happy about it. He's a man with a big load off his shoulders, a man who can relax.

Before the game started, Mack was squired onto the field to receive a bronze bust of himself presented by the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. Hat in hand, the cold wind ruffling through his wisping hair, he posed for pictures after pictures.

Had to Borrow Card

Gone for good is the scorecard that waxed into play such baseball greats as Eddie Collins, Al Simons, Ty Cobb, Bing Miller, Jimmy Foxx, Jack Barry and Frank (Home Run) Baker.

In truth, Connie had to borrow a card from a neighbor so that he would have one to wave for the camera shots.

Why has he decided not to use a scorecard? He simply grinned shrugged and waged his head. He's keeping his reasons to himself. But one can't help thinking that perhaps he was a little worried over so long a habit, that it would be so easy for him, in the game's excitements, to forget his new role and start waving men into action.

Despite the A's defeat, Connie felt fine.

So would any man who took home a plaque, signed by one million baseball fans the country over, inscribed: "You will live in our hearts forever."

Canada, England Will Meet in Two Cricket Matches

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada and England will meet in two cricket matches this summer, it was announced Tuesday night.

The Canadian Cricket Association, announcing the schedule for the Canadian tour of the famed Marylebone Cricket Club, said the first test match will be held at Calgary Sept. 3 and 4 and the second at Toronto Sept. 8 and 9.

All-star Canadian teams will meet the visitors in the two matches.

The schedule calls for the visitors to play at St. Catharines, Aug. 9 against a Hamilton and district team, and London, Aug. 10 against a Southern Ontario All-star team Toronto Aug. 11.

Cold weather cut sharply into the opening - day attendance at seven major - league parks Tuesday. Only 171,678 fans paid their way into the seven day games and one night game. Last year 283,700 fans turned out for eight openers.

The Cambridge (England) University crew Tuesday night drew lane No. 2 for its International Regatta Thursday against Harvard, Boston university and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The fourth, considered to have psychological advantage, was drawn by M. I. T. Boston University drew lane No. 1 and Harvard the third lane.

World Amateur Champs Arrive In Quebec Port

Quebec, April 18 — (CP) — Lethbridge Maple Leafs hockey team, world amateur champions, arrived here Tuesday from Liverpool aboard the Canadian Pacific Empress of France.

Maple Leafs won 49 of 56 games played in Europe before a total of 400,000 persons. The games included a tour of European countries, the world hockey championship tournament and a Canada - Britain series for the Churchill Cup which Lethbridge won.

The team, holders of the world hockey championship cup in addition to the Winston Churchill trophy, will fly home today from Montreal. Lethbridge has declared a civic holiday in their honor and will tender them a reception.

In Paris, the club played against Sweden before 17,000 fans who were pretty well divided in their cheering.

Great cold reporters who boarded the vessel at Father Point on the Gaspe coast, that the hospitality shown the club during the four months tour was perfect, and the sportsmanship tops.

Cleveland Barons Need One Game To Win Title

Pittsburgh, April 18 — (AP) —Cleveland Barons needed only one more victory today to clinch their first American Hockey League title.

The Barons took a 3-2 lead in the Calder Cup seven-game playoff series last night with a 3-1 win over the Pittsburgh Hornets.

One AHL playoff mark fell by the wayside and another was tied in the clash witnessed by 5,109 fans.

Wally Hergesheimer of the Barons set a scoring record in the Calder Cup competition with his 11th playoff goal in the second period.

Hergesheimer's tally bettered the mark of 10 set by Clevelanders' Tom Burlington in 1945 and Tod Sloan in 1950.

Andy Bathe's marker for the Hornets in the second stanza tied the playoff record of 50 goals made by one team. Buffalo established the mark in the 1946 playoffs.

Joe Lund and Ray Ceresino scored the other markers for the Clevelanders. Ceresino's came unassisted late in the second period.

Defender or offender?

Both! Although the skunk never uses his offensive weapon except in defence of himself or his young.

This handsome, friendly little animal is a fine fur-bearer.

The skunk loves garbage heaps, and once in a while he visits a poultry house for one of his favourite delicacies—an egg. But usually he's inoffensive —yours to protect!

WHERE DOES THE MONEY GO ?

At times most of us have looked at purse, wallet or bank-book, and wondered: "Where does the money go?"

You may have wondered, too, where does our money go—the money we receive for gasoline, fuel oil, lubricants and other products we sell. Well, last year each dollar we received went this way:

CRUDE OIL and the other raw materials we bought took half of each dollar.

OPERATING AND ADMINISTRATIVE expenses took more than 25 cents. This was the cost of searching for and producing crude oil, and of manufacturing and marketing the hundreds of products we supplied for thousands of uses. Throughout the year high quality products were made available where and when you needed them.

TRANSPORTATION of products from our refineries to marketing points took the next big bite of the dollar. Products moved over wide areas to serve every community in Canada.

TAXES to provincial and federal governments took 7.64 cents. And this did not include gasoline tax, which—depending on where you live—took from 22 to 33 cents out of every dollar you spent for standard grade gasoline.

TO REPLACE worn out equipment and to make sure that we can supply your needs in the future took 3.59 cents.

DIVIDENDS paid to shareholders for use of plants and equipment amounted to 3.45 cents.

Hollywood—April 18—(AP)—Dick Powell today gave the backhand cur why he, his wife, June Allyson, and 30 others are forming an agency for the adoption of children.

"This is not a Hollywood organization," the actor explained. "It's a matter of fact, June and I are the only ones in it from the picture business. Most of the others are doctors, lawyers and people from ordinary walks of life.

"The organization grew out of another group we belong to—the Adopted Children's Association. That's a group of parents of adopted children. They meet informally and also have done a great deal of good in improving California's adoption laws.

"Some of us felt there was a great need for another agency to take care of the tremendous demand for adopted children. So we started drawing up the organization."

Bride Welcomes Group

The actor, completing plans for the group while working in "One Love Knows," said the bulk of welcomes such agencies.

"There aren't enough of them," he said. "Too many adoptions are done privately, through doctors and lawyers. A lot of those are not successful, because there is no attempt to fit the child to the new parents."

Powell expects the organization to be licensed in a week or so. It will be called the Adoption Home of California and will be non-religious and non-profit—"in fact, it will cost us."

NEWS OF THE AIR

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

by SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Necessity is the mother of conventions in bridge. There are not enough natural bids to describe all the hands. So, artificial bids are invented to act as signals for unusual cases.

An unusual occasion is when you have a game in your own hand and an opponent has already opened the bidding. Your problem is to let partner know it in time to get information from him.

You could hop to a game at once, of course. But you may not pick out the best suit for your pair. Or find out if partner has a suit that would be better. Or learn if your pair has a slam.

Better is to make some low bid as a signal. But what low bid could be spared for such purposes? It must be a bid that is lazy; a bid that you seldom have an excuse for using naturally.

Follow this line of reasoning and you will see how a signal is born. Usually by a process of elimination is a convention discovered or detected. Usually by finding the most practical method.

In this manner are found several bids that could be used for the purpose. Which is the one that is acceptable? The one that has more advantages than disadvantages.

If an opponent says he has a biddable suit, seldom will you want that suit as your trump. So an immediate bid in opponent suit has become a standard signal for showing a game hand.

♠ None
♥ A K Q 7
♦ K Q 7 4
♣ A 6 4 3 2

South made an opening bid of one spade. Your immediate bid is two spades. It is your signal for telling partner you have a game in something. Not in spades, in some suit other than spades.

So, partner would be foolish to let you play it in spades. Even with a bust hand he must bid to keep you from being in a spade maker, or he will grow up to be a mule.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Thursday, April 19, 1951.

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Brace yourself for some unfriendly influences, certain personal obstacles, especially like by a.m. We all have them, the wise one takes them in stride, calmly for best solutions.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Reverse of Aries today. You can advance most in chosen field, but can improve work methods, make gains in business, personal affairs. You will have to do your part throughout.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Uncertain are some possibilities check and double check each task, problem. Use your resources and talents astutely, be patient and sincere—always. Seek advice from wise heads.

June 22 to July 23—(Cancer) The new and unique can lead astray if you don't differentiate well. Hold to some routine, where possible. Study projects, ideas thoroughly. Some restraining tendencies; be consistent.

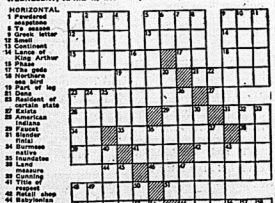
July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Your chart indicates "caution" in all important issues, especially financial. More friendly rays around 8 p. m. for personal affairs, particularly research engaged.

August 23 to September 22—(Virgo)—Better take it sensibly, slowly in money, business undertakings. Devote some time to plans, checking schedule (is it covering necessary matters?) Don't invite more than you can handle.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Refreshing outlook. Favorable for military manoeuvres, investments, transportation, travel, within reason. Making contacts, literary biz, professional activities have advantages.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Watch your leanings associations, are they good for your future well being. May have to inject some extra push to tackle the hard ones today; if you do, the others will come easier.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—No extremes or fussing, friend, so that you may have clear vision and sound judgment to cope with problems and work. Be amenable, co-operative and save unexpected help.



December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Your saturn only planet in benefic aspect today. With proper use and system you can carry on the gains trades, industry and other useful undertakings. But no time-wasting.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—A wide-awake you can do better than good today. Obstacles can be eliminated by hard thinking, but tact, sincere work stresses. Care in maritime interests, with chemicals, travel.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—You have patience but must use more grit. Go to meet obstacles to conquer quickly. Accuracy with some forethought can gain many desired goals. Be mindful of details, costs.

YOU BORN TODAY: Mars rules your Zodiacal sign and Venus was prominent on your date. Your disposition attracts friends but you hold them and could spoil things by being over-enthusiastic or too quick. Times when you may be a little too aggressive. Self-control and tact will help you to finish up your job successfully with few mistakes. Do not resist suggestions, and do show yourself to best advantage making deals, contracts. Be sensible indulging in your moods, tendency here to overdo. Birthdays of: May Robson, noted actress; David Ricardo, Eng. economist.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

APPEAL DISMISSED

Los Angeles, April 18 — (AP) — Carol Ann, adopted daughter of the late Wallace Beery, must get along on $500 a month until she becomes 21 in September.

She sought $2,5500 a month to maintain a standard of living and for singing and drama lessons.

The court yesterday denied her a larger allowance from Beery's $2,188,303 estate. Other relatives said she already had received $400,000 from the estate.

MADOC

Walter Bent Discusses Boys' Training Schools

Madoc.—At the Parent-Teachers' Association April meeting held at the Public School, Madoc, Mr. W. Bent, of the Y.M.C.A., Belleville, was the guest speaker. He spoke to a large audience who followed him with interest and enjoyment a story of his experiences in boys' work.

Born in New Brunswick and graduating from the university in that province he had become a member of the staff of the Provincial Reform Schools. After overseas service during the war he came to Ontario to work in the Boys' Training School at Bowmanville and gave his listeners an insight into life as it is lived in such a school and the courses followed to try to reinstate the wayward boy as a good citizen of the state. Mr. Bent had travelled widely on the European continent visiting reform institutions in many countries. Speaking from his observation there he found Ontario training schools on a higher level than any others he had seen.

Built Boys' Town

In Peterborough, he had built up a Boys' Town and explained how such a town was organized. The aim of this organization was to keep boys off the streets. He is particularly interested in his boys' choir and brought 12 of these boys out to Madoc with him. The young singers were given a warm welcome by the audience and were most generous with their musical numbers. With Mrs. McBride as accompanist, the program consisted of vocal solos, accordian, guitar and choruses.

Jack Baker thanked the guests from Belleville for their interesting and enjoyable program.

Miss Suzanne Locke, a talented young musician, of Madoc, contributed a piano number. A film "Youth In Your Town", rounded out the program. The evening's entertainment concluded with the serving of refreshments.

LIBERAL MINISTER

R. G. Casey, supply and development minister in the Australian Liberal-Country Party coalition government, will be one of the foremost candidates in the forthcoming general election. Mr. Casey is a former governor of Bengal and was Britain's minister to the Middle East during the Second World War. The election has been called because of a deadlock between the House of Representatives and the Senate, where the Labor opposition holds a majority. — (CP Photo.)

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

Tim Reese noted carefully the time of Jean Roland's plane's arrival. Although the plane landed forty miles away, Tim, prompted by his dream, had the curious feeling he was personally watching the plane glide down from the sky, and illusion though it all knew it to be, it gave him a strange exhilaration.

While was not so strange concerning that Jean's mere handwriting on the envelopes of the letters she sent him blinded him with delight.

Tim was quite sure—again it was the prompting of his dream—that Jean would telephone him soon after her arrival.

She many letters and her many she had done before. That consoled him though it did not alleviable climax in an early telephone call. But no call came. Tim hovered as casually as he could about the hospital telephone through the afternoon hours and well into the evening, but, though the telephone rang often it was not for him.

The next day still no word came. Tim did not hold Jean's not calling against her. She was, he told himself, too much in the turmoil of arriving home to have time to telephone.

Nonetheless, he was disappointed. Tim persuaded himself that she was planning to come out to Cedarbrook without calling at replies promised, he felt, an inthe city. Although the plane landed be ill."

He was startled. "You're 18! No Midge, not 18."

"Eighteen next May. But I don't think there's anything we can do about it." She laughed as brightly as she could. "Get ready. In the spirit of Christmas, I'll drive you to the train."

Midge, as the train pulled out, stood in the snowy dusk of the station, smiling.

The image of her speeding him on his way, as Tim supposed, was warm and pleasant, and he held to it until the train was well out of the station. Then, the image faded and vanished.

For Midge, it was an almost unbearably long and empty drive back to the hospital.

Night had settled over New York and snow was falling as Tim's cab squirmed its way up through Fifth Avenue traffic, but there was little sign of dark or snow in the brilliant tumult of mazed lights and decorations, shining store windows and massed glowing faces everywhere proclaiming the approach of Christmas.

The shop of Jean Paul on 58th Street was richly lighted. Business hours were over, but several employees were still at work, putting away fabrics, hats, dresses, straightening out the chaos of the day.

Tim entered timidly, boyishly. It was his first visit to a grown shop. He saw an enchanted, many mirrored place, with a decor bright and modern but pleasantly color schemed in deep rose and ice blue, with hats poised on pedestals as if for flight, with perfume bottles and costume jewelery glittering on shelves and in show cases, with evening gowns on stunning mannequins, with bolts of colorful fabrics still on view.

Here and there as slowly with his canes he made his way into the shop, he recognized designs of his own and he had the pleasant feeling of being a co-creator of this beautiful world.

This was a woman's place, and yet in his pride of achievement he felt more of a man than he had since Normandy.

A stock girl in answer to Tim Reese's inquiry for Jean Roland led him to a practically invisible office, the door to which was a tall shining mirror flanked, for the season, by great sprays of poinsettias.

The office was a small square room, functional and businesslike in chrome and wood, very much in contrast to the elegance of the shop outside.

Behind the desk was a busy secretary, a plump young woman with as bland and guileless a face as Tim had ever seen. A small black and silver sign on the desk declared her to be Miss Major.

Tim assumed that this woman, Miss Major, was the secretary to Paul Panciera, the owner of Jean Paul and in this assumption he was entirely correct. she had the efficient, manner-of-fact way of upgrading Tim, that good secretaries always have.

Tim approached his purpose in all good humor, telling the secretary it was his first night out since June 1944 and he wanted very much to see Miss Roland.

Miss Major did not join in the humor. She took up a silver pencil chained to a silver pad, prepared to write.

"Name, please?"

"I'd just as soon not give it, if you don't mind." Tim stood, supported by his canes, at the desk before her. "I came here so I could —well, it sounds kind of silly, I guess, but I might as well tell you, I came here to surprise her."

If Miss Major thought this boyishness amusing, she gave no sign.

"Tomorrow at eleven," she said "Even if you saw fit to give your name I could not reach her. She is going to the Corinthians' Ball tonight."

"The Corinthians' Ball?" Tim searched his memory. "That's a kind of dressmakers' shindig, is it not?"

"It is a very social and very exclusive affair," Miss Major was very bland.

"Funny." Tim again tried his memory, "I thought I read somewhere about it being a fashion show, or something like that."

Miss Major began to show the least sign of impatience. "They pick the 'dress of the year' tonight, if that's what you mean."

"Miss Roland won't be modeling then?"

"Why not? Miss Roland moves only in the very best circles." Miss Major, as she spoke, wrote casually on the pad. Man on canes. Friday a.m. At eleven."

"Where is this—grand affair?" "At the Empire."

"That's right. I remember now. It's there every year, isn't it?"

But, for Miss Major the conversation was ended. "Tomorrow at eleven," she said blandly.

"I guess I'll have to go over to the hall, then." Tim was very offhand.

MACARTHUR DEFENDS HIS POLICY IN FAR EAST

First Contingent Canada's Brigade Sails for Korea

Remainder of Force Will Follow in Near Future

By DAVE McINTOSH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Seattle, Wash., April 19 (CP) —The first contingent of Canada's 6,000 man Korean Brigade has sailed for Korea.

The remainder of the force is following immediately in two other ships, sailing direct for the war theatre.

The army blacked out reports of the exact departure time.

In full-kit, the sunburned, perfectly-conditioned troops filed onto the Seattle port of embarkation pier shortly after dawn.

Bands blared. Orders were shouted down the ranks. There was the sharp clang of iron-shoshed boots on the pavement. The men stood erect under their heavy packs, rifles and sten guns slung at their shoulders.

They looked hard, as if they were spoiling for a fight.

They went off into one soon, Brig. John Rockingham, commander of the force, said the men will swing into action as soon as possible.

He had a sobering word for all Canadians. He said casualties would likely be heavier than they were in Italy and Normandy during the Second World War because the Korean campaign was one of "closer contact."

The night before sailing, the men were confined to barracks. There were long queues for the long-distance telephone. Others wrote long letters.

One Going Back

• Tpr. Nosh Umpherville of The Pas, Man., fished his last stamp from a worn wallet: "I'm all of the financial backing I have left, but there's no better way to use it," he said.

Cpl. Dave McConachie, Owen Sound, Ont., said: "We are only two things I'm worried about —the boat trip and the smell over there. He was a member of the original advance party that landed in Korea in November.

Gnr. Frank Barrington, of St. John's, Nfld., allowed that his new job had taken him far from his last one—on an American airfield in Greenland.

Tpr. Jack Ryan of London, Ont., said he had just dispatched flowers to his mother for mother's day in May—a little ahead of time but this was my last chance." He said he wasn't too many flowers in Korea."

Over in their barracks, the men of Queen's Own Rifles of Royal Regiment were lining up for a final medical check.

Pte. Neal Paquette, 23, of Sudbury, Ont., said he had learned to speak French, only since joining the "Van Doos."

Of 40 officers in the battalion, only seven are English speaking though all are bilingual. One of them is Lieut. William Fiddes of Montreal.

"I wouldn't give up the Van Doos for anything," he said.

Officer Feels Better

The family of Lieut. Roger Hebert of Three Rivers, Que., certainly hasn't. His father was a sergeant-major in the regiment in the First World War.

The commander of 'A' company Maj. Nolland Reid of Ottawa, who won the Military Cross in Normandy, said his wife, Rita, gave birth to their first child, a boy, only a few hours before he was to sail today.

"Boy did I fel better when the word came," he said.

Pte. Ulysse Cormier of Buctouche, N.B., and L/Cpl. Richard Desmond of Lower L'Ardoise, N.S., allowed that this was going to be "an experience."

Cpl. G. T. Farmer of Halifax, Spr. P. Monkman of Moncton, N.B., and Pte. C. Morris of Timmins, Ont., were loading ammunition on a truck.

Tpr. Lawrence Lavigne of Medicine Hat, Alta., said in the immortal expression of the army, "Well, this is it."

Every man was saying that to himself.

Murderer of Five Hangs Self in Winnipeg Jail

Winnipeg, April 19 —(CP) — John Henry Schmidt, 31-year-old farmer charged with killing five slaying Saturday of five members of his family at Grayville, Man., hanged himself early today in jail, police announced.

Police said Schmidt hanged himself with his belt at 1.25 a.m., five minutes after the regular cell check made by a constable.

Schmidt had surrendered himself to RCMP Saturday at Carman, Man., his mother, father, two sisters and a brother were found shot to death at their farm home in the Grayville district, 12 miles west of Carman, which is 60 miles southwest of Winnipeg.

Funeral services for Henry Schmidt, 75; Sarah, his wife, 69; and David, 38, Mary, 46 and Olga 35, were scheduled for later today at Union Point in the Mennonite church.

The bodies of the five were found scattered both outside and inside the one-storey white homestead. Seven bullets had been used to kill them. Apparently the killer had stalked his victims rapidly.

There has been no motive uncovered for the slayings.

Doctors Amazed Indian Living After Stabbing

Hallelbury, April 19. (CP)— Stanley Petrant, a gaunt-faced 35-year-old Ojibway Indian, still is hanging on to life in the hospital here today since he allegedly tried to commit suicide Monday night by driving a hunting knife 3 1-2 inches into the top of his head.

Doctors have performed amazement at the fact that the lean, 165 pound Indian has remained alive so long.

Dr. W. C. Arnold said today that an attempt is to be made to raise funds to send Petrant to Toronto for specialist cranial operation in attempt to relieve the "progressive paralysis" now overtaking his body.

Dr. Arnold, assisted by Dr. F. Duggan, Cobalt, removed the five-inch blade from Petrant's head.

Doctors Find Way to Spot Cancer Of Cervix Early, Can Wipe it Out

Baltimore, April 19 —(AP) — Three doctors have announced discovery of a way to spot cancer of the cervix early enough to wipe it out in 95 per cent of women.

Cancer of the cervix, or neck of the womb, is generally recognized as the cause of 15 percent of all cancer deaths among women.

The "new" method of detection involves observation of the way tissue cells are arranged.

In healthy tissue they are lined up, row on row, like soldiers. In dangerous tissue, the doctors found their natural order is disturbed, they "break ranks."

Until now, the cancer was identified principally after the surrounding healthy tissue was attacked. Often that's too late to save a life.

Discoverers of the new detection method are Drs. Richard Te-Linde, professor of gynecology at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine and chief gynecologist at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Gerald Stevens and Charles Green.

They studied the case histories of more than 700 women admitted to the hospital with advanced cancer of the cervix.

Of this group 13 previously had been in the hospital and had undergone examinations which showed normal or unusual condition of the cervix. The examinations were given from one to 17 years before the patients were found to have cancer.

Doctors had taken biopsies, or examined samples of tissue from the cervix, which showed that they had seen no symptoms of cancer. But disease manifested itself later in all 13 cases.

They re-examined thousands of sections of tissue previously taken from these women and noticed changes that occurred when cancer cells from the cervix before other symptoms appeared.

Besides failing out of their natural pattern, they also lost their normal ability to cherish.

Dr. Jones said when such cases are observed in the cells of cervical tissue, they can be removed by surgery before it becomes fatal.

SEN. VANDENBERG MOST-RESPECTED STATESMAN, DIES

His Advice Sought By Both Parties

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 19. (AP)—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, one of the United States' most-respected statesmen, died last night. He was 67.

The Michigan Republican, a foreign-policy expert whose advice was sought by the heads of both major parties, died in his sleep after several years of illness. He had undergone several major operations in the last two years.

Vandenberg's death meant the loss of one of the founders of the United Nations and one of Congress' foremost advocates of a bi-partisan, unified foreign policy in the cold war with Russia.

It also undoubtedly meant a gain for the Democrats in the Senate. It falls to Michigan's Democratic Governor C. Mennen Williams, to name a successor to Vandenberg, whose career spanned 25 years in Congress.

With Vandenberg's death the Democratic majority in the Senate became 49 to 47. The expected Democratic appointment will make it 50 to 46.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday from the Park Congregational Church here.

With the Senator's death was disclosed a story of his self-sacrifice in the cause of bi-partisanship.

Vandenberg's family disclosed that he had had a heart ailment for 25 years.

He postponed a necessary lung operation for a year in October, 1948.

He insisted, said his son, Arthur H. Vandenberg, Jr., that "other health was of far less importance than his attention to the affairs of government."

At Vandenberg's bedside were his son, who flew from Brazil, and two daughters. His wife died in 1950.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, Democratic head of the Foreign Relations Committee, said Vandenberg "rendered distinguished service to the nation in the cause of international peace and international co-operation."

His Republican colleague from Michigan, Senator Homer Ferguson, said Vandenberg "inspired his party and his country through his wisdom and his leadership would have been of such infinite value to both."

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 19 (CP) Synopsis: The storm that gave general snowfalls to Central Ontario, and heavy falls in northern regions, has moved rapidly eastward into Quebec province. Fair skies are expected to clear this afternoon in most districts, and Friday will be mainly sunny.

Cold air from the Arctic now covers all the prairie and most of Ontario. Temperatures are expected to remain below normal for the next two days.

Rescue Ship Makes Contact With Object Believed Sunken Sub; Little Hope Crew Alive

Portsmouth, England, April 19— (AP)—The Admiralty tonight gave up hope of saving the 75 officers and men aboard the Royal Navy submarine Affray, lost since Tuesday in the English Channel.

An admiralty statement said "there is now no reasonable hope of the rescue of any survivors."

The King expressed "the heartfelt sympathy the Queen and myself" for relatives of the lost men.

A rescue ship made contact today with an object which may be the Affray.

A diver was sent to the bottom to find out whether the object found by sound wave contact might be the submarine, which became stuck under 190 feet of water after a routine dive Monday night. The point was about 1-2 miles southwest of where the Affray should have submerged—about a mile off her course.

J. Callaghan, parliamentary secretary to the admiralty, announced this, but said at the time "hopes that any lives will now be saved are dwindling."

The admiralty said earlier it had no reason for arousing hope that any of the men aboard now would be found alive.

Admiralty experts said the submarine's oxygen supply had been enough "for about 48 hours—deadline that was passed at 8:15 p.m. (3.15 p.m. EST) yesterday. It was exactly two days earlier that the big submarine dived on manoeuvres and mysteriously settled to the bottom in 200 feet of water.

The Admiralty said the hunt would go on. An armada of 24 ships prowled over the channel surface this morning, searching for some sign that would pinpoint the Affray. Vessels swept the bottom with a dragnet of chains. Divers underwent telegraphic tappings heard yesterday have not been received since.

Believe Search in Right Place

But the Admiralty said it was confident the search was in the right spot—southwest of the Isle of Wight, 40 to 50 miles from Portsmouth. The Affray sent a signal from there Monday night to say she was going to make a practice dive. It was to surface Tuesday morning to report again. The all-clear signal never came.

The search, which got underway immediately after the Affray failed to report, has been a heartbreaking effort for more than 5,000 rescue workers.

There was one moment of high hope for a few yesterday afternoon a airplane radioed it had spotted two objects—one yellow and one white. It dropped a sea flare near the spot. The yellow object was a pinewood packing case. The white object was a dead fish.

LIBERALS LOSE ONE SUPPORTER, GAIN ANOTHER

Ralph Maybank Will Return to Law Practice

Ottawa, April 19—(CP)—The liberal party, after losing one supporter in the House of Commons yesterday, was immediately offered the full support of a man elected as an independent liberal.

Ralph Maybank (L—Winnipeg South Centre), due to return to his private law practice in Winnipeg, said "farewell" to the chamber.

"This will be my last appearance in this House," said the 60-year-old Mr. Maybank who has served as parliamentary assistant to the Minister of Health, Mines and Technical Surveys, and Reconstruction and Development. He entered the commons in 1932.

Later, Herve Rousseau, elected as independent liberal in the by-election in Quebec constituency of Rimouski in a by-election last October, said that he will fully support the government.

Mr. Rousseau defeated the official Liberal candidate. He did not refer to Mr. Maybank but said he has been fighting for the Liberal party for the last 50 years.

Must Make Peace

It was learned that Mr. Rousseau's presence in the house means he will be automatically accepted into the Liberal party. He will not must make peace with the Liberal party's organization in his constituency. Once that is done he will be invited to attend Liberal party caucus. The invitation will include the right to vote with the Liberal party.

As he became it was learned that Edgar Leduc, elected as independent member for Montreal Dorchester Cartier in a 1949 by-election, he made peace with the Liberal organization in his constituency and has been invited to party caucus. Like Mr. Rousseau, he will include the right to vote.

Mr. Maybank's Winnipeg seat will not become officially vacant until Mr. Speaker announces to Speaker Ross Macdonald of the Commons. A. L. Smith, Progressive-Conservative standing for Calgary West, left the Commons several days at last for only an indecisive campaign."

"Poor man would appease red China "are blind" MacArthur said.

He declared Russia would not necessarily mesh her power with red China if the United Nations forces carried the war further. Any new enemy, he said, will probably be only if it "the threat is in her favor on a world scale.

Must Keep Formosa

He had declared earlier that Formosa must not be allowed to fall into enemy hands.

It is part or an island are, he said, from which U.S. air and sea power can control the Pacific and maintain it as a protective 'moat' for all the Americas.

U.S. Lays Down Program To Combat Redism in Asia And Protect Pacific Islands

Washington, April 19 (AP) — The United States has laid down a three point "program of action" designed to combat communism in Asia and protect the Pacific Islands.

The plan was outlined yesterday by President Truman. In a joint statement last night, State Secretary Dean Acheson urged "a steadfast course in Korea" and rejected any idea of extending the conflict there.

Acheson made this plea on the eve of the arrival of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, relieved of his Far Eastern commands when President decided the general's policy views were not in accord with his own.

Acheson, in a speech to the Women's National Press Club, said that any widening of the Korean fighting will be the responsibility of the Kremlin and red China.

"The American people will never choose this course," he said. "They will not fall into the trap of seeming to choose it." To extend the fighting would "gravely imperil world peace."

The president's three point program called for:

1. A probable defence "arrangement" among the U.S., Australia and New Zealand. Truman and Secretary Acheson, Secretary George C. Marshall and Ambassador John Foster Dulles to open negotiations in this direction while working out a Japanese peace treaty.

It is believed said the agreement will be modelled on the North Atlantic pact pledge to regard an attack on one country as an attack on all.

2. Increased efforts to help Asian countries strengthen their independence and achieve relief from poverty.

3. Continuing determination to punish aggression in Korea.

Hon. C.E. Ferland Resigns Seat In the Senate

The British North America Act provides that when a Senator wishes to vacate his seat he does so by writing the Governor-general and is not required to state any reasons.

DIED OF WOUNDS

Ottawa, April 19 — (CP) — The army today issued the 10th casualty list of the Korean war, reporting that a Private Robert Bud, Fairservice of Black Cape, Que., has died of wounds.

Land Suitable For Building For Sale Say Officals

Ottawa, April 19 (CP) —Veterans Land Act officials, answering charges they sold waterlogged land to Brantford, veterans, said today the land was inspected by engineers and found suitable for building.

The veterans, acting through the Canadian Legion, have written Ian Sinclair charging that land, north of Brantford, lies over a water-table or underground lake and that the V.L.A. knew of these conditions at the time of sale.

V.L.A. officials here said today this is "an abnormal water condition in the Brantford area, particularly in the Brantford area. It is not unusual, they said, for water to come up in cellars before the frost are laid. They saw nothing unusual in the Brantford situation at all.

The situation would right itself as the sub-division project developed. They had no information to substantiate claims there is an underground lake under the property.

However, V.L.A. authorities would meet with the veterans tomorrow night to see what can be done.

Tells Congress His Views Shared by Military Leaders

Warns Against Appeasing Reds Anywhere in World

Washington, April 19 — (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today his views on the Far East "have been fully shared by practically every military leader" including the United States joint chiefs of staff.

This assertion by the deposed Far Eastern commander in an address to Congress brought a storm of applause with Republican members standing and cheering. MacArthur was interrupted for nearly a minute.

He had previously restated the four points of his strategic policy for the Orient.

1. An economic blockade of China.

2. A naval blockade of the China coast.

3. Removal of the restrictions on the ground forces of Nationalist China "with logistical support from us."

This last point meant using the Nationalist troops of Chiang Kai-Shek with the United States furnishing supplies.

Had Been Criticized

MacArthur said of his policy "for this I have been severely criticized in many quarters, principally abroad." But, he said, he had never heard any criticism of these views from "responsible military authorities, including our own joint chiefs of staff."

MacArthur said he had called for reinforcements in Korea but was informed they were not available. He said he had warned that unless permission was granted to bomb Manchurian bases, blockade the China coast and use Nationalist forces on Formosa the position of his command "forbade victory" in Korea.

Shortly, MacArthur said the intervention of the Chinese communists in the Korean fighting had called for "realistic revision" of military strategy and such decisions have not been forthcoming.

MacArthur said he was not consulted in advance on the sending of American troops into Korea, but the move "proved to be a sound decision."

His voice rising in vibrancy, MacArthur told Congress "there could hold in Korea by constant manoeuvre and by attrition with relatively small losses."

He declared Russia would not necessarily mesh her power with red China if the United Nations forces carried the war further. Any new enemy, he said, will probably be only if it "the threat is in her favor on a world scale.

Must Keep Formosa

He had declared earlier that Formosa must not be allowed to fall into enemy hands.

It is part or an island are, he said, from which U.S. air and sea power can control the Pacific and maintain it as a protective 'moat' for all the Americas.

Britain's Festival Slams Door On Sharps, Shills During Run

London, April 19. (AP)—Foreign confidence men are strictly "not wanted" in Britain.

With the Festival of Britain opening May 3, authorities have let it get around in Canada, the United States and Australia that London is no town for sharpies. Hotel managers and transport authorities have a revised list—with pictures—of gents they figure "big-con" material who wouldn't turn a hair at hiring a whole hotel to give a swindle that on-the-level feel.

Unlike "big-con" men, who work for six-figure takes, "short con" folk stick to the larcenous card game, the crooked crap session, and simple swindles to shear the victim fast.

Scotland Yard thinks few foreign short-con artists will get past watchful officialdom at the entry ports. As for home-grown talent, the Yard is confident it has got that one in hand, home-raised "big-con" men are rare in Britain since the war. There's not much money around these days austere days to keep a real big-con man in the style required.

Students of con's vital statistics think an American—known only as "the Hash-house Kid"—doesn't mind the biggest swindle in modern times. He relieved a Briton of $375,000 in cold cash in Montreal in the '20s.

Anyhow, Scotland Yard is determined to see that another "Hash-house Kid" doesn't milk the British Festival of Britain.

Behind him, running almost neck - and - neck about St. Yards ahead or the rest of the field, were two fellow Japanese Yoshitaka Uchikawa and Shigeko Tanaka.

City and District News

POSTAL CARRIER BITTEN BY DOG

The old story of the postman and the biting dog proved a realistic one yesterday for Barney Halpy, local postal carrier.

The letter carrier was making rounds in East Belleville, when, while working on Dufferin Ave., a dog bit him on the right leg. The matter was investigated by city dog catcher Charles Thorn who reported the owner of the dog volunteered to pay any damages.

DESERONTO MAN SUSTAINS EYE INJURY

Stanley Moon, Deseronto, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital the other day suffering with a serious eye injury. Moon was struck in the eye by a piece of a nail, which snapped when it was caught by a handsaw he was using. Two stitches were required to close the wound. His eyesight will not be impaired, it is stated.

POLICE ENDEAVORING TO IDENTIFY JEEP

City police are endeavoring to identify a jeep and the driver of which was sold yesterday to have failed to observe a "stop" sign in the Parkwood - Heights district and was in a minor collision with a sleigh ridden by a young girl.

The girl's father called police and said the driver of the jeep failed to stop at the time of the accident but brought his vehicle to a halt beyond the intersection. The driver was then said to have gotten out and after seeing the girl lying in the roadway jumped in his vehicle and drove away.

Fortunately the girl was not injured while only minor damage resulted to the bicycle.

False Information Given Police, Pair Face Charges

That it doesn't pay to give false information to the police was learned in magistrate's court today by a local resident.

For changing his mind as to who was the driver of a car involved in an accident early in the month, Arlington Bell, 156 Church Street, will face a charge of public mischief while his companion and actual driver of the car at the time of the accident has been charged with dangerous driving.

Early this month Bell and Thomas "Derby" Jeffrey, Patterson St., were driving toward Trenton when near Bayside their car turned over on the Highway and ended up in the ditch. Later Bell told police that he had been the driver and he will subsequently charged with careless driving.

Tells Different Story

Today in court before Magistrate Bell, Bell told a different story. He said that Jeffrey had been at the wheel and that he also admitted by Jeffrey, when he gave evidence, Jeffrey said he had forgotten to renew his driver's licence so he had suggested to Bell that he (Bell) tell police he had been the driver.

The result was that Magistrate Wills dismissed the charge of careless driving against Bell whereupon the Crown attorney lately asked that Jeffrey be charged with dangerous driving and Bell with the charge of public mischief. The two will appear in court next Thursday.

When he gave evidence today Jeffrey, through counsel, asked the protection of the provisions of the Ontario Evidence Act. This was granted, but the same privilege was denied Bell.

Kingston Male Choir To Sing in Belleville

On April 23rd Kingston's Temple Male Choir will give a performance in Belleville at Collegiate Auditorium, under the auspices of Branch 99 Canadian Legion.

This well-organized 20-member choir has gained distinction in Kingston over a period of many years and is certain to win as many hearts in Belleville as it has in Kingston and vicinity for the twenty years it has performed as a group. Organized in Kingston by H. W. Thurston, local businessman, the choir consists of only a score of voices and is composed of men of outstanding proficiency and merit in Kingston and, under the conditions of the Crippen Challenge Horn, they have acquired a musical perfection, a grace and polish found in few such non-professional groups. Their smooth and efficient harmony reflects their years of experience together as well as an obvious understanding of the basic principles of choir singing and is the result, too, of practice and hard work.

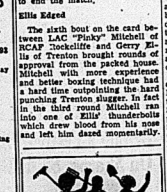
The choir's repertoire is varied and can suit any occasion as they have proven by their generous response to requests for encores at church functions, patriotic organizations, Salvation Army, hospital home meetings and many other organizations.

Kingston was very proud of their performances at the International Rotary Festivals and at National Festival where they attained high honors, winning three Rotary shields and four first-class certificates. The choir has also given radio programs on several occasions and was chosen to sing over a coast-to-coast radio network at the Kingston Centennial and Church of the Air Military Service.

The residents of Belleville are fortunate in having the opportunity to hear this outstanding group and it is hoped that all music lovers will turn out to hear Kingston's favorite entertainers, under the auspices of popular radio and concert artist, Alphonse McCue and Gerry Ellis. Mr. McCue has long been associated with the Temple Male Choir of Kingston, giving freely of his time, despite his popularity and the many demands that are made of him.

News of Trenton Wallace Outpunches Trefry In Main Bout Before 1400 Fight Fans at Air Station

Trenton (Special) —Don Wal-Ellis failed to follow up and lace of the Quinte Boxing Club punctured ACI Vic Trefry of RCAF Rockcliffe to win a unanimous decision in the main bout of the RCAF boxing meet held in the sports hangar at the station last night.



More than 1,400 fight fans watched the 1950 Toronto Newsboy champ hammer the 1950 Golden Gloves contender almost to the canvas after suffering a cut over the left eye in the first round. The first and second rounds looked even although Trefry's face appeared to redden as Wallace banged away at his head. The airforce boy would dish out hard blows to the head and body of Wallace and Wallace would reply with harder punches and more of them.

But Trefry must have figured he ran into a high-speed pile driver when Wallace ripped him on the mouth in the fourth round. The Barrie boy repeated the dosage several times throughout the round as his airforce opponent hung on. Wallace finished strong and landed in the corner with an air of confidence about him.

Wallace came out in the fifth with the same two-fisted attack and blasted Trefry back into the ropes repeatedly with one-two shots and a general body mauling. The Rockcliffe fighter was tiring badly as the bell sounded to end the match.

Ellis Edged

The sixth bout on the card between LAC "Pinky" Mitchell of RCAF Rockcliffe and Gerry Ellis of Trenton brought a unanimous approval from the packed house. Mitchell with more experience and better boxing technique had a hard time outpointing the hard punching Trenton slugger. In fact in the third round Mitchell ran into one of Ellis' thunderbolts which drew blood from his nose and left him dazed momentarily.

Gunner Chamberlain of the Royal Canadian School of Artillery at Picton won a unanimous decision over ACI Jim Vensel of RCAF No. 1 Trenton, in a three round fixture at the top of the program.

The artilleryman opened up with a flailing attack after which Vensel never looked the same. The Picton puncher caught the airforce boxer on the ropes and pummelled him with a rain of leather. Vensel tried hard to hit back but Chamberlain always held the edge.

Gunners Grab Two

The artillery school picked up the second trophy of the evening when Gunner Vansickle beat out a unanimous decision over ACI Pat McCool in the 140 pound class.

McCool cut Vansickle in the opener and pressed throughout the second round but was unable to stand the pace in the third and faltered in front of the Picton fighter who knocked him to the floor and halfway out through the ropes before the fixture was over.

Len "Kid" Larson with the advantage in height and reach battered his way to a unanimous decision over Bantam Cavalry of the Lambert Boxing Club of Toronto. The St. Mary's Boxing Club representative bore in throughout and returned more than he took on every exchange.

Two judges against one decided that Truman Cavalry of the Lambert Boxing Club of Toronto, who substituted for Billy Smith of the same club in the 160 pound class was the winner over Signalman Howard of the Royal Canadian School of Artillery at Kingston.

The Maritime flyweight champion of RCAF Camp Borden AC1 Jimmy Boucher found the going rough to collect a five round unanimous decision from Kenny Cobourn of the Lambert Boxing Club of Toronto.

Gordon Forrester and Jack Glawson both sons of army men at Picton featured in the paperweight match. They fought to a draw.

Present Trophies

Presentation of the trophies was made by Lt. R. J. Fisher, C.O. of the RCA School at Picton Group Captain G. R. Dunlop, A.F.C., C.D., C.O. Trenton Air Station, was in the ring when the trophies were handed out.

Drug Items Show Lowest Price Rise Druggists Told

With 1935-39 as a basis of 100, a large number of drug store items revealed the lowest increase in price in the rising cost-of-living, W. E. Hessell, head of the Board of Commercial Interests of the Dominion Druggists Association, Toronto, said here last night.

Mr. Hessell addressed a dinner meeting of the Eastern District Association in Laitiner's Tea Room. Present were members of the association from Picton, Brighton, Trenton, Madoc, Marmora, Tweed, Stirling and Campbellford. A special guest was Mr. Harold Smith, secretary of the Ontario Retail Druggists Association, Toronto.

Food prices, said Mr. Hessell told the druggists, had reached 218.5 at November 1st, 1950; rents had reached 134.4; light and fuel, 140.6; clothing, 184.5; commodities 195.1 while 319 standard drug items revealed the lowest of all, standing at 122.3.

Interesting Address

The speaker stated this enviable position was one the drug trade had taken pride in maintaining, but it also was facing increasing costs that in order to combat any increase to higher prices it would be necessary to build still more volume of sales and reduce selling costs by using more economical methods of merchandising possible.

He also stated that he felt the housewife, if she understood the situation, would co-operate by shopping on a cash-and-carry basis and would not ask for deliveries in telephoned orders of a less amount than $1.00.

Mr. Hessell quoted his figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics relative to the "Cost-of-Living Index."

George Noble, district secretary, was elected head of the association with Harold Seldon, Belleville, named as secretary.

Sarson by unanimous decision.

AC1 Jimmy Boucher, 115 lbs., Marlborough, Camp Borden, vs. Kenny Cobourn, 119 lbs., Boxing Club, Toronto. Boucher by unanimous decision.

ACI Vic Trefry, 147 lbs., R.C.A.F. Station Rockcliffe, 1950 Golden Glove contender, vs. Don Wallace, 140 lbs., Belleville Club, 1950 Toronto "Newsboy" champion. Wallace by unanimous decision.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 19.— (CP) — Prices slipped quietly downward as the session progressed on the stock market today.

Papers were responsible for much of the industrial weakness. The group chalked up a wide list of losses following yesterday's news that newsprint and wood pulp are to be classed as essential materials and put under government control.

Utilities and refining oils were also lower while steels and foods were higher. Other industrial groups were mixed and price changes throughout the section were mostly in small fractions.

Western oils declines were numerous but mostly small.

Base metals tended lower but were fairly mixed. Consolidated Smelters, East Sullivan, International Nickel, Labrador and Steep Rock eased fractions.

Golds were about evenly balanced with gains and losses and price changes were small.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 19 — (CP) — Most cattle prices were steady at the Ontario stockyards today. Receipts: cattle, 20; hogs, 50; lambs, 50. Left from Wednesday were 100 cattle.

Common to medium steers were $20-$23. Canners and cutters brought $20-$22. A few stockers sold for $29-$32.

CHINATOWN SAFE LOOTED

Toronto, April 19— (CP) — Toronto's Chinatown was the scene of a robbery early today when a safe containing $4,000 was taken from the Sincere Trading Company. Treasurer Willie Lee said some of the money belonged to the Chinese Nationalist party.

TELLS CONGRESS

MacArthur concluded with a recollection of the old soldier ballad "Old Soldiers Never Die, they Just Fade Away."

He said he was closing out 52 years of military service with that ballad in mind.

"I now close my military career and just fade away," he said dramatically. "An old soldier who tried to do his duty as God gave him the light to see that duty."

MacArthur argued that there can be no "appeasement" of communism in Asia "without simultaneously undermining our efforts to halt it in Europe."

President Truman and other administration spokesmen have repeatedly said the United States would not engage in appeasement. Some U. S. allies — notably Britain — have suggested steps which MacArthur obviously regarded as appeasement, including turning over Formosa to China, now in communist hands.

Red Threat Global One

The communist threat is a global one, he declared, and added: "We can't divide our effort."

In effect, this was a direct challenge to the Truman administration's position that Europe must be the place where the United States will concentrate its efforts against communism.

It was MacArthur's disagreement with this view — his contention that greater efforts must be put into the Korean War — that led President Truman to dismiss him from his Far Eastern commands eight days ago and brought the general back to this country for a dramatic appearance before Congress.

SMUGGLING MARGARINE

The obvious futility of a discriminatory law is being demonstrated in the province of Quebec. Under Premier Duplessis, that province has refused to grant the sale or importation of margarine, and the result has been considerable bootlegging of the product, particularly in the northern areas.

The situation compares with that in the United States during prohibition days. Enforcement of prohibition was almost impossible, for two chief reasons. Firstly, the policing of a country as large as the United States to cut out every vestige of illegal dealings in liquor was beyond the strength of authorities. Secondly, it is a well-known fact that when people are denied a product, they try all the harder to obtain it. Their determination to have it overshadows all efforts made to suppress it.

It matters not whether the product be gasoline, liquor, lumber, tea, or anything else. With the privilege denied, there will always be unscrupulous operators who take advantage of the situation by attempting to turn a fast dollar on the transaction. And there always find a customer to take their product off their hands.

In Quebec, margarine is reported to be of prime smuggling quality. It is being brought in by truck across the Ontario border, and sold to housewives at a price advance approximating fifteen or seventeen cents on each pound. It is obvious that the profit on a number of truckloads of the commodity would be worthwhile going after. Smuggling in itself is as old as pirate lore, and its control is something that cannot be reached by legislation.

Adding to the situation in northern Quebec is a scarcity of butter which has pushed demand for margarine to a high level. But even at that, it is reported that some of the housewives are complaining about the high cost of the latter, and are planning on driving into Ontario to buy their own margarine when northern roads are in better condition.

Police must be almost helpless under existing conditions, for in order to ensure that no margarine was being brought into Quebec, they would have to inspect every truck and vehicle on every road providing an ingress into the province. The difficulty is obvious.

The question is not whether or not the law is a good or a bad one. Rather, it is a question of the damage being done to trade and the illegal activities which are going on. The same situation might be accomplished by restricting any other commodity from sale. Smuggling thrives under such conditions.

THE OLD ARMY GAME

The old army game has moved into the elite circles, and the results were disastrous, to say the least. The buck was passed in an ever-widening circle that included members of the Portuguese-Bend Beach Club dizzy before the episode was brought to a dismal conclusion.

It started when a dead and somewhat smelly seal was washed ashore on Portuguese Bend, California club's beach. Members of the club, not enthusiastic about removing the offender themselves, called the coast guard. The coast guard felt that the matter was not within their jurisdiction, and called the fire department. The fire department, on the way to the scene, called the police, and the police, not to be outdone, recommended the humane society for the job, and worthies of that organization turned the matter over to the county road department.

And rightly, the men of the roads refused the assignment, and passed it on to the air pollution board. That was not the end, for the air authorities felt that the seal was out of their class. They called the health department, and the health department called the sanitation department.

The sanitation department must have some brilliant men in its ranks, because they quickly shuffled the seal back to the first of all sinners — the coast guard. Finally, club officials, tiring of the battle of events, gave up. They hired a truck and carted the seal away themselves.

The moral of the story, of course, is never do yourself what you think someone else might do for you. This world is populated by people who are always trying to get someone else to do their dirty work, and in this case, the club officials might just as well have made up their minds to cart away the offender at the first. By the time the requests went through all the channels the seal must have increased in odor, and the job of removal must have become nastier. The army is credited with starting the game of passing the buck, but it could take a lesson from the California episode.

PREPARATION IS WORTHWHILE

Costly in dollars and cents, but worthwhile. That was the judgment made of exercises last weekend which saw Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, theoretically "attacked" by jet planes dropping 'atomic' bombs. In the raid of theory, 8,000 civilians were killed, 4,000 were injured. Weak spots in the defence of the area were noted, the Sault Locks, vital in the movement of water traffic, were bombed out, and civilians saw what they might be required to do in case of actual attack. Such preparation will pay dividends if the real thing ever comes.

UNANSWERED PLEAS

If every prayer were answered and granted every plea,
Our cares would be lightened; no happier should we be
For should I ask for sunshine,
my neighbor hope for rain,
Though one of us was thankful,
the other would complain.

How wisely things are ordered, with much we cannot see
Into the future bravely we all are asked to go.

For joys that are denied us, the reason's never plain.
The look at which we grumble may prove tomorrow's gain.

What's best is seldom certain.
What God has willed and planned
Not always at the moment can mortals understand.
But this I must remember: were
God to favor me,
What served my selfish purpose
my neighbor's hurt might

The total vote registered was 6543 of which 2135 ballots were cast "for" and 1340 "for". In the province 60 per cent of the vote gave a dry majority of 131,645.

Belleville aldermen put themselves in the unfortunate class. After a stormy three quarters of an hour Belleville aldermen last night put themselves in the salaried class and will be paid $2 per every regular committees and council meeting. Mayor Charles Hanna, Ald. Woodley Ald. Trevorrow, Ald. Fidler, Ald. Wendey and Ald. Adams were in favor of the motion and Ald. Bennett, Ald. Ostrom, Ald. Bellinger and Ald. French opposed the motion. Ald. Ballinger was in the chair.

John W. Ostrom, Sidney township, was driving along the Canniffon Road when Mr. Lester Paper mills yesterday afternoon and behind the buggy he was leading a horse which became frightened and in doing so pulled Mr. Ostrom from the buggy. While he was pulled with the bridle horse an automobile came along and frightened the horse attached to the buggy the horse ran away and a short distance down the road it and the buggy went over the embankment and fell a distance of 20 feet. The steed here is rapid and the horse and buggy were carried out of sight. It was not until the outfit reached that part of the river behind No. 1 Fire Hall that it stopped. The horse was shot and the buggy was badly wrecked. The horse was valuable and Mr. Ostrom's loss is considerable.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The widow of an ardent sportsman and dog lover had me over the other night to help sort out his belongings. She had had mantels full of silver (or plated) cups, glass china cupboards filled with grotesque silver trophy silver tankards, mugs, bowls on ebony stands. Drawers full of them—twenty or thirty trays of pretty poor imitation Sheffield plate; round ones, oval ones, huge ones with handy legs.

These were the prizes and honors he had won as a breeder of different kinds of sporting dogs in a long and active life, as well as trap and skeet shooting and other sporting activities. A more useless collection of junk it would be hard to imagine.

From among the lot, we selected about a dozen that were suitable to be given either to the organizations who had originally donated them, or else to young and up-and-coming associations in need of trophies. These could be put in circulation again; and being already covered with honors long won, were all the more valuable.

The rest we put in cartons and boxes for the junk man to take away. It seems a pity that we are still tied to the "cup" tradition in sports. There are many other devices that could be offered as trophies. One of the most intelligent I ever saw was a solid silver candelabrum of modest size, entirely suitable to be used on a dining room table, or to decorate the side board. It is a perpetual trophy that goes to the winner, to winner, and never to a keeper. The winner's names are unobtrusively and finely engraved on its base. You can get half a hundred names on it.

Binoculars, cameras, shooting sticks, leather map cases, even copper hunting horns, are distinctive and shrill instrument of the English MFH, and other such articles, are beginning to come into fashion as prizes and trophies. Widows will be glad of this.

Herve Major New C.P. President

Toronto, April 8 (CP) —Herve Major, news editor of Montreal La Presse, Wednesday was re-elected president of The Canadian Press, Canada's co-operative news service, Frederick I. Ker, publisher of the Hamilton Spectator, was re-elected honorary president; Roy H. Thomson of Thomson Dailies, first vice-president; and R. J. Officers of the association were chosen by the board of directors after the annual meeting of members, at which Mr. Major reported on the co-operative's operating position, and Gillis Purcell, general manager, on details of the news service.

The annual meeting also elected the 9-man board of directors. These included three men—Ralph B. Herder of the St. John's, Nfld., Telegram, C. B. Delbridge of the Vancouver News-Herald and publisher of the province of Newfoundland.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

NOTES ON WRENS

The Great Bird Watch is under way throughout the British Isles. Four hundred people in Six Toms are concentrating for three weeks on the private lives of the tit, thrush, cuckoo and the rest. They've already produced an astonishing fact. Jenny Wren (steady now!) Jenny Wren is the last British bird to get up in the morning!

I suppose it's logical, at that. The wren is the most active of all birds and doubtless needs more than its phlegmatic cousins. I have been studying wrens for several years and have never encountered one yet that didn't seem to have ants in its pants.

There are 90-odd species of wrens on this continent. All of them fit the description of Pauline Green who spoke of "the little chatterin' sassy wren, no bigger than a mouse." Their nervous temperament, their volubility and incessant activity make the busy-bodies of the bird world.

Some wrens are noted for building unusual nests. Cactus wrens using only one. This has baffled the ornithologists no end. Could it be curiously fond of cactus, forgetfulness, working off excess vigor or sheer stupidity.

Wrens build their nests in the most unlikely places. The hip pocket of a pair of overalls hanging on a line is a typically goofy place for a wren to select. Once I heard of a wren that built its nest and laid a clutch of six eggs in the bottom of a bucket. Then the TNT was gently removed the wren went off in a huff.

Another favorite example of weird nesting spots was immortalized in the limerick that goes this way:

There was an old man with a beard,
Who said, "It's just as I feared!
Two owls and a hen,
Four larks and a wren
Have all built their nests in my beard."

In no other species is the husband bird so completely henpecked. Jenny is a shrew and a chronic scolder and gives her mate the tongue-lashing until dusk. Joe Wren takes this to heart and even manages to look brow-beaten, a hard thing for a bird to do. But he has an irrepressible joy inside him and bursts out into song from time to time in spite of everything.

It is Jenny who chooses the building site and attends to all domestic details. He may leave in protest, but she remains and often embarks on a second matrimonial venture.

Wrens will be all about wrens.

Visitor's View

We've got so close here to the absurdities of the liquor laws in these parts that sometimes we're quite blind to the ridiculous and ludicrous they really are.

A slightly sharper perspective is provided by a visitor and one recent visitor has been George Harrison, of London, England, on tour for the Morning Advertiser. Harrison's report isn't exactly news, but with the present situation in a detached kind of way.

"The liquor laws of this province are the most peculiar I've struck," he writes

"If you want spirits there are only certain set clubs where you can get anything. Membership of most of them merely comprises walking in and paying a dollar or two for your year's subscription, then sitting down and ordering what you please.

"But the beer situation was not enough, there are state liquor stores where you buy spirits by the bottle. Our own finest Scotch costs 9s shillings and there is no limit to the quantity you can get.

"But the stores close at 6 p. m. If you are thirsty after that time you call on almost any taxi-driver. He is always obliging and he will obligingly run to the nearest bootlegger, who will supply you with beer. You can get more than a pound sterling a bottle more then you would have to pay in the clubs.

"Night-clubs are not permitted to sell spirits, but they do provide the 'mixings,' soda, ginger ale, ice, or whatever you require. Here the slightest attention to the law forbidding the consumption of liquor on the premises.

"Every year or so the, irate population rises on its hind legs, that a plebiscite be taken of all adults in the province on the question of whether or not open-drinking lounges, bars and such like shall be allowed. The majority With equal regularity, the plebiscite is refused by the authorities on various grounds.

"I have mentioned the facts," Harrison concludes, "as I think you will be intrigued by what goes on about here on a continent that is in many ways so progressive, yet at the same time is only in the adolescent stage so far as drinking is concerned."

Amen, brother.

Death of Bevin A Heavy Blow To Labor Party

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

(Associated Press News Analyst)

The death of Ernest Bevin, British labor leader who rose from a simple worker to be head of foreign secretary, is a heavy blow to the ruling socialist party headed by Prime Minister Attlee.

The two-tiled Bevin, widely viewed as the greatest man in any country in any century," was the most powerful force for moderation in the labor party. He stood sturdily against communism at a time when extreme left-wing members of his party were flirting with Moscow.

His political moderation and broad capabilities won the respect of all parties and he was a valuable saver to the socialist government at a time when its existence depended on a few votes in the House of Commons.

Bevin has been called "the first British statesman who has been born a working man and remained one." His power with the labor unions was tremendous—a fact which Winston Churchill slyly referred to during the wartime coalition government. The prime minister made Bevin Minister of Labor and National Service.

When the socialists came to power after the war Bevin became ed Bevin foreign secretary. He quickly demonstrated his ability in dealing with foreign affairs.

Bevin aligned the British foreign policy with the United States, and stood 100 per cent with the United States against communism. It is a fact that Britain's relationship should be rife in Britain now as to what Bevin's death may mean for the political situation, especially in the next general election.

A threat of a swing to the left by the socialist party might well result in a return of the country to conservative government.

The death of this labor statesman has removed a vital steadying influence which may be expected to have its effect on the political scene.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ALL TO THE GOOD

General Meade won the Battle of Gettysburg—but he let General Lee escape his army escape, and because of this was soon relieved of his command. Grant was placed at the head of the Union armies and Meade was under him. Realizing that Grant might feel embarrassed in issuing commands to a general who had formerly been his superior, Meade begged Grant to feel no hesitation on that score. Orders and advices were such, he insisted, that no one should allow personal feelings or ambition to make him act as the good.

There are few people who are big enough to take this attitude. When we find somebody put over us who was formerly beneath us in rank, it is hard for us to stifle feelings of bitterness and resentment. Instead of every office, in the latter years of their lives brooding over chances they have missed and preferments that were denied them.

It is not natural—but it cuts the heart out of happiness. It was the greatness of Abraham Lincoln ed by Meade's fine spirit of helpfulness. It did something to the minds of both men. It healed what was all to the good.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CHARLEYHORSE AND PULLED TENDON

Amateur and professional athletes, football, baseball and tennis players, spectators, fans, coaches, trainers, have their funny notions about soreness, lameness and stiffness of muscles, pulled tendon, charleyhorse, glass arm, "shaking cold," rheumatic, arthritic sprain and the magic the well publicized "bone-setter" employs to banish these evils.

About 1500 years before Wm. Harvey discovered that blood circulates old Doctor Galen pointed out the danger of "breaking or straining some of the solid parts" if one "proceed to the more violent movements before he has gradually warmed up the whole body.

Probably the most frequent cause of muscle soreness is the accumulation of products of combustion (burning of fuel, blood sugar, glycogen, in the muscle to produce energy) — particularly lactic acid and carbon dioxide gas which form faster than the blood stream can carry them away (carry them to lungs and liver). Removal of these irritants is accomplished by active limbering, (1) heat or warmth, (2) massage, and (3) mild exercising within but not over the limit of soreness, game or contest, preferable two miles of escape or "second wind."

It is to prevent such muscle soreness, stiffness or lameness that one should always be a sweater, robe or other covering immediately after the game, exercise, round, inning or period of play.

As Galen said, there is danger of some such muscle soreness if one cools off too quickly after a burst of violent exercise—enough to make one breathe hard. But as an international player on the subject Brady says, Please, for health's sake, don't confuse this with any actual illness which you suspect would call "a cold."

The quasi-opinion of doctors and public—blah! well, then, say doctors and patients—that cold, dampness or chilling causes rheumatism, is responsible for the numerous illnesses which ignorant people are content to call "colds," is not borne out by the experience of hunters, fishermen, soldiers, sailors and others who have suffered real exposure. Nor is the theory supported by the results of experiment on 2000 persons by the Medical Research Council of Canada, of which the conclusions of the unit that conducted the experiments on volunteer subjects is that the experiment failed to convince them that chilling either induces or favors "colds." Needless to say the British investigators do not define what they mean by "colds"—for that matter who does? The sum total is: Why, you poor ever, everybody knows what the common cold is. Uh-huh, I agree, everybody except me and 140999 other doctors.

A charley-horse is rupture or tear of a tendon or of muscle fibres, which occurs sudden or too sudden or violent or too violent effort, particularly if one has not gradually warmed up for it. At the point of the tear exudation of lymph and perhaps some bleeding into the muscle or around the tendon. The soreness persists, until the tear is healed. A lump may be felt for weeks or months after the injury, and sometimes seen. When healing is complete a scar remains permanently and this may impair full elasticity of the tendon and muscle.

Charley-horse frequently occurs in the deltoid (triangular) of the thigh (which pulls the thighs together) in riders and in hamstrings (tendons which project on each side back of the knee). The injury is more often than "pulled tendon" in these situations.

The Nosy Neighbors

My 12-year-old daughter and I have been taking your lodin ration for more than a year, with most satisfactory results. Now some neighbors who heard me telling how much good it has done me have shocked and told me a person is liable to get. (Mrs. K. H.)

Unfortunately there are ing-dudging in the usual gossip. My advice is that every man, woman and child in the world should take a suitable daily ration of lodin in their own diet, whether sick or well. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet The Iodin Ration.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

MEMORY SOUNDS

Tucked away in our memory are scores of sounds that somehow keep echoing, bringing back to us the days of childhood. I have missed them for us. The sound of the church bells on the Sabbath, the sound in the early morning, the bell to school, the noon whistle, the bell that told the call voice, and the clang, clang of the fire engine. All so familiar to us, keeping forever green the memories of youth and the interests of later years.

I am not an expert on the detection of bird calls, but many of them I know and they live in my memory. I would like to recall the familiar ones that sweeten the days in the springtime and summer months. In my memory I still hear the mocking birds of the backland, but now I have outside my window the charm and beauty of the songs of the robin, the thrush, memory sounds made new again.

Those of us who once life upon the farm have a whole cluster of memory sounds. The cackle of the hens, the grunts of the pigs, the baa, baa of the sheep, the moo, moo of the cows, and the neighing of the horses in their stalls. These domestic sounds of natural life, so familiar to those of the countryside, the wild birds, the wind in the trees, and all these memory sounds were to be forever blotted from us how great would be our mental loss.

Thoreau gave tribute in his famous book Walden to the many sounds that reached his ear and comforted him, one of which was the whistle of the train that passed daily within hearing of Walden Pond. All through Burton's remarkable book, The Anatomy, there is the following line—"the tinkling of the pewter pot And in Gray's Elegy, after the first line, "The curfew tolls the knell of the parting day," you almost feel the shadows, and hear the echo of the ploughman's feet as he "homeward plods his weary way."

The most sacred of all sounds, however, are the remembered voices of those whom we have loved and lost. Never do they leave us, thanks to this wonderful memory of ours, for they remain to comfort, to reassure, and to inspire us to carry on with faith and courage.

W. H. Wakefield, Addresses Women's Hospital Auxiliary

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary was held on Tuesday last with Miss Ivy Dickens, president, presiding.

It was voted to make available to the Junior Auxiliary an amount sufficient to buy materials and wool to be made up into articles to replenish the Good Samaritan cupboard from which layettes are given to needy infants born at the hospital.

An important decision faces the auxiliary in finding suitable quarters for carrying on the Opportunity shop since the present space in the market building is to be taken over by the Public Health Department. It was decided to leave final arrangements to the discretion of the Opportunity Shop committee and members of the executive.

A letter was read from Mrs. Rhynas, president of the Ontario Hospital Auxiliary Association, congratulating the Board of Governors on the appointment of Mrs. W. C. Mikel to their group.

Another letter was read from Mr. Bruce Lattimer, expressing the appreciation of the Board of Governors for the resuscitator recently donated to the hospital by the auxiliary. This machine was demonstrated and explained by Mr. Wakefield, administrator of the hospital.

Mr. W. H. Wakefield then went on to discuss the Pathological department of the hospital. This is an important phase of hospital work and becoming increasingly so with the development of medical science. It covers three main groupings, the clinical, public health work and the examination of tissue.

In the clinical, routine blood examinations, urinalysis, basal metabolism tests and electrocardiograms are included.

The public health work takes up a great deal of time and is probably less known about by the general public. It includes the testing of milk and examination of well water. The latter runs up to 200 samples a day in the summer months.

The examination of tissue after removal by surgery is required by Ontario law. These examinations serve a three-fold purpose; to satisfy the surgeon as to the correct diagnosis, to satisfy the patient, and to make a permanent record. Films are in the making for a service to examine tissue during operative procedure.

A new pathologist to head this department is coming to the hospital on May 1st.

Following Mr. Wakefield's informative address, tea was served by Miss Potts and the student nurses. During this social hour, members were delighted to hear that the student nurses would do baby-sitting in their time off.

County Shores Suffer Damage By High Winds

Picton—Strong winds yesterday continued to do damage to various parts of the shoreline in Prince Edward county. The water, driven to this end of the lake due to high winds, coupled with the fact that it is unusually high at this time, as seen the shores bettered by wind and waves.

At Salmon Point, a section of road along the beach has been washed away. The breakwater and an unused lighthouse there have been broken up. The water, coming inland has caused trees to fall, while waves have washed up a variety of debris.

A section of road near Indian Point near Bloomfield for several hours as tree roots and logs were washed in from the lake.

West Point, a section of road is covered by debris and piers have been damaged. Outlet Beach close by is completely flooded and some cottages close to the water in many parts are being flooded. The water is expected to continue to rise until June 30, with the situation being aggravated by strong winds.

Comparison Angers Scotsman's Wife

Charleston, S. C., April 19—CP —The wife of a Scottish nobleman yesterday gave a tongue lashing to Lady Astor for saying Stalin looks like a Scotsman.

Lady Maxwell-Scott of Abbotsford, Scotland, said I do not intend to stand idly by and let Lady Astor compare my husband or any other Scotsman with Joseph Stalin. The Scottish people will deal with her when she goes to Scotland."

Lady Astor, former member of the British parliament said in a television interview in Washington Sunday that she received this impression of the Russian prime minister during a meeting several years ago:

"I thought he was a hard old fellow. He looked like a highlander. And you couldn't turn him off. He really looks like a Scotsman."

Lady Astor was born in Virginia. Lady Maxwell-Scott in Ohio.

Lady Maxwell-Scott's husband, Maj.-Gen. Sir Walter Maxwell-Scott, 76, veteran soldier now retired, is the great-great-grandson of Sir Walter Scott.

Deaf Pupils Will Present Snow White And Seven Dwarfs

Once again the students of the Ontario School for the Deaf are going to show their ability on the stage as they present another well loved Fairy Tale — the story of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Although these boys and girls are deaf, they speak their lines, just as hearing actors would do. Instead of hearing each other say their parts, they follow one another by reading their lips. The three capacity crowds which attended last year's performances of Cinderella were amazed and delighted at the ability of these deaf children.

This year's cast of 45 includes such familiar story - book names as Snow White, Prince Charming, the King of the Castle, Grumpy, Sneezy, Sleepy, Doc, Bashful, Happy and Dopey. These last seven, or course, are the Dwarfs in whose house Snow White lives while she is hiding from her step mother, the beautiful, but wicked Queen.

All the characters will be wearing gorgeous costumes made by the girls in the sewing room. The boys, not to be out - done by the girls, have made all the stage properties in their shops.

Mr. Alec Gordon is directing the play and is providing an added treat by having the ladies' choir of Bridge St. Church sing some original music he has written especially for the play. Included on the program is a skit by two senior girls, and also a number by the Rhythm Band.

It will be presented on three nights only — April 21, 22, and 24, at 8:15 p. m., and since the accommodation of the O. S. D. Auditorium is limited to approximately 350, it might be wise to get early. As in former years a voluntary offering is accepted to be given to the Pupils' Benefit Fund.

MARMORA

A. V. Gaebel Visits A. F. & A. M. Lodge

Marmora—Marking the official visit of Right Wor. Bro. A. V. Gaebel, DDGM, of Prince Edward district to Marmora, AF and AM 222, on Monday evening, was seen the largest attendance of visiting brethren for many years. Thereby every adjacent lodge in the district was well represented.

Over 100 brethren sat down to the turkey dinner in the town hall, at which St. Paul's Ladies Guild were caterers.

Wor. Bro. Sidney Sandham, Master of the lodge, discharged the duties of toastmaster. After the honoring of the King and Craft, two Belleville brethren, Bruce Sills and Harold McNish, gave short musical numbers, the latter also singing "Wagon Wheels."

Community singing was led by Wor. Bro. A. L. Drew with Bro. Canon J. M. Brownlie as accompanist. The toast to Grand Lodge was submitted by Right Wor. Bro. C. H. Bunkard PDDGM of Prince Edward. The DDGM in reply expressed his pleasure at the large representative body of Freemasons who were present and touched upon the relationship of the fundamentals of masonry to the needs of mankind at the present time, which he declared was a tough era for Masonry as a whole. One fourth of the earth only, he pointed out was fertile ground for masonry to grow and flourish, but where it is still established it does prosper because of its faith in God. Bro. Canon J. M. Brownlie followed with the vocal solo, "Bless This House."

Toast to Brethren

The toast to the visiting brethren was proposed by Wo. Bro. C. R. Whittemore, responses being forthcoming in the Lodge session which follo.ed.

Thanks to the ladies was extended by Bro. T. J. Bateman, prior to his submitting the junior warden's toast.

Adjournment was then made to the Masonic Hall where the Second Degree was exemplified and a helpful address given by the visiting representative of Grand Lodge.

Temporary Rent Freeze Proposal Before Cabinet

Toronto, April 19 (CP) — A proposal for a temporary freeze on all self-contained dwellings and lodges will be placed before the Ontario cabinet today.

The freeze, if put in effect until new Ontario rent control rules are worked out, was recommended in a motion adopted Wednesday by the legislature's committee on rents. It would apply only to the amount of rent that could be charged but not to other conditions of a lease.

The motion was brought in by J. L. Dowling, CCF member of the legislature for Hamilton East. It was seconded by Attorney-General Porter, who promised the recommendation will go before the cabinet today.

"This is a blanket freeze to hold the line for the time being," said Mr. Porter. "And any possible and practical formula will be worked out as quickly as possible."

Barber Forced To Retire After 49 Years Service

Campbellford — Mr. Charles Ackerman, west side barber who with 49 years of service in his trade to the people of Campbellford, was the town's senior active business man, has been forced to retire for reasons of ill-health. It is unfortunate that Mr. Ackerman could not remain in his business to complete the half-century of service, but this was impossible. Mr. Ackerman, who was unable to be at his shop for the past while, has now disposed of his business to Mr. Glenn Taylor of Toronto.

Milk Producers Want More Money

Toronto, April 19 — (CP) Toronto milk producers said Wednesday they are losing money and would have to make a further increase if they do not get more than $4.30 paid to distributors.

In turn, distributors announced any increase would have to be handed on to the householder in the form of a 2½-cent-a-quart boost in the price of delivered milk.

W. H. Wilmot of the Milk Producer's League said higher labor and feed costs were the major factors in increasing production costs.

The present 20½ - cent retail rate for milk delivered at homes is a temporary one set by the Ontario Milk Control Board while increases asked by the distributors are reviewed.

Other speakers included Earl Catherwood (PC — Haldimand) and Robert Fair (SC — Battle River). They called attention to the farmer's position in Canada's economic life and asked that he be given a better break.

Mr. Catherwood repeated a Progressive Conservative suggestion for a Commonwealth Trade Conference to assure the farmer of continuing, long-term markets for his produce.

Mr. Fair asked parity prices for farm products which would give the farmer a larger share in the country's national income. He also should get tax concessions to compensate for longer hours of work.

The plight of Canada's farming populations was placed before the Commons.

The government should open negotiations now to salvage Canadian markets in the United Kingdom and Europe.

He expressed hope the government would meet the demands of agricultural organizations for a butter floor price of at least 62 cents a pound.

Mr. Fair reported that farmers, while they make up 25 per cent of the Canadian population, receive only 10 to 15 per cent of the national income.

"That's not good enough," he suggested.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1951

Canadian Diplomat to China Returns After Five Years To Report to External Affairs

Ottawa, April 19 — (CP) Home for the first time in five years, a Canadian diplomat will report to External Affairs headquarters Friday on what's going on in communist China. It may be the last such report for a long time to come.

But the public will know little or nothing of what Chester A. Ronning has to say. The department, for the time being at least, has ruled out interviews or statements on China by the former Camrose, Alta., school teacher.

This policy of public silence is part of a general tendency to refrain from official statements which might only make it tougher for Canadians still in China, some of them imprisoned.

Mr. Ronning, middle-aged teacher-turned-diplomat, reached San Francisco this week from Hong Kong and is coming here by train. He will report to External Affairs Minister Pearson and other officials.

He has spent the last five years at Nanking, first as a member of Canada's diplomatic staff accredited to the Nationalist government, finally as officer in charge of the mission which stayed in Nanking when the reds took over and transferred the capital to Peiping.

Mission Closed Out

The Mission, never recognized by the reds, has been closed out. Mr. Ronning is the last of its Canadian diplomats to come home.

With him came H. L. Staines, a clerk, who has headed for Vancouver and one month's leave. Mr. Ronning will go on two-months leave shortly.

It was reported when he reached Hong Kong that he had had some trouble getting out of China, but this has not been confirmed here and officials say they have no comment to make.

Representations are being made through United Kingdom diplomatic channels to Britain recognizing the reds, Canada doesn't, on behalf of five Canadian nuns now imprisoned as well as other Canadians.

Mr. Pearson struck the official note in the Commons this week when he said Canada is hoping the five nuns will be allowed to return to Canada. He added:

"It may take considerable time before the case of these Sisters can be cleared up and the Canadian government is anxious that nothing should be done or said at this time which could conceivably worsen their positions."

VISIT BASILICA

Vatican City, April 18. (AP)—Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh visited St. Peter's Basilica today.

They were met at the door by Msgr. Ludovico Kaas, secretary of the congregation that has charge of the Basilica building. He served as guide for the royal party.

The Princess and the Duke paused a moment at the tomb of the Stuarts, which contains the remains of James III, Charles Edward Stuart and Henry Cardinal Stuart, who was King of Great Britain, France and Ireland.

TWO TURNED OVER

Boston, April 19. (AP)—Two American destroyers were turned over to the Greek Navy yesterday under the Mutual Defence Assistance program.

Child Reported Improved After Blood Transfusion

Chicago, April 19. (AP)—Physicians reported improvement today in the condition of eight-day-old Cheryl Lynn Labrenz after a blood transfusion opposed by her parents and given after court action.

The child is suffering from a blood condition caused by the incompatibility of blood types of her parents. Sixty centilitres of blood were injected into her system yesterday. Further treatment will depend on her needs.

The parents, Darrell Labrenz, 25, and Rhoda, 20, are Jehovah's Witnesses. From the time of the child's birth they refused to approve transfusions on religious grounds. They maintained such treatment violated their interpretation of a biblical injunction against "eating blood".

After the young couple repeatedly rejected pleas of medical men, the state went into juvenile court yesterday and had a guardian appointed for the baby. The guardian, a court officer, immediately consented to transfusion and the blood was administered.

The court acted under a law permitting it to take jurisdiction over children upon complaint that parents are not providing proper care. After the court proceeding, Labrenz said in an interview:

"This has been done against our consent. Those who forced the issue are the ones who are responsible for sinning."

BODY RECOVERED

Merriton, April 19 — (CP) — Body of Aida Tonelli, 23, missing since April 8, was recovered Wednesday from an intake in a power dam at the Inter Lake tissue mills property. Workmen filling in the intake spotted the woman's leg sticking out of the mud and notified police.

Newsprint Will Be Regulated, Govt. Controlled

Ottawa, April 19—(CP)—Canada, the world clamoring for her newsprint, took an initial step Wednesday to prepare for a more balanced international distribution of her huge production.

In a move unprecedented in peacetime, newsprint and mechanical and chemical pulps were declared essential materials. The defence production department was empowered to bring them under government control.

R. B. Fowler, 45-year-old president of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, was named director of a newly created departmental branch which will have authority to regulate and control exports.

F. L. Mitchell, 55, and J. M. Smith, 29, will join him in the new branch. Mr. Mitchell was deputy pulp and paper co-ordinator in the Second World War.

A 10-nation international pulp and paper committee now is being set up in Washington.

Canada will be a member of that group, part of an International Materials Conference, considering emergency allocation of materials to meet the needs of rearming democracies.

However, officials pointed out that any recommendation by this committee to rechannel Canadian supplies likely will be at the expense of United States customers.

Will Boost Production

Canada, which produced about 5,375,000 tons of newsprint last year, likely will increase production slightly this year, bringing her output to the highest level in history.

But it won't be sufficient to meet all the demand. And, experts say, cutting of pulp wood has just about reached its peak. The newsprint industry soon may be reaching the limit if its expansion.

If there is to be any redistribution of Canadian supplies, it will have to be through U. S. agreement to accept reduced supplies.

Another significant development is the possibility that the U. S. may put a price ceiling on climbing newsprint prices. This could be detrimental to Canadian newsprint interests.

If the price goes out of hand, the Canadian government will have power to invoke price ceilings of its own.

VOTED AGAINST JOINING

New York, April 19 (AP)—Columbia Broadcasting System office workers yesterday voted 308 to 290 not to join the American Newspaper Guild (C.I.O.). The Guild lost out in a run-off National Labor Relations Board election, in which 693 employees chose only between the Guild and "no union"

Wet Weather Delays Agricultural Work

Toronto, April 19 (CP)—Rainy weather put the damper on Ontario's agricultural operations last week.

Spring seeding has been held up in most sections of the province. Although heavy rains have taken away snow, fields are too wet to be worked on.

However, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said today in its weekly crop report that a good harvest is expected.

Wheat and fresh seedings in Brant and Grey counties have come through the winter in excellent shape. In Brant, Elgin and Eastmand counties in Southern Ontario, hay and wheat crops look promising.

Auction sales are still in high gear in Wellington county. Steers are bringing $10 a head more than purebred heifers.

Navy Negotiating For Repurchase Of 34 Warships

Ottawa, April 9 (CP) — The navy is negotiating for the repurchase of 34 warships which will be put back in fighting trim with modern equipment.

Most of the ships are believed to be Second World War minesweepers and frigates sold as war surplus to Marine Industries Ltd. at Sorel, Que. It was agreed at the time of sale that they might be bought back again at the same price.

The matter was touched on in the Commons for Donald Smith (L—Gloucester-Shilbourne) who hoped that negotiations for repurchase of 34 ships are proceeding. It gave no details.

MAY BE TURKEY BUZZARD

Timmins, Ont., April 19 (CP)—A mystery bird of the Timmins district, a jet black bird said to have a nine - inch wingspread, eight-inch talons and four -inch beak, now is thought to be a turkey buzzard.

A. L. Austin of the Broulan property near Timmins said he had seen turkey buzzards before and judged this to be one from the description.

Kelly Chamandy operator of a museum of Northern Ontario oddities has posted a reward of $150 for the bird if it is taken alive.

GIVEN FIVE YEARS

Cleveland, April 19. (AP) Marvin Orr, whose wife testified he put her to work as a prostitute and beat her when she didn't earn enough money, was sentenced yesterday to five years in prison. Orr's wife, Francis, 20, testified she had given him $10,000 of her profits since they were married in 1947.

Russians Tell How They Shield Crops From Winds

Paris, April 19 (CP) — The Russians Wednesday told Canada's No. 1 weather man how they shield their crops from destructive, parching prairie winds, similar,to the dry Chinook of Western Canada.

The Russians explained to Dr. Andrew Thomson of Toronto, controller of the Canadian meteorological service, that they have planted a thick belt of trees across the path of the prairie winds in southern Russia.

This forces the wind upward to cooler layers of the stratosphere to form rain-bearing clouds. The result, the Russians, claimed, has been an increased yield of wheat and cotton in the area.

The Canadian Chinook is a strong warm and dry wind blowing from the west or north over the Rocky Mountains.

MAY EVACUATE RESIDENTS

Tokyo, April 19. (AP)— Mt Mihara, a volcano on Oshima Island about 50 miles from Tokyo, erupted today with a loud roar. Authorities were considering evacuating the 13,053 inhabitants, and ordered 800 fishing boats to stand by.

Nehru Has No Information Indicating Possibilities Of Early Peace Conference

New Delhi, April 19 — (AP)— Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, a leader in efforts to end hostilities in Korea, said today he has no information indicating the possibility of early peace talks.

He was commenting in an interview on reports from United Nations headquarters in New York that hopes for peace talks had been aroused by President Truman's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Supreme commander in the Pacific.

Some sources have said the dismissal might have been an indication of American willingness to sit down at a conference table with red china, but Nehru said "We have no such information."

"I believe those reports from Lake Success are based entirely upon the North Korean note to the United Nations," he added.

The latest North Korean note demanded a peace settlement, and raised some hopes among the Asian - bloc nations heading the conciliation efforts because the message left out demands concerning Chinese U. N. membership and the red Chinese claim to Formosa.

The U. S. State Department has dismissed the note as a repetition of its previous stand and a propaganda device.

"When we feel we can help, we are willing to do so," Nehru said, adding that the Indian government is in close touch both with U. N. headquarters and the red Chinese capital of Peiping. But he indicated he has found no sign thus far that the time is near for an attempt toward a negotiated peace in Korea.

(Earlier, K. M. Panikkar, Indian Ambassador to Peiping, said conditions do not favor a new Indian attempt to mediate the Korean war.

(He said that India has made no new peace approach to red China, and that a sounding of opinion there indicates that none would be advisable.)

DESERONTO

Several Attend Jr. Auxiliary Festival

Deseronto— Fifteen girls and three leaders, motored to Kingston on Saturday morning to join the 250 girls between the ages of seven and 13 years for the annual festival of the junior auxiliary of the Diocese of Ontario.

Girls from Deseronto were Dorothy Crabbe, Sonya McEwen, Alberta Marks, Lynn Bender, Sandra Fry, Barbara Miller, Sharon Burley, Diane Soal, Donna Soal, Lois Hill, Mary Ann Maracle, Carol Fraser and the leaders Mrs. Kidd, Mrs. Walker and Mrs Church.

Service at St. George's

The day began with service in St. George's Cathedral when the yearly thank offering was presented amounting to $82. A feature of the service was a contribution of Christmas gifts which were arranged on a table at the foot of the chancel steps and dedicated by the dean to be sent to Indians in the far north.

The juniors then marched to St. George's Hall where refreshments were served and the meeting took place.

The Deseronto girls sang a medley of junior songs and four of the smallest girls, Dorothy Crabbe, Sonya McEwen, Lynn Bender and Alberta Marks put on a play, each girl representing one of the figures in the missionary study of China, Japan and Africa.

The collection of $21 was voted to an appeal for lumber for dog sledges for a missionary in the Arctic.

The Deseronto branch was given a certificate of "honorable mention" for their year's work, one of three presented at the festival.

The juniors are grateful to Mr. Brim, Mrs. Church, Mrs. Soal and Canon Kidd, for furnishing the transportation.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

Miss Major, surprised, looked up sharply.

"I'll be in and tell you about it tomorrow," Tim chuckling, enjoying her fall from aloofness, shuffled out of the office.

The Empire rose in gray and solemn majesty on Park Avenue. Almost every night there were glitter and gay elegance at its front entrance. But this night with the snow softly falling, there seemed to be more glitter and elegance than usual.

The Corinthians' Ball was an unique institution in that, while it was a strictly social affair, it was nonetheless the great couturiers' night of the year. For, that night, the first designers of the world presented for the first time the one gown they thought their best.

The ball was also unique in that the jury that chose the dress of the year was composed entirely of men. The ordinary professional model did not, as Miss Major explained, model the dresses but the guests at the ball.

The honor of the award brought not only distinction to the winning house but considerable acclaim and business as well.

Tim had read of the event in a fashion magazine, and, as he so called it, it had seemed to him a sumptuous fiction out of some grandiose book or film.

Now, as he stood at the curb a short distance from the hotel entrance and watched the smartly groomed men and beautifully attired women glide from the shiniest limousines across the carpeted and canopied sidewalk into the vast, vaulted splendor of the lobby of the Empire, it seemed even more of a fiction than ever. It was fascinating far from a wheel chair in the Summit Hospital, Cedarbrook, to the entrance of the Empire.

A heavily coated, gold-braided doorman, who had moved down the sidewalk to greet every newly parked taxicab, came upon Tim Reese.

"Kind of chilly, isn't it, Mister?" the door man seeing his canes in the snow, was sympathetic.

"In more ways than one," Tim grinned over his upturned fleece coat collar. "I feel like The Little Match Girl."

The doorman chuckled. "You look more like Stella Dallas." He was well-spoken, as benefited the chief doorman of the Empire. "But I'm going to have to be the heavy. The ladies are wearing a lot of fancy hardware tonight, and it behooves me to ask you to amble along."

"Guess there's no chance of me ambling along into the Main Ballroom, is there?"

The doorman gave Tim a quick sharp look. "Lost your mind, or something?"

"Probably," Tim could not resist trying out his joke again. "It's my first night out since June, 1944."

The doorman looked down at the canes and up at Tim's face. "Polio?"

Tim shook his head. "Fireworks."

The doorman was puzzled. "I've been hanging my hat up at the Yetserday Club since Cedarbrook." Tim explained. "Thought I'd like to compare it with the layout in the Empire here."

"I see." The doorman, understanding, nodded slowly.

A bellboy who had just carried a guest's suitcases to a car was scurrying back to the doors.

"Jigger!" the doorman called to the bellboy.

The bellboy, shivering, stopped. The doorman winked at him. "Jigger, this gentleman here is with the television unit in the Main ballroom." He winked at Jigger. "Show him in, will you? You'll find them up in the balcony."

"Okey-doke. Right this way." Jigger, cold, turned quickly back to the entrance.

"Thanks, chief." Tim grateful turned to the doorman, fumbled for his wallet.

The doorman shook his head. "Don't use the stuff. Give it to Jigger."

So, Tim Reese found himself comfortably seated in a corner of the balcony of the Main Ballroom looking down on the splendor that whicied to the music on the floor below. A few feet away from him the television men had their cameras set up and Tim to all appearances was one of the unit.

If the elegance and opulence Tim had seen at the copied entrance of the Empire a few minutes back had seemed a fiction to him, the scene below now was pure fantasy.

It would have been an extraordinary spectacle to anybody except one jaded with luxury and weary of pageantry. But to a man who had spent years knowing only hospital walls and a rustic landscape it could only be fantastic.

The men in their flawless formal black and white seemed like marionettes supporting brilliant, jewel-ed and gorgeously garnished creatures in some sort of celestial ballet. The glowing wall lamps, the sumptuous flower decorations, the romantic music, added to the grand illusion.

Tim searched the whirling mass beneath him for Jean Roland, followed with his eyes each flashing face, each tossing fair head, but he could not find her.

The minutes whirled by with the dancers and the evening was half over before Tim realized it. Then, the dancing and the music and the gaiety stopped. The time had come to choose the dress of the year.

Jean had not been dancing. She had been saving herself till the time came for the modeling of the dress, and it was then that Tim saw her first.

The lights in the ballroom were dimmed for the presentation of each one and where radiant spotlights lit up a flower-like platform.

Beautiful women beautifully gowned moved on to the platform, modeled and went on. Each was greeted with applause. And each to Tim seemed more beautiful than the one before.

The gowns too, were so striking and original that Tim's heart began to sink. Would Jean have a dress that could measure up to this competition? Certainly none he had ever sent would be equal to it.

Then, Jean made her appearance. There was an applause at first as had greeted the others but a hush and the immobility of complete admiration.

Jean mounted to the platform and then Tim saw her clearly and saw she was modeling his winter while gown. For a moment he was fearful the tribute of silence had been for Jean's beauty, not for the gown.

It was so simple, Tim thought, too chaste. But then the applause broke and looking down, Tim saw the applause came mostly from men and, remembering the jury that night was made up entirely of men, he knew that Jean and the gown had won.

Tim Reese laughed quietly to himself in deep satisfaction. Jean Roland had not cared much for the gown on the first place because it was a design for men, but very wisely she had worn it that night. She knew her jury.

And Jean was right. When the ballots were counted the men had voted that Jean had modeled The Dress of the Year.

The chairman of the ball ascended to the platform to present the prizes: a pair of diamond earrings for the model, a miniature, gold mannequin for the designer. He made a little speech and called Jean to the platform, gave her the earrings.

He made a second little speech and called Mr. Paul Panciera to the platform, gave him the little mannequin. The chairman complimented Mr. Panciera for his talent in knowing the tastes of women, demonstrated so often in the past, and for his talent in knowing the taste of men, demonstrated so well there that evening.

Tim realized someone had to take the bows and if this were the Empire's head of the firm, he was the logical person to do it.

Tim's face expected Mr. Pancera in his speech of acceptance to give some credit to the actual designer, to refer, even indirectly, to Tim himself. But Mr. Pancera made no even slight reference to Tim. He praised Jean and took the rest of the glory for himself.

Indeed, to Tim's complete exasperation, Mr. Pancera was smug about the award, accepting it with an easy egotism, passing the gown off as something he considered one of his lesser achievements.

Tim watched him glibly bow himself off the platform, nonchalantly acknowledged the applause, and his exasperation grew to anger. He belonged in this evening somewhere, he told himself. After all, he had designed the winning dress.

The music began. Again the dancers danced, and again the whirling, ever-changing pattern of black-and-white marionettes and radiantly jeweled and gowned creatures came to life. But it was no longer fantasy for Tim. Shadow, falsehood and deceit had dispelled the celestial aura. Who was this tall, sharply-moustached urbane and egotistical Mr. Panciera? Could he really be the unprepossessing proprietor of one-half of the firm that Jean had led him to picture on her visits to Cedarbrook? And why hadn't Jean telephoned or written to him about this important evening? It was his creation she wore, wasn't it?

Tim, in the balcony got laboriously to his feet. He was going to find the answers.

Jigger, the bellboy, found Jean at the bar in the lounging off the Main Ballroom. She and Mr. Pancera were being gaily toasted by a group of admirers. He waited until the hubbub of the toast was over, then gave Jean the note he carried.

Indifferent to the contents of the note (Jean had had many notes in her life), she finished her wine before she read it.

Mr. Tim Reese? Her shadow of shock cross her face. He took the letter. from her limp fingers, read it.

"No," he said in quick annoyance. "What does he mean hurrying up here without warning? No. He can't do this. Send word you are tired and have to go home. Tell him you will call him tomorrow."

Jean, still mute from shock, indicated Jigger who stood by waiting for instructions.

"The gentleman is waiting" Mr. Panciera questioned the bellboy.

Jigger jerked a thumb over his shoulder, "In the lobby."

Jean finally was able to speak. "I'll have to go." She lowered her voice. "I may not be able to come back for a while. Forget about me."

Jean followed Jigger toward the lobby while Mr. Panciera, frowning with annoyance, looked on.

The lobby of the Empire was many colored and richly shadowed, and Jean, trailing Jigger, came upon Tim even before she saw him.

He, from a low, deeply-cushioned chair, looked up at her, tall and slender in white against the softly shadowed background, and immediately his anger left him. Never had he seen her at night before and never had he seen her so lovely.

She, looking down at him and discovering, instead of the helpless, pale creature of the wheel chair, a healthy, extremely handsome and well-groomed young man, was startled.

"After reading in the paper about Syntona, I thought I would give it a trial and it has really worked wonders for me. Early Wynn and Bob Lemon Sound Warning that Cleveland Will be Tough in Loop Race

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Early Wynn and Bob Lemon sound a warning that Cleveland will be a tough nut to crack in the American League.

Wynn's four-hitter in a 10-inning battle at Detroit yesterday, following Lemon's two-hit victory opening day, emphasize the class of the Indians' pitching staff. And Bobby Feller hasn't worked yet.

The big four of Lemon, Wynn, Feller and Mike Garcia rank with the best. All Manager Lou Boudreau needs is a solid relief pitcher.

Wynn and Jim Hegan, his catcher, teamed up on the Tigers in yesterday's 4-3 victory. Hegan took care of the hitting with a homer and three singles.

After Hegan's homer tied the score in the ninth, the Tribe knocked out Dizzy Trout in the 10th. Ray Boone singled home Larry Doby with the winning run and Bob Kennedy scored the extra run on Pat Mullin's error.

Pitching was the big story with the defending champion New York Yankees, too. Eddie Lopat stymied the red-faced Boston Red Sox with 6-1 no-hit innings and beat them 6-1, allowing only two singles. Following Lopat's gem in the opening day shutout, this defeated the Red Sox stock several points.

Lopat clouted a two-run homer in the eighth for the final Yankee score.

Boudreau Keeps Pace

Bucky Harris' Washington Senators kept step with the Yankees and Indians as they won their second straight by defeating the Athletics 6-4 in a night game, Trailing 4-3 going into the ninth, Boudreau unloaded on Lou Brissie who walked two and gave up a two-run triple to Irv Noren and a double to Mickey Vernon before he was relieved by Hank Wyse.

Bob Kuzava, lifted for a pinch hitter in the ninth, was the winning pitcher. Chuck Stobbs was charged with the loss.

In fast the entire major league program of five games drew a total of only 29,961 with 18,143 of them at Yankee Stadium.

Manager Casey Stengel of the Phillies' repeat pennant hopes, failed in his first relief appearance of 1951 against Cincinnati when one run and nobody out in the ninth, Knothole let the game wriggle away on Duke Snider's tying triple and Jackie Robinson's winning single, 4-3.

Willie Jones' two homers and one by Dick Sisler, pennant clinching hero of 1950, provided all the Phil runs.

Ted Kluszewski's pennant time table was disrupted at Boston when Sam Jethroe homered with two on in the ninth for an 8-5 victory over New York Giants.

The western teams in the National were not scheduled. In the American League a night game between the White Sox and Browns was rained out.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A DISTINCT LOSS!

There was with sincere regret that we learned the other day that Jack Christie, secretary of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association for the past eight years, has tendered his resignation. No reasons were given but it is presumed it stems from the treatment he received at a recent playoff game when an irate fan locked him, along with the referees in a dressing room. The trio was forced to stay there until released some three quarters of an hour later.

It is hoped, and all minor hockey officials, sportswriters and fans associated with minor hockey throughout the province, will concur with us, that the genial Jack will reconsider his decision.

For the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, or any other athletic body for that matter, can ill afford to lose the services of men of the calibre of Jack Christie.

For the past eight years he has been the main bulwark of the OMHA. The backbone of eight executives, Christie, through his untiring efforts, has built and expanded his association until today it is one of the strongest minor hockey organizations in the world, if not the strongest.

Jack was not the desk type of executive. His interest in the hockey welfare of provincial moppets went further than his typewriter. He is perhaps the best known, from a personal standpoint, athletic executive in Ontario. He made it a point to visit the far-flung hockey outposts of his association. He attended every championship game, and always accepted invitations to attend complimentary banquets whether in Toronto, or Podunk's Corners.

His personality made him many friends. His associates on the executive admired and respected his judgment. His friendliness, co-operative spirit and willingness to help in any way earned for him a well-deserved popularity.

The secretarial vacancy will be hard to fill, if Jack persists in resigning. It is the hope of all associated with the Ontario Minor Hockey Association throughout the province that he reconsiders his decision to retire.

OPEN LETTER TO JUNIOR AND MINOR HOCKEY PLAYERS—

Listen fellas, and by that we mean junior, juvenile, bantam and midget pookshaxers.

On Wednesday, April 25th, you are to be the guests of the Belleville Hockey Association at a party in Memorial Arena. There will be outstanding National Hockey League stars, motion pictures of hockey games, presentations, and a luncheon.

The guest speaker will be Gus Bodnar, of the Chicago Black Hawks. Also along will be Bob Wilson, star eastern scout for the Hawks. And if the current Stanley Cup series goes to six games, none other than Bill Tobin, bossman of the Chicago team, will be here. It's going to be a grand affair so make a note of the date, eh?.

A GREAT COACH!

Probably having run out of eulogistic phraseology for the great "Rishore", Montreal sportswriters are turning their mills to the praise of the Canadiens coach Dick Irvin.

One says he is the "driving force in the Habs' surprise success". Another writes, "Gloomy, he may be at times. But he quite often is, yet no matter which mood he happens to feel like assuming you can't take it away from the guy — he is the game's number one mastermind. His parallel in football is the late Knute Rockne; in baseball, John McGraw." Wow, them's big words, chums.

A Hockey News writer says "it was not Irvin's coaching technique against the Red Wings that earned him support as hockey's top coach for 1950-51, rather it was the end of the schedule drive. However in the Detroit series he did establish himself beyond all doubt as a genius at the art of leading a club over the hill".

The boys in the press box snickered when word got around that Irvin made his players change their underwear between the second and third overtime period. But to Irvin it made practical sense. In a game that has lasted so long, speed was sure to be the deciding factor. And to lessen a player's weight by three or four pounds was certain to make a difference. It did, for Richard stole the puck from Kelly and netted the winner. It was reported the Wings changed their underwear during the next overtime game.

The story is being told that Jolly Jawn Adams, Red Wings master mind once said of Irvin, "That guy has the first nickel in every nude. In fact he washes his own socks on the road."

This was relayed to the Habs' coach who calmly commented: "At least I wash mine. Adams wears his until they drop off."

Happy Chandler Likely to Resign Within Week

New York, April 19—(AP)—A. B. (Happy) Chandler, whose contract as baseball commissioner was not renewed, may resign within a week, the Associated Press learned Wednesday.

Chandler, who was to have been here Tuesday to hand out world series trophies to the New York Yankees, spent the day in Washington instead and visited members of the U. S. senate He then left for his home in Versailles, Ky.

Chandler was senator from Kentucky when named baseball commissioner.

The commissioner was refused a new contract by major-league owners last December and was turned down again last month in Miami, Fla. After the first rebuff, Chandler said he would stay in office every second of his contract which runs until April, 1953.

Following the Miami meeting with the owners, however, he said he would resign if the majority wanted him to. The owners have a screening committee busy now, searching for possible successors.

The AP's source, who asked not to be named, said Chandler might enter the Democratic race for governor of Kentucky.

Should Chandler resign, baseball would be governed by the executive council, made up of the two major-league presidents and two club presidents.

Sydney Beaten In Last Minute By Valleyfield

Sydney, N.S., April 19 — (CP) — The Quebec senior hockey champions came from behind last night to win the first game of the best-of-seven Alexander Cup semi-finals 3-2.

Left-winger Jack Schmidt, a former Boston Bruin, got into the open for the first time of the game and converted Jack Irvine's pass for the winning goal for Valleyfield three minutes and 36 of the third period.

The second game will be played here tonight. If Sydney wins the third game will also be played here Saturday. Quebec leads the series shifts to Montreal for the third game Sunday.

Valleyfield made the Maritime major champs dizzy from watching Lionel Bellefeuille passing plays. Only a superb defence kept the Braves at bay.

Kitoute Joanete, who scored three goals in the Q.S.H.L. final title against Quebec Aces, was paid for his feats. Millionaires players checked him relentlessly handed out lots of lusty bells.

Paul Larivee opened the scoring for Valleyfield at the five-minute mark in the first period but Dean MacBride tied it up in the first minute of the second frame. Don Whalen sent Sydney fans wild as he scored midway through the final period to send Millionaires into a short-lived lead. Less than two minutes later Dick Irvine tied the score and set the stage for Schmidt's winning effort.

Saskatoon Shown Little Hospitality By St. Michael's

Toronto, April 19 — (CP) — Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs showed the visiting Saskatoon Quakers little hospitality in Maple Leaf Gardens last night.

They gorged the westerners with a 4-2 defeat and grabbed a 2-0 hold on their best-of-seven Alexander Cup semi-final. A trip to Saskatoon last week gave Monarchs the first two games, 5-3 and 4-1.

Fourth — and possibly final game of the series is scheduled here Friday.

Busted hunk of all was Monarch goalie Phil Hughes, and Riley Mullen, Quakers' coach, is the first to admit it. "The big trouble we've got is trying to beat Hughes," the affable Saskatooner commented after last night's game. "That boy is sensational."

But Quakers also appeared slightly bewildered by the size of the Gardens. Monarchs capitalized on their confusion in the first period, piling up three goals that Saskatoon was never able to overtake.

When Quakers did get going in the last two periods, the lanky lad from Port Arthur stopped them every time but two.

As in the first two games of the series, Saskatoon outshot the Toronto team, 33 to 22.

Gord Hannigan, Johnny Uhrianec and Bill McCracken scored for Monarchs in the first period and Ed Mulligan shoved Toronto ahead 4-0 early in the second.

Howie Milford finally put Quakers on the scoring board with a hard shot that Hughes didn't see. George Senick, who lived up to his reputation for St. Mike's have given him as the fastest man they've met all season, picked up the last Saskatoon goal in the third.

Eight Teams Will be Included In Int. League

Waterloo, April 19 (CP) —Intermediate baseball showed signs of revival at Wednesday night's spring business meeting of the Inter-County Baseball Association.

An eight-team intermediate league was organized in two divisions. Each will play a home and a single schedule of interlocking games.

Last year, only two intermediate teams entered competition.

After the meeting, delegates from Guelph Maple Leafs of the senior league arrived to announce they had solved their financial difficulties and would know for certain tomorrow or Friday whether they could field a team.

Leafs would boost to seven the number of teams in the senior league this season. The others are London, Kitchener, Waterloo, Galt, Brantford and St. Thomas.

Eastern division of the Intermediate League embraces Kitchener, Hespeler, Fergus and Listowel. The western group includes St. Thomas, Aylmer, St. Thomas and a junior team from London.

Definite junior 'A' starters are Kitchener, Waterloo, Stratford and Preston, with London holding a bye and Guelph considered a possibility.

More than 50 delegates passed a recommendation to the Ontario Baseball Association that four team tournaments replace semi-final and final playoffs in all senior leagues.

Bill Farquharson of London, who moved the recommendation, suggested the four survivors of each series play a one-day tournament at a central point such as Toronto to decide the winner.

Rochester Wings Whip Toronto Leafs in Opener

(By The Associated Press)

Maybe Fred Haigh was a little hasty in sending Nippy Jones to Rochester. As long as Mr. Louis Cardinal, owner must be giving that deal a second thought today.

What does Jones do in the first game with Rochester? Two homers good for three runs as the Red Wings whipped Toronto, 9-5

The game was one of four that ended the lid off the International League's 63th consecutive season. In a day game Syracuse defeated Buffalo 6-3 while at night Utica edged Springfield 8-4 and Montreal whipped Baltimore 15-7.

Jones was the big gun in Rochester's nine-hit attack against two Toronto hurlers. His two dentical runs, however, came in the eighth inning when the champion Red Wings jammed four tallies across the plate, giving reliever Johnny Yuhas the verdict over Elmer Singleton.

At Syracuse the Chiefs also used a four-run eighth-inning rally to batter defeat in to victory, Art Hartley went the route for Syracuse, with a seven-hitter. Rudy Marasin took the loss.

Ottawa, replacing Jersey City in the league, won its first start with a three-run rally in the ninth to top Springfield. Held to three hits, Ottawa won the game on four walks, an error and a hit batsman. Reliever George Heller was the winner, Tony Jacobs the loser.

Junior Gilliam, with three singles, a homer and six runs batted in, led Montreal to its lopsided victory over Baltimore. Don Hoak, George Byam and Bob Morgan, just back from Brooklyn Dodgers, homered for the Royals. Bob Alexander hurled a six-hitter for Montreal.

The four games drew a total of 33,150 paid, topped by 13,347 for the afternoon game at Rochester. Syracuse had 8,004 in the afternoon, Springfield 2,603 and Baltimore 9,208 at night.

Forest Products Laboratories Have New Bat

(By The Canadian Press)

Push back those ballpark tenders, fellows, or home runs will be a dime a dozen.

Forest Products Laboratories at Madison, Wis., have come out with a new bat they say will make things easy for the Ralph Kiners, Joe DiMaggios and Ted Williams.

R. F. A. Johnson, chief of the laboratories division of lumber mechanics, told about it in an interview Wednesday.

Because the bat is lighter it can be swung harder, he said, and because it is laminated (made of two pieces glued together) it is stronger than the one - piece bat required by professional baseball.

Leafs would boost to seven the number of teams in the senior league this season. The others are London, Kitchener, Waterloo, Galt, Brantford and St. Thomas.

Fort Frances Winner of Series With Nanaimo

Winnipeg, April 19 — (CP) — Fort Frances Canadians swept into the Allan Cup finals by whipping Nanaimo Clippers 11-3 last night to capture the Western Canada senior hockey title.

The Western Ontario squad will meet either Owen Sound Mercurys or Belleau Castors in the Allan Cup finals to be played in the east.

Last night's victory gave Canadians the best-of-seven series with the Vancouver Island team by four games to one. It also marked the first time a Fort Frances club has reached a Dominion Hockey Finals with the Canadians were runners - up in the west.

Slim centreman Vern O'Donnell paced the Canadians' attack with two goals and two assists. Johnny Irving and Frank Blazosph each had two markers, while singles went to Doc Johnson, Don Sampson, Rick Ricard and Ed Mc-Cauley. Wilf Hildebrand had three assists.

Playing coach Eddie Shamlock and Andy Cloveshok bagged two goals apiece for Nanaimo. The other went to Gordon Cosway.

There seemed little doubt as to the outcome of the game as Fort Frances led over 6-2 in the first period. The teams split two goals in the middle session, but Canadians outscored their opponents 4-2 in the final frame.

Rough Riding Will Come Dear To Jockeys

Toronto, April 19 (CP) —The Ontario Racing Commission has revised its rules in an effort to eliminate rough riding by jockeys on the province's racetracks.

New regulations announced today by R. S. Bigelow, commission chairman permit stewards and starters to suspend a rider for the duration of a meet for rough riding.

In addition stewards have been instructed to impose a minimum suspension of 10 days for the first offence and more severe penalties for subsequent offences.

Previously the commission had power to impose fines on rough riders but could not suspend.

Racing opens in Toronto May 2.

Emms Says Breaks Will Decide Series Winners

Quebec, April 19—(CP)—Hap Emms, coach of the Barrie Flyers who meet Chester Citadellers tonight in the first game of their Eastern Canada junior hockey final, says the breaks will decide the winners of the best-of-seven series.

He said the breaks had worked for Flyers in the series' first two games which Barrie won 6-2, 6-4, and hoped for more of them in other and the breaks will decide and Saturday.

"Citadels have a good club," he said. "They got better in the second game against us. Neither team is much better than the other. The next two games here tonight it all."

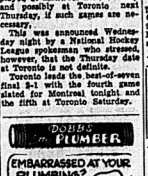
Emms said he would ice the same team as in the first two games.

A record crowd of more than 14,000 is expected to watch tonight's game.

Citadelle's assistant coach Kilby Macdonald said after a one-hour practice session that "the boys should be tougher from now on.

Although down 2-0 in the series, the Citadelles seemed in good spirits and do not appear unduly worried by their early setbacks.

"Maybe it's a good thing," Macdonald said. "We'll have to win the next two games here. Quebec is in the driver's seat and it's all up to us," he added.



Barrie said several times harder than we have," he said "Our boys were just a fraction of a second too late in passing and everything else they did."

OTHER GAMES ARRANGED

Montreal, April 19 —(CP) — Sixth and seventh games in the current Stanley Cup playoff between Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs will be played at Montreal next Tuesday and Thursday at Toronto next Thursday, if such games are necessary.

This was announced Wednesday night by a National Hockey League spokesman who stressed, however, that the Thursday date at Toronto is not definite.

Toronto leads the best-of-seven final 2-1 with the fourth game slated for Montreal tonight and the fifth at Toronto Saturday.

Canadiens Seek Second Victory In Cup Final

Montreal, April 19—(CP)—The "overtime series" as the boys along Peel Street refer to the Toronto - Montreal Stanley Cup finals resumes tonight with the underdog Canadiens gunning for a second victory to tie the best-of-seven series 2-2.

All the games so far—two in Toronto and one in Montreal—have gone into overtime before a winner was declared.

Both teams have been playing tight, heads-up hockey and even the opposing coaches appear agreed that the breaks will decide the series.

However, coach Dick Irvin of Les Canadiens, never one to let an opportunity pass, says: "If I was as lucky as the Maple Leafs I'd be a millionaire."

Calum Mackay, left-winger on Montreal's Mcdell-Curry-Mackay line, came out of Tuesday night's tussle with an injured left ankle and may not play tonight.

Irvin said he would dress Eddie Mazur, rookie forward from Victoria Cougars, Bob Dawes and Bert Hirschfeld, both of whom have had experience in the position.

While Canadiens practised yesterday, Leafs just took things easy and lolled around in their hotel room.

McMASTER ACCEPTED

Toronto, April 19 — (CP) — The Ontario Rugby Football Union is a four-team circuit today with McMaster University of Hamilton Marauders as the new member. McMaster has been accepted in the league after an unsuccessful attempt to join the Senior Intercollegiate Football Union.

Schedule details will be mapped out at a future meeting of O.R.F.U. officials. Other league teams in the league are Toronto Balmy Beach, Sarnia Imperials and Windsor Rockets.

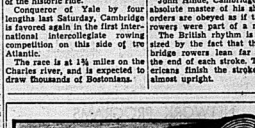
Cambridge Crew Favored to Win Against U.S.

Cambridge, Mass., April 19—(AP)—A great British eight-oared shell of today meets three American collegiate opponents on the 176th anniversary of the ride of Paul Revere against the British.

Cambridge University rows against Harvard, Boston University, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, near the site of the historic ride.

Conqueror of Yale by four lengths last Saturday, Cambridge is favored again in the first international intercollegiate rowing competition on this side of the Atlantic.

The race is at 1¼ miles on the Charles river, and is expected to draw thousands of Bostonians.



Harvard is taller and heavier than Cambridge, but is not yet as far along in condition as the British crew, a symphony of disciplined effort.

Harvard, the only one of the three expected to challenge the Britons, averages 183 pounds and six feet three inches against 173 pounds and six foot one-half inch for Cambridge.

Harold Rickett, London stockbroker who coaches Cambridge for the love of it—British universities do not go in for paid coaches—admits his shell is now at its peak, which was not precisely the case against Yale. It might go faster.

John Hinde, Cambridge cox, is absolute master of his shell. His orders are obeyed as if the eight rowers were part of a machine.

The British rhythm is emphasized by the fact that the Cambridge rowers lean far back at the end of each stroke. The Americans finish the stroke sitting almost upright.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Ribbster

Basic training is a wonderful thing. It prepares you for what you may run up against in the future. And it makes that future task easier and more understandable.

In Horse Sense bridge basic training, an opening bid of two in a suit promises a hand that expects to make a game. It guarantees a minimum of nine tricks (high cards and short cards).

You understand, of course that this refers to the first bid in a deal. But what if you have such a hand when the bidding has been opened by an opponent? How do you show it?

You use a defending bid known as an overcall in opponent suit; a bid in the suit that was bid by opponent. This is a defence signal for showing a hand that could have opened with two in a suit.

With this as a basis, it goes a bit more in its advices. "Also," it says, "I will use no tricks in the opponent suit. If I do not have the 'loss ace in their suit expect me to be void in it."

Knowing this, have no trouble deciding when your hand is good enough for an overcall in opponent suit. Here what it takes for an opening two bid and have no losers in opponent suit. That's it.

You have the west hand shown here:

♠A
♥K Q 10 5 4
♦Q J 9 3
♣A K Q

You have seven high cards and two shorts in spades for a total of nine tricks. You could open this hand with a bid of two hearts. That is, if somebody else did not open before you.

But before you get a chance to bid, suppose south opens with one spade. Too late for you to open the bidding. But, however, too late to show partner you have as good as an opening two-bid.

Merely make an overcall (of two spades) in the opponent suit. It tells partner as much as your opening two bid would have done.

Have a good basis and ward off disgraces

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 19—(AP)—James Stewart is taking a lesson from Harvey. In his new film—the actor's face doesn't appear either.

Don't get me wrong. Stewart isn't as invisible as the ring-size rabbit. He's playing a clown in his new film, and he'll appear in heavy make-up throughout the story. Not once will you see his real face.

The film is the new C. B. DeMille epic, "The Greatest Show on Earth." Stewart plays a man who has committed some clouded crime in his past. He hides from the law by taking a job as a clown in the circus.

Stewart is taking considerably less than his usual salary of about $150,000 per picture. And the role is smaller than those of the other stars—Cornel Wilde, Betty Hutton, Gloria Grahame and Dorothy Lamour.

Stewart's Happy

I found Stewart happily hiding behind his make-up.

"This is quite a part," Stewart drawled. "If you sneeze, you're liable to miss me." We were 13 days of the 100-day shooting schedule.

I asked him why he is doing the role.

"Well, it's a good part, even if it is short," he replied. "And I've always wanted to work for this man (DeMille)."

Stewart isn't the only one performing unusually in the film. Betty Hutton has learned to do her own stunts as the aerialist. She hangs by her hands, flies into a half-turn and is caught by a bona fide circus performer.

"Practised at the studio, doing it at 36 feet above the ground," she told me. "That wasn't so bad. Then we went with the circus and I went up to 46 feet. Believe me, I was scared. But once you're up there, you don't have time to think about it."

'Spring' League Gets Under Way At Bowl-O-Drome

Bowling must get into some people's blood. The best alley talent of the city with the season's activities behind them have taken on a spring dessert, so to speak, with the formation of a new loop which will see action for the next seven weeks.

Eight teams form the loop and these are Kirkwood Cigars; Northern Electric; Thrasher's Millers; Bowl-O-Drome; Ashley Furs; Callaghan's Ice; Canada Cement and Wood Wax. But don't let the names fool you. The cream of the city's bowlers are included and will vie for handsome prizes.

Last night the new league got away to a good start at the Bowl-O-Drome with Joe's Singles — pardon — Kirkwood's Cigars, and Northern Electric emerging with 7-0 victories over Ashley Furs and Callaghan's Ice. The Millers and Dromes took the measure of the Cementers and Waxmen by 5-2 scores.

High scorers were: Sam Halbert 808 (322), Jim McKenzie 807, Joe Legault 796 (330), Bill Batgen 797, Ron Saylor 782 (304), Jack Callaghan 776 (313), Ted Greenfield 755, Bill Kirkham 744, Wally Dingman 741, Charlie Merriott 728, Doug Bennett 688, Jim Conliss 686, Ike Bellis 677, Doug Ashley 677.

Mercurys Rack Up One-Sided Win Over Castors

Owen Sound, Ont., April 19 (CP) — Owen Sound Mercurys racked up a one-sided 10-1 win last night against Dolbeau Castors for their second straight victory in the best-of-five Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals.

Site of the third game will be decided by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in a telegraph vote by members.

A second period score by Fern Bernasqui robbed goalie Gillson of a shutout. The shot was a long partially screened effort that went through Gillson's legs as he crouched trying to find the rubber.

About 2,000 saw Owen Sound race to a 5-0 lead in the first period; raise it to 6-1 in the second and add four more in the final instalment.

Doug Gillespie rapped home three goals and earned two assists to get sniping honors. Tommy Burlington and Kukacheski scored two goals each while Buck Forsland, Jack Ingoldsby and Harry Kazalas added singletons.

Thiffault stopped 33 shots while Gillson had it easier with 26.

For Friday, April 20, 1951.

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Big relief in star aspects from previous days not so stimulating. This day is for action, accomplishment in your own occupation and in other interests. Step out!

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Be cheerful in your sector. You have to employ your fine faculties more consistently if schedule is very demanding. Get much today with the right effort, win time for relaxing, too.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Journalists, reporters; advertising; promoting; worthy projects, handling difficult matters, scientific research, legal and judicial affairs highly sponsored. A good day all told.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Prize Moon, Sun, other planetary aspects for a prosperous, pleasant day if you are up to par. Do your share to make and keep right things humming; promote government, community interests.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Your Sun and most planets encourage all-out endeavor to get urgent matters well on way to completion. Help charity and other worthy projects where you can. Enjoy weekend sanely.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Excellent opportunity for exploiting your special talents, aiding good undertakings, matters that need artistry, finesse, accurate handling. Write, create! It's your day.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—You should be keener, more intuitive and clearer in judgment this fine planetary day. Not a wholly personal day but all sound effort for good causes and your occupation will gain.

October 24 to November 22 — (Scorpio)—No restricting Mars rays, and other planets pour down generous, benefic rays to give your effort impetus, creative power. You can enjoy today and reap benefits for sound management.

November 23 to December 22 — (Sagittarius)—Aspects best for money, business since the 14th. So! Don't lose valuable time on non-essentials, do all in advance in your specific occupation; try to increase honorably your assets.

December 23 to January 21 — (Capricorn)—Tops now for mental and physical work, interests to further your own and your family's welfare. Military, government matters more favored. Professional fields, labor should be favored.

January 22 to February 20 — (Aquarius)—Seek restricting influences linger from yesterday but benefic rays from most planets encourage all-out effort in all worthy lines; industry, professions, home interests. Relax, too.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Use the most out of fine influences. Try new, different projects, tasks. Don't fear on venture; use well your talent and capability.

BORN TODAY: Studious, staunch of purpose, a keen mentality, but may at times be too easily discouraged, displeased at setbacks. Don't permit these or any other tendencies to grow, they can defeat the high achievement that can be yours. Head up, no matter the disappointments (we all have them!) and tackle things anew with greater faith, vigor. Through trials and sorrows we grow surer, better equipped for our responsibilities. Fortunate months immediately ahead for business advancement, some sound investments. Pray always for guidance.

Birthdate: Dinah Maria Craik, famed novelist; Napoleon III, Fr. emperor.

CAMPBELLFORD

Bud Davidson Tells Rotary Club Of Southern Trip

Campbellford Rotary Club at the Monday noon luncheon in the Campbellford Rotary rooms, members heard Rotarian Bud Davidson tell of his recent trip to the southern states. Mr. Davidson spoke of the cost of the trip, saying that by staying in motels, one found better accommodation at a more reasonable price. Each motel has its own restaurant, or else there is one nearby. Food is of excellent quality and not too expensive. South of the Mason-Dixon, Mr. Davidson said full course dinners of southern fried chicken and other local dishes ranged in price from $1.25 to $1.75. A good steak dinner will cost you $6 however.

Great Sport City

The speaker described St. Petersburg, and told of the large bowling club in that city. Records of the club show that 43 percent of the members registered for this season were Canadians. The city is great for sports of all kinds and takes its baseball seriously. There is one softball team made up entirely of men over 75 years of age.

Rotary clubs in the southern states experience the same problems as local clubs in Ontario, Mr. Davidson said. He attended the Rotary Club at Daytona Beach, while he was in that city and told of their fund raising activities. It does not cost as much as one may think it does to take the trip, according to Mr. Davidson, who says he went down with the legal amount of money permitted for travel in the United States, spent one month and still had money in his pocket when he came home.

It was decided to hold the secondary elections of the club on Monday next in order to have the new executive named before the conference in Toronto shortly.

Hon. James Gardner, will address the meeting on the club's "Farmer's Night" to be held on May 4th.

Alton Hadley and James Holt, both of Stirling, were visitors at the Monday meeting.

Mr. Charles Howey who has been organist and choir director of St. John's United Church in Campbellford for the past 10 years, has accepted a similar position at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Port Hope, and has left to assume his duties.

MacArthur Gives Greatest Welcome In N.Y. History

Estimated 7,500,000 Persons Line 15-Mile Parade Route

Comb Maritimes For Missing RCAF Fighter and Pilot

Ottawa, April 20 — (CP) — A concentrated sweep of the wild northern New Brunswick - Maine border country will be called out today by RCAF aircraft for a mysteriously - missing Sabre Force Mustang fighter and its pilot, Flt. Lt. Robert Edward Kent, 28, of Vancouver.

Prospects are for better weather than that which called a halt yesterday to the hunt for the veteran Second World War fighter pilot and his silver plane with red wing tips.

To participate in the large-scale hunt were planes from Greenwood, N. S., rescue base, Presque Isle, Me., and either from St. Hubert or Mont Joli, Que.

Flt. Lt. Kent disappeared yesterday while en route with seven other Mustangs from Chatham, N. B., back to Uplands airport near Ottawa. The planes, returning after a week of gunnery practice, were all from No. 416 Squadron at Uplands.

Rough Weather

They were flying in rough weather in two formations. One was led by Flt. Lt. Kent, who suddenly peeled off and vanished as the formation entered a cloud. He wasn't seen again.

Fighter pilots called the veteran of a tour of operations with the RCAF in Italy a crack flier who would come through whatever happened if it was humanly possible.

When the plane crashed, it would be the sixth Canadian military fighter aircraft to crack up in less than a month.

Defence headquarters has been investigating five crashes which occurred during a two-week period. Two were navy planes which crashed up near Halifax. Two others were RCAF Reserve Force Vampires which vanished in a flight near Sorel, Que. The fifth was the first CF100 long-range Canuck jet which went down near Toronto, Ont.

$75,000 Loss In Apt. Fire At Chatham

Chatham, April 20 (CP) — After a five-hour fight firemen today brought under control a nose-high blaze in Chatham's largest apartment building — the 41-apartment Kent Manor.

Everyone escaped safely. Preliminary estimates placed damage to the building at $75,000. The fire started mainly in three places and part of one wall collapsed.

The fire was reported at 11:50 a.m. by Mrs. John Wilkinson who heard a crackling noise above her top-floor apartment. She reported it to the building superintendent and got out.

By 1 p.m. the fire was under control although it burned for some time after that.

CANDIDATE SELECTED

Simcoe, April 20. (CP)— Date for the next Ontario election has not been set yet, but Liberals in Haldimand-Norfolk have made their nomination choice. He is Leslie who was defeated by Progressive Conservative Charles H. Martin in 1949 was nominated at a meeting here.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 20 (CP) Synoptic Rides are beginning to move southern and central Ontario. Temperatures fell slightly below freezing in most districts Thursday night, but are rising rapidly this morning under sunny skies. In northern Ontario skies are cloudy and light snowflurries are scattered in some districts.

A disturbance centred over southern Saskatchewan is moving slowly eastward. Cloud is expected to spread slowly eastward across southern Ontario on Saturday.

New York, April 20—(AP)— An estimated 7,500,000 persons turned out in New York today to give Gen. Douglas MacArthur the United States greatest welcome to a returning hero.

The estimate of the astonishing size of the cheering, flag-waving throngs that lined the 15-mile route of the 10-car motorcade came from Police Commissioner Thomas F. Murphy.

Police officials of New York were packed with a dense mass of hysterically shouting humanity. Office building windows were jammed.

The almost unbelievably-huge crowd nearly doubled the size of the 4,000,000 turnouts for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

New Yorkers pushed forth from subways and others piled into the city on special trains from Westchester, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Showers of torn paper and confetti fell from windows as a tribute to Manhattan's massive skyscrapers.

Vessels Add to Din

Vessels in the harbor tied down their whistles to add to the tumult.

Climbed on Back Seat

As the procession turned into lower Manhattan, one general climbed up on the back of the seat. Mrs. MacArthur joined her son Arthur, did the same in their car. The general waved both to the crowds lining the streets and to thousands leaning from windows.

The clouds of ticker - tape and torn paper sometimes were so thick they almost obscured him from view. It was difficult for some on the higher floors could see him.

The roar of the throngs as he passed mounted to a steady din, punctuated by such cries as "God bless you."

All business was suspended as the parade moved northward, changes during the parade.

The motorcade was joined on the trip along lower Broadway by bands and thousands of marchers. Ticker-tape and paper greeted him from the moment he drove out of his hotel driveway in a big open automobile at 11:06 a.m. EST.

The weather was perfect—sunny and cool.

The 5,000,000 figure is 1,000,000 more than the mammoth throng which turned out to greet Charles A. Lindbergh in 1927 after he made his non-stop flight to Paris.

An estimated 1,500,000 swarmed out last night to give MacArthur an unofficial but tumultuous welcome.

The parade will wind on through a shower of confetti and tickertape up Broadway.

Greeting by Offic'als

MacArthur, through his wife and their 13-year-old son, Arthur — swept into the building superintendent and got out.

By 1 p.m. the fire was under control although it burned for some time after that.

MOTHER AND TWO CHILDREN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

Baby Found Alive In Critical Condition

Fort Resolution, N.W.T., April 20, (CP)— A mother and her two young children have been discovered shot to death in this northern outpost, police said today.

Mrs. Mary Horn, 30-year-old daughter Dorothy, and her five-year-old son, Ernie, were found dead in their beds by a neighbor Wednesday.

Only a baby was found alive in the house. It was taken to hospital where it is in critical condition.

Sammy Norn, father of the children, who is convalescing in hospital, also survived.

RCMP. are investigating what has been described as a triple murder. A coroner's jury was called in today to view the bodies.

Fort Resolution is on the south shore of Great Slave Lake about four miles south of the mouth of Slave River.

Abandon All Hope For Survivors On Sunken Sub

By SIDNEY WEILAND

On Board HMS Starling, April 20 (Reuters)—A ship's signal lamp under today flashed across the silent English Channel a brief message of despair—all hope of finding survivors of the sunken submarine Affray has been abandoned.

Everyone in the searching ships knew, as dawn broke, that the oxygen supply for the 75 men trapped in the Affray would have run out. It was 80 hours since the Affray dived.

Last night hope had risen when the destroyer Scorpion picked up a 30-foot underwater obstruction on it's echo-sounding apparatus.

But the Admiralty said this morning the object was probably an old wreck already charted on their maps.

Ships of foreign navies were leaving the search area today.

The Admiralty said the wreckage which vanished from sight to the surface to clear up one of the mysteries surrounding disasters the navy has ever known.

Two questions have to be answered: First, why did the Affray come to harm? Why did not her crew get out with their escape apparatus?

One answer to the second question may be that the Affray hit the sea bottom and turned on its side, rendering the escape hatch useless.

But navy men are also wondering why—when they knew the approximate location of the submarine—they couldn't find her in a reasonable time.

Since "Operation Submash" started early Tuesday, destroyers, frigates, minesweepers, minelayers steamers and planes have combed 2,000 square miles of the channel.

MONEY GIVEN TO WIDOW

Fall River, Mass., April 20 (AP) — Lieut. Thomas J. Hudner, white, landed his plane behind enemy lines in Korea last December in an unsuccessful attempt to save the life of Ens. Leroy Brown Negro pilot. Hudner's home city gave him a $1,000 cheque last night. And again Hudner did not think of himself — he endorsed it to Brown's widow.

MacArthur's Talk to Congress Leaves Lingering Controversy Over Chiefs of Staff Position

Washington, April 20 (AP) — It looks like a fight to the finish between Gen. MacArthur and the Truman administration over the best strategy for victory in the Far East.

A surprise defence department statement last night put President Truman's civilian and military advisers squarely behind his dismissal of the general. It was widely taken here as a display of administration solidarity in preparation for a show-down policy struggle. The White House authorized the statement.

On the other side of the argument, persons in position to know MacArthur's personal feelings described him as deeply convinced of the rightness of the views he expressed in his address to Congress yesterday, and confident that the majority opinion in Congress and throughout the country will support him.

Moreover, his attack late yesterday on "regimentation" in the United States indicated his willingness to extend the conflict to domestic issues.

Administration strategy in meeting MacArthur's head-on challenge appeared clear. It was to get the general to testify and thereby:

1. To convince a majority of Congress and the public that MacArthur's pre - proposals that have a military measures against red China actually would lengthen the war, create a serious danger of setting off a world war.

2. To demonstrate that by his policy of a limited war in Korea the president has acted on the advice of the joint chiefs of staff.

Expected to Carry Weight

On both points, the opinions of military men are expected to carry great weight. The president therefore is due to rely heavily on the testimony before Congressional committees of Defence Secretary George C. Marshall and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs. Earlier this week Bradley defended the limited-war policy.

Last night the defence department statement put into the fray with a statement prompted by MacArthur's reference to the joint chiefs. MacArthur said he thought other military leaders had shared his views about widening the action. He named the joint chiefs.

Congressional critics and supporters on the general alike seized upon this as a key point: if the J. C. S. thought MacArthur's ideas were right, presumably they had disagreed with Truman. This, if publicly documented, would be damaging to the position in relation to MacArthur.

The defence department statement did not directly answer this point. But it indicated that the joint chiefs of staff by their silence would meet the MacArthur challenge with closed ranks.

Bradley Tells of Calculated Risk in Ardennes Battle

New York, April 20 (AP) — Gen. Omar N. Bradley says he ordered American forces in the Ardennes thinned out prior to Germany's counter - offensive "Battle of the Bulge" offensive in 1944.

"This calculated risk was minimized by the element of surprise it gave me," Bradley adds. "Indeed were I to live through this decision again I would make no other."

Writing in Life magazine, the U.S. Army Chief of Staff said forces were removed from the front for an offensive elsewhere.

It was against these light forces in the Ardennes that Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt sent his army in an attempt to break through to the English Channel.

Bradley says his choice was "not the safest," but adds that "not safety must be byword. . . . We might have wintered on the Seine within sight of the charred outskirts of Paris."

He says that headquarters received no indications that the Germans were massing opposite the Ardennes Forest.

Instead, Bradley says, the Germans "hoodwinked" the allies into thinking the Nazi armor was building up in the Cologne area and farther north.

Bradley says he chose a French force to liberate Paris, but that for 24 hours it "stimbled reluctantly" through a Gallic wall at townfolk along the line of march slowed the French advance with flowers and embraces.

However, Bradley says that when he left Paris all interference ceased to move into the city, the French "burned up" the road into town.

Bradley says he objected to Viscount Montgomery's plan for the parachute drop at Arnhem, but that Gen. Eisenhower thought it a fair gamble.

"Had the pious teetotaling Montgomery wobbled into Siberia," Bradley remembers, "as allied Expeditionary Forces, with a hangover," Bradley says, "it could not have been more astonished than I was by the daring adventure he proposed."

For five days the British Airborne troops were pinned down in their bridgehead until Sept. 15 when Monty despaired of breaking through. He ordered their withdrawal and only 2,500 of the 9,000 troops who made the drop got back to their own lines

GOVT. URGED TO GET BACK LOST U.K. MARKETS

G.S. White Says Britain Should Pay Going Prices

Ottawa, April 20 — (CP)—The Canadian government was urged yesterday to strive to regain some of the United Kingdom markets lost during the war and post-war years.

Frank Stanfield (PC— Colchester - Hants) said the government should try to regain the British market for Nova Scotia apples and for pit props from the Maritime provinces.

G. R. Pearkes (PC — Hastings - Peterborough) said efforts should be made to reopen the British market to Canadian agricultural and other products. But, he added, the United Kingdom should be prepared to pay "going prices."

The two members were among 10 heard as the Commons debate on the Budget continued through its fourth successive day, the debate will be resumed today.

At the House opening, External Affairs Minister Pearson said Canada will be "interested" if negotiations between the United States, Australia and New Zealand are extended towards a Pacific Pact along the lines of the North Atlantic Treaty. But there is no indication at present that this extension is going to take place.

Members agreed to establish a committee to study changes in the Federal Election Act. J. A. Ross (PC — North) and Robert Fair (SC — Battle River) suggested adoption of the single transferable vote system in federal elections.

Papers Comment On MacArthur's Talk to Congress

London, April 20 — (Reuters) — Newspapers of the western world generally saluted Gen. MacArthur today for the way in which he wound up his military career in his fare-well speech to Congress.

"The speech excepted of him strong, never failing below dignified utterance, and uncompromising," says the Times of London.

French newspapers were more cynical. The right - wing Ce Matin declares: "Is this a psychological but abstract" and said MacArthur had put it over with his evident scent of the theatrical.

The left-wing Franc - Tireur, which has followed an anti-MacArthur line, saluted him for his decision to retire.

In Italy, the pro - government Roma in Rome said MacArthur's statements to Congress will "furnish arguments to (President) Truman's political enemies" and not to foreign enemies of the U.S.

In Australia, the Melbourne Herald says MacArthur had "underlined the urgent need for the free nations of the world to declare for a definite policy and accept the consequences."

The mass - circulation Daily Mirror of London, in a front-page story, described MacArthur's speech as "a dangerous challenge to the policies of our own government and to those also of the British Commonwealth and United Nations."

Embassy Confirms Chevalier Visa In 'Delay' Stage

Paris, April 20 (AP) — The United States Embassy confirmed today that Maurice Chevalier is encountering delay in obtaining a visa to visit the United States.

An official said, however, that the U.S. government has not turned down the actor-singer's application.

Chevalier planned to go to Hollywood to make a movie.

The embassy refused to give details.

Chevalier said Chevalier sailed April 17 on the Empress of Canada for Montreal, where he left April 24. He had planned to remain in Canada two months before going to the United States.

Earlier the Second World War Chevalier was cleared of accusations that he had collaborated with the Germans.

THREW AWAY RINGS

Worchester, Mass., April 20 (AP) — A jeweler who sold a $1,850 glass of water into 'a gutter in Worcester, Mass., Friday, was told police she had placed three rings worth $1,850 in the glass and then threw the water. The handy man emptied the contents into the gutter which was searched to the last holes in the head.

Irvin Likely To be Retained As Habs' Coach

Montreal, April 20. (CP)—General Manager Frank Selke of Montreal Canadiens' hockey team announced today that the club's president and vice president had approved his suggestion that Dick Irvin "be retained as coach for another two years."

Selke added: "we can give him an assistant to do the leg work and in this way give Dick the time to be the master mind of Canadiens' hockey empire."

(The general manager was high in praise for Irvin's work in moulding the present team and he applauded the team's close fight in the present Stanley Cup series against Toronto Maple Leafs. "If Irvin can't be a little buck Canadiens can still go on to win the cup," he said.

WOMAN FOUND HIS WIFE

Rome, N. Y., April 20 — (AP) — A radiod message that a woman had collapsed on a street sent Patrolman Earl E. Campbell speeding to the scene last night. He found the woman was his wife, Mrs. Ann E. Campbell, 58. She died of a heart attack.

TAKEN FOR RIDE

New York, April 20 — (AP) — A Negro, Charles Jones, found in a Brooklyn marsh yesterday and police said he may have been taken for a gangland execution ride. The victim was identified as Phillip Mangano, 46, by had three bullet holes in the head.

Two Oil Tankers Collide In Gulf, Both Said On Fire

One Crew Believed Dead As Fire Engulfs Ship

New Orleans, April 20 (AP)— Two Standard Oil tankers collided in the Gulf of Mexico early today. Both remained afloat but one was blazing so fiercely that the Coast Guard said it believed "no one aboard is alive."

The blazing vessel on fire was identified by the Coast Guard as the Esso Greensboro, a type T-2 ship which normally carries a crew of 40 men.

The other vessel, also reported afire, was named as the Esso Suez a new super-tanker of 26,500 tons capable of carrying 250,000 gallons of oil.

First reports said the first mate of the Esso Suez — a man named Brehm — was killed and several crew members badly burned. She was said to be under way at about three knots speed.

The Esso Greensboro was lighted by a Coast Guard plane 15 miles north of the Esso Sure in a area of flame which made it unapproachable. The Esso New York standing by, reported that shortly after the collision, radioed:

"No one believed alive on board."

A Coast Guard plane reported the Esso Suez still afire. Two boats in davits and that crew members could be seen on its deck.

The collision occurred about 8 p.m. EST, 90 miles south-east of Morgan City, La.

The Coast Guard said their first report came from the Esso Suez which radioed "struck tanker and apparently all hands were lost."

All Residential Rents Frozen As of April 17

Toronto, April 20 (CP) —The Ontario Government yesterday froze all residential rents as of April 17 to avoid uncontrolled increases after federal restrictions are lifted April 30.

Premier Frost said no increases will be permitted until approved by agencies to be set up by the province. He promised the new rent controls will be based on the basis of justice and protection for both tenants and landlords.

Legislation to give the cabinet followed a recommendation approved yesterday by the cabinet committee of the Ontario legislature now studying rents.

Attorney-General Porter said thousands of eviction notices have been sent to landlords to tenants in anticipation of relaxed rent controls and he advised tenants to "sit tight" until officials could establish if they have grounds.

The premier said rent controls are unavoidable. He was impressed with the rental situation is "terrifying in Toronto and in Hamilton, Windsor, Ottawa and other places."

Commercial properties are not affected by the freeze order and the controls do not apply to new residential construction rented or leased after April 17.

Alberta's rent control legislation was proclaimed yesterday to take effect April 30, the day the federal government relinquishes Dominion rental controls.

Two Car Crash Kills Woman, Injures Two

Toronto, April 20. (CP)—Helen Ruby Hillier, 22, of St. John's, Nfld., was killed and two others injured today in a three-car collision a mile north of nearby Thornhill.

Injured were Mrs. Earl Griffin of Newmarket, Ont., said by police to be the driver of the car in which the girl was killed, and Floyd Roberts, of suburban Richmond Hill, driver of one of the other cars.

Driver of the third car, who police said was James Murdoch, of Newmarket, was uninjured. He told police Roberts swerved across the four-lane highway into oncoming traffic and side-swiped his car which the girl was killed, and Floyd Roberts, of suburban Richmond Hill, driver of one of the other cars.

Insulin Co-Discoverer Announces New Lab Findings About Diabetes

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE (Associated Press Science Editor)

Philadelphia, April 20 (AP) — The co-discoverer of insulin, Dr. Charles H. Best, University of Toronto, yesterday reported new findings on diabetes.

He told the American Philosophical Society about laboratory work indicating the possibility that diabetics may be able to produce in their own glands at least some of the missing insulin they need. This hormone is made in the pancreas.

He said Dr. Gerald Wrenshall has found that adult diabetics still produce insulin in their own pancreases. They produce a surprising volume, averaging about half the normal amount. Wrenshall has devised methods of diet and hormones to overcome this natural production.

The boosting of natural hormone is based on findings by Dr. R. E. Haist including effects of fasting, of increased fat, of sugar and of several hormones. All either increase or diminish the size of the insulin-making parts of the pancreas and production of insulin. Haist is working and strengthening these hormone-makers.

Best also said Dr. W. Stanley Hartroft has found evidence that in some, persons the natural hormone is prevented from getting out of the pancreas and into the body where its regulation of sugar fat normally occurs.

Half of Today's Secretaries Cannot Spell Say Educationists

New York, April 20. (AP)— Half of today's American secretaries can't spell.

Two business women, all high-school graduates and many who hold college degrees, lack basic training in "words and how to write 'in' and 'rithmetic," say executives whose business is the letter and the telephone message blank.

One corporation with headquarters in New York employs a staff of thousands of stenographers and secretaries, maintains a training school. There, it is reported, they are given a seventh-grade spelling test of 100 words in every-day usage. We require a grade of 85 per cent on this test. Not more than 50 per cent of the girls make good.

Girls who are accepted for the training class receive a course in written test in grammar and punctuation and spelling, which theoretically are trained in the specific phraseology of this business. They are given a correspondence in charge:

"I was afraid of the time I spent during the girls in seventh-grade spelling and eighth-grade arithmetic.

"Now I'm constantly amazed at how many college graduates can't spell.

And, says this specialist, if you want to succeed in business, for goodness' sake learn to spell.

OPP Arrest Two, Find Car Stolen

The misgivings of a Marysville service station operator as to the validity of a cheque, which has been accepted as payment for gasoline was responsible early today for the arrest of a man and woman from Edmonton, who were in charge of a car reported stolen in Toronto.

At 6:30 this morning, provincial police at Belleville were called by the service station operator who gave the licence number of the car the two persons were driving. Police recognized the number as that of a car reported stolen in Toronto and the alarm was radioed to Napanee and Kingston. A short time later, provincial police from Kingston apprehended the pair.

The two gave their names as Jack A. Dorey, 26, and Marie Jean Campbellton, 25, both of Edmonton. They will be taken back to Toronto to face charges.

Canadian Force Advance Party Sharpest Crew in Korea Area

By BILL BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Southern Korean Port, April 20 (CP)—Officers and men comprising the advance party of Canada's special force which is due in Korea in the near future arrived at this port yesterday.

They were the earliest looking officers in his this faded war theatre since the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, arrived last Dec. 18. The advance party, under Maj. Jack Prince of Oakville, Ont, might have been fhannequins out of an army quartermaster's dream shop window.

With their new-looking battledress rich in pile and sharply pressed, shoulder flashes ablaze in brilliant red and yellow and beret badges gleaming in the strong spring sun, the troops were a treat for eyes accustomed to the drab workaday turnout of the fighting men towards the north, in what is known locally as "the sharp end".

However, if experience is any guide, they'll lose that "new look" smartly.

Capt. Phil Strump, of Windsor, Ont., embarkation staff officer, got a work detail unloading gear within 15 minutes after the advance party's arrival. Their 23 days of idleness at sea made any wrinkles to be worked out.

Various Impressions

Although their initial impressions of Korea varied, the troops all expressed gratification at the sea voiage aboard the Pvt. Joe P. Martinez. However, the vessel apparently was overcrowded in all ways better since it ferried the Patricias to Korea.

The advance party changed to the S. S. General Leroy Eltinge at Yokohama for the transportation and food on this ship somewhat redeemed the status of the Pvt. John Martinez again was overcrowded and that they were indeed fortunate in the complaint came from men like Pte. David Wilson of Montreal, who is far from a normal sort conch brunched of the army and hence accustomed to the best accommodation. The cot in the army cot throughout the voyage and bounced with every roll of the ship.

Lieut. Strump said the weather was rough and no real exercise could they had only a half hour of sunlight until they hit Japan. The Eltinge docked at Yokohama took 17 days. The party spent two days there and the last two days to reach Korea.

"The men had two 6 am. passes while Yokohama but were turned completely loose," Lieut. Strump said. "Everyone reported back on time."

The party is camped in tents eight miles outside this port. Today they will begin drawing equipment with which to set up camp for their stay here. They expect to have the job completed by the end of next week when they will begin clearing in his estimate of costs.

A DIZZY PACE

A few weeks ago, a man named Emanuel Celler, who s represented Brooklyn in the Congress of the United ates for the past fourteen years, took his pen in hand. wrote to the New York Times, listing the qualities of good Congressmen. The representative of the people st have: "The friendliness of a child, the enthusiasm of een-ager, the assurance of a college boy, the tirelessness a bill collector, the patience of a sacrificing wife, the plomacy of a wayward husband, the curiosity of a cat, d the good humor of an idiot."

Whether Congressman Celler realized it or not at the e, he was scheduling the pattern of the Ohio Lower use and Senate. For there, a man from Maine, posing a senator, made a big impression. He wined and dined h state officials, had his picture taken, toured the city Columbus, fraternized with members of the legislature, d was invited to speak the next day. He did, and delivd a diatribe against the Democratic party that shook staid foundations of the House.

Upon investigation, it was found that the "senator" d escaped from a mental institution in Ohio, and had ddenly taken it into his head to be a Republican with a rpose. He obviously had the last quality mentioned by . Celler, and must have had most of the rest of them, be accepted as he was.

The Hamilton Spectator, commenting on the fiasco, rns: "There may be a lesson here for everybody — on the side. It could be that in the onrush of modern life, rming headlines, babbling commentators, blaring loudakers, the wormlike congestion of peak-traffic, the esses of inflation and the mere struggle to live — it ld be that amid all this frenzied jumble called civilizan, a mental hospital is really the only sanctuary left ere the mind can get away from it all and remain seated true equilibrium."

For the one mind that remains in true equilibrium, wever, there must be hundreds that do not. Medical ence has made great advances in the past 100 years, but n and women are still locked away from the world in ir minds and in mental institutions. And if it is true t equilibrium does remain in those institutions in a y cases, it is equally true that all the disequilibrium is sed bw the "frenzied jumble of civilization." One hund years ago, there were no cars, no airplanes, no miracle gs, little means of communication. Today, all that has nged, and the pace of life has trebled and trebled again il man has come into an age governed almost wholly his modern inventions.

Perhaps, if man had conquered all his lusts for power strength, the world would not be in a state that causes o take notice of a disillusioned man who rode into a islature on the wings of an insane storm.

ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, one of the first men to anise and support, the United Nations and a foreign icy expert whose advice was sought by political giants both sides of government in the United States, died dnesday. He died at his Grand Rapids, Michigan home n complications following extensive surgery.

Senator Vandenberg's wisdom in foreign policy, and desire for a bi-partisan view on the part of United tes government policies throughout the world, made known far beyond his own state and his own nation. e another man who died last week, Senator Vandenberg his nation before himself, and wore his body out on altar of sacrifice. He and Ernest Bevin, while their s on world problems did not coincide on all occasions, e both fighting for the same object — peace in the ld. Both exhausted themselves in their efforts.

Senator Vandenberg had his first major operation in ober, 1949. His second came one year ago, and he er recovered to an extent that would allow him to take his senatorial duties fully again. The Michigan Repubn suffered relapses in November and February, and his dition slowly got worse. He was a cut above many of colleagues, and his wise, firm mind will be missed in ted States and the rest of the world.

DEFICIT FINANCING

The extent to which deficit operations in the past cut the budget of the Canadian National Railways of ay is indicated by the financial statement released by company. During 1951, the C.N.R. expects to have enues amounting to $588,600,000, and operating enses of $543,750,000. That leaves an operating net fit of $44,850,000. That amount is wiped out immedly by interest on debts. In addition, the company s on spending more than $37,000,000 in additions to betterment of its stock, and another $16,500,000 for rolling stock.

The citizens of Canada can only realize the immense there is in running a railroad when they see figures h as those above. The real blow is in the news that the R. expects a deficit of almost $21,000,000 in 1951.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

No sooner do the hockey tournaments end than the baseball tournaments begin. Before they end the football tournaments have started; and they carry us into hockey again. We have got to have our tournaments.

Nowadays, these public sports are staged for the private profit of promoters. No doubt in Imperial Rome and in ancient Athens, the great tournaments were rackets to some extent, in which the emperors got a cut of the gate, the way our governments collect amusement taxes today. But the big promoters were probably just as popular figures around town as our sport moguls are now.

Kings and rulers from the dawn of time have counted upon tournaments of one kind and other to keep the commons happy. Nobles took it as part of their job, in the age of chivalry, to get out and beat one another over the head for the amusement of the populace.

By the time of Henry VII, the rules of the tourney and the joust were as strictly written and as well-known by the ordinary Joe as the rules of hockey are today. These tourneys were held in various cities and towns around England; and the gentlemen, travelled from tournament to tournament as hockey and football teams do now. Henry himself was quite a jouster, and nearly got himself killed in one public display.

Down the middle of the jousting field ran a long fence, originally four feet high, but later six feet high, to prevent the huge cart horses from colliding. And across the fence, the lords and gentlemen prodded and slugged and clubbed each other in the effort to unhorse the opponent. These were jousts. In the tourneys teams of a dozen or a score to a side, and on some occasions up to a hundred a side, rode clanking into the field to stage a sort of Donnybrook.

They wore plate armor, which was more than our modern hockey and rugby boys wear. But not much more.

ODDS AND ENDS

Does it seem strange to you, as it does to me, that General MacArthur's return to Washington should be a signal for honor guards, triumphal tours, degrees from universities, 100-gun salutes and the rest? Seems to me if we stopped dramatizing these arrogant men of high rank, if we cut down on all the pomp and glory of a profession that should know the meaning of restraint, we'd be closer to a world of peace. A man with an egotistical sense of his own destiny is as dangerous to peace as any dictator . . . Generals, as a class, seem devoid of any humility. Recently I happened to be at an airport when General Vokes arrived. He was greeted by a junior officer who snapped to attention and gave him a big salute. The general brushed garrulously by without any acknowledgment. I felt like asking him, "Who the hell do you think you are? Katherine Hepburn?" . . The firing of MacArthur has done more to bolster my shaky faith in the United States than anything in months.

Get a lot of letters from people asking me to protest the $1 hair cut, but it's something I can't get mad about. I never heard of a barber yet who became a millionaire. At the shop I patronize I get a dollar's worth of hair removed and two dollars' worth of wit and information . . . Speaking of fixed prices, the government ought to look into the matter of the price of shoes. I'm told that the wholesalers fix a "suggested" price for the smaller, independent shops. If they sell beneath the price there's a mysterious shortage of supplies for them until they come back into line . . . Surely this margarine coloring question is the most ludicrous of all man-made bars in a free enterprise economy. It would be just as sensible if a bunch of us columnists got together and influenced the government to pass a ruling barring other columnists from using the personal pronouns or adjectives. . . . I hope I never get involved in one of those suits involving my signature. My writing seems to change from month to month. Everything from yesterday backwards is forgery.

Here's one by A. P. Herbert that I like:

When laughing Ann trips down the street
The sun comes out as well,
The town is at her twinkling feet,
The crier rings his bell,
The young men leap like little fish,
Policemen stand and purr,
While husbands look behind and wish
That they had married her.

I can say truthfully that I haven't broken a traffic regulation in the last 10 years, but I still get a feeling of guilt when a motorcycle cop appears in the rear view mirror. Am I alone in this? . . . Coming out of "Born Yesterday" the other night I overheard two well-dressed matrons trying to figure out the performance of the incomparable Judy Holliday. The movies have so conditioned us to well-established types that a truly creative performance on the screen seems strange and off-key. On the bill was the prize-winning short, "Gerald Mac-Boing-Boing," another rare treat . . . . The moving picture people must know what they're doing, but the interminable double bills, dreary short subjects, maddening cacophony of "Coming Attractions" and the intermissions for the ice cream vendors are not my idea of putting a customer in a mood for a good photoplay and, personally, I am repulsed rather than attracted by "prize nights." When will the industry wise up and face the fact that better, more adult pictures are the cure for box office blues? . . . If I had it all to do over again I'd be the back-end man on a fire department ladder truck.

Whenever I read a column by Samuel Marchbanks, the sage of Peterborough, I feel like retiring to some other form of endeavor. No one in Canada, not even Eric Nicol, writes such sparkling humor so consistently . . . In my comment the other day on the Great Bird Watch now under way in England, I forgot to mention that the robin is the first bird up in the morning. Ornithologists have compiled some weird and wonderful statistics about the robin. One authority has proven that the robin has a capacity for enough worms at one sitting to stretch 28 inches . . . That's a lot of worm . . . Have you heard the latest Tin Pan Alley salute to old world romance? Called "Wear Your Dungarees, Louise? . . . Columnist Elmore Philpott is a grand example of the buoyancy of the human spirit. He is afflicted severely with arthritis, but wears this curse lightly. There are few men I admire more . . . Remind me to do a piece some day on the work of the Credit Unions, a big dramatic story of people helping themselves . . . I've been commissioned to do a magazine piece on Pauline Johnson and would like to hear from any of you who knew that great lady.

What a wonderful atmosphere of concentration and study one finds in a public library reading room. I read a columnist the other day — female, of course — who sneered at all the hush hush and suggested people should talk to each other normally and be themselves. Pooh on that! A reading room, like a lovers' lane, should be a retreat . . . An invitation to attend another nudists' convention this summer and I may go. Never felt as relaxed and normal as I did after the initial agony of disrobing with the sunbathers a couple of years ago. People still asked me about the experience and simply won't believe that it can be a perfectly natural thing. How rigidly we're bound to conventions and prudery! . . . Keep your ear tuned to the CBC for the sprightly music of the Ray Norris' quintet. Real gay-ype music . . . The little verse by Dorothy Parker that I ran the other day recalled to a reader that it was Miss Parker who wrote this unforgettable line: "Women and elephants never forget."

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

RESTLESSNESS

It is said that the average American family lives only two years in any one community.

It may be that if we can answer the question why the American nation appears to be so continually on trek, we could discover the secret of many of our national problems.

The soul of America is restless. What is the matter with our people? What is the matter with us? Restlessness usually arises either from boredom or from lack of sense of security. We try something else. We hear about other parts of the country where opportunities are so marvellous, and we leave our drab surroundings for the green fields in the distance—for the golden windows in the house on the next hill.

Others are constantly filled with the fear that they are getting nowhere in life, and they will come to a great crisis without sufficient money to see them through. Maybe to give up this job and take a job somewhere else which seems to have more promise will be better.

We can be made very unhappy by our restlessness. America is a young nation and America is a restless nation on trek.

SWAPS JOBS FOR SUMMER

Olso. (CP)—About 200 Norwegian office and industrial workers will swap jobs with the same number of Swedish workers for a minimum of three months this summer. The exchange is organized by an Inter-Scandinavian Association.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

A GOOD TWENTY-FIVE CENT CIGAR

For more than a quarter of a century one of the most useful items in The Medicine Cupboard—booklet of recipes and instructions for first aid and hometreatment of minor ills, for which send 25c and stamped self-addressed envelope—has been Ol' Doc Brady's Home Made Fool Proof Cough Medicine. It is one of the few medicines I don't mind taking myself, for I know it is harmless in any circumstance and I believe it does good in most instances when used as directed in the handbook.

But now, by golly, the druggists or the nostrum manufacturers or maybe an unholy alliance of these interests have put sufficient pressure on the health board or other municipal authorities to secure adoption or enactment of a regulation which prohibits the sale of the principle ingredient of the cough medicine, namely citrate of soda, without a prescription.

This is ridiculous. It goes to show — well it goes to show.

Citrate of soda (sodium citrate) was formerly used in modifying milk for infant feeding. Five or ten grains in each bottle or a grain or two in each ounce of milk in the mixture prevented formation of large, tough curds. It is used also, one or two grains in the ounce, to make milk more acceptable to patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer.

When taken medicinally, as in the fool proof cough medicine, citrate of soda acts as a systemic alkalizer (tending to prevent acidosis), a diuretic (increasing kidney function), a mild diaphoretic (increasing sweat) and especially as an expectorant (increases, softens or liquefies and loosens expectoration, mucus and other secretions of the lining membranes of air passages).

The home made cough medicine has done a lot of good in acute respiratory infections in infant, children and adults, if not in a positive way then at least by saving the patients for a day or two from the harmful effects of the dope in most store cough medicines.

Right here is a principle of safety which I hope every reader will remember. I'd rather cough my head off for a day or two in the presence of any acute C-R-I (common respiratory infection) with or without the home made cough medicine, than take a chance with what might happen from suppressing the natural cough impulse with any narcotic or sedative that may be in so-called cough medicine. Not that a narcotic or sedative is never necessary in the treatment of an illness in which cough is a prominent feature. But when narcotic or sedative is used it becomes a problem for the physician to decide when and how much the patient may take with advantage. It certainly is not safe for any one to indulge in such medicine on his own impulse or the drug clerk's advice.

It may be that this arbitrary restriction on the sale of citrate of soda is imposed only in certain communities where the vested interests have control.

What this country really needs is a good 15-cent ounce package of citrate of soda for the household medicine cupboard—it would be difficult to name any other medicine that would be either better or safer to keep on hand for the home treatment of cough.

QUESTION & ANSWERS

So You Now Think it Was Stupid

Your articles are wonderful. Although I first resented your name-calling and even wrote to the paper to protest, I have changed my mind. I followed your suggestion, found Dr. ——— reliable and skillful, had a course of injection treatments which gave me no discomfort and didn't interfere with my work or play, and for two and a half years now have been free from piles. Now I know what you mean! (Mrs. G. W.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am. there are still so many thousands of poor geeks who are so—oh, well, never mind. On written request (a clipping will not suffice) any reader who provides stamped self-addressed envelope may have a copy of the pamphlet It Is Stupid to suffer from piles. And I mean stupid, Stupid.

Control of Sweating of Palms

Under the slightest nervous tension my palms become sweaty and it is not only embarrassing but a handicap in my work (D. K.)

Answer—Rub into palms and palmar surface of fingers once a day a pea-size bit of salve made of 2 grains of menthol, 1 dram formaldehyde solution, 6 drams lanolin and enough petrolatum to make one ounce.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TIME

In my reading I came across this arresting thought, or statement: "Time is but the space between our memories; as soon as we cease to perceive this space, time has disappeared." Thus it is that we can measure out our time in life.

The more we remember the more do we realize that we have lived and learned. But let this be as nothing and we are as though we were but born! Happy memories keep people happy. It's like the reading of a great book to which you return again and again.

People waste time by not putting anything into it. The more it is filled with usefulness and achievement the more we have credited to us as something substantial. Many is the one who has enriched his life at thirty more than the one has at eighty. In living, time is really only relative.

Time keeps stepping. It never hesitates. We have to take it as is, marking all the gains that we can, while yet we have it. The more we put into it today the more we will have on the morrow, of improvement, satisfaction and personal enrichment. It's all ours, too. No one else owns more of it than we. It's ours wholly to command as we choose.

Short as life is at its best, wonders have often been achieved in just a little time. Look back but twenty-five years and note all that has been achieved. Look back a hundred years and the advancement is still more pronounced and significant. Look back upon your own life. What has time mean to you?

Time is like a clean canvas given over to us on which to paint. It's nothing but blank space until the brush begins to tell a story. But when the story has been painted upon the canvas something permanent remains. Something of us who paint there. Something of life that has furnished us the materials.

We hear it told that we should improve our time, but it isn't time that has to be improved, but ourselves. Time is merely the receptacle. But it can hold so much!

Send-off For First Contingent Of 6,000-Man U.N. Brigade Almost Like Peacetime Cruise

By DAVE McINTOSH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Seattle, Wash., April 20 (CP) —Canada's soldiers were outward bound today for Korea and the war against communism.

The send-off for the first contingent of the 6,000-man United Nations brigade was quiet —almost like a peacetime cruise.

Only Brig. John Rockingham's brief order-of-the-day carried the harsh hint of what was to come. Tersely, the commander's order read:

"To all ranks: We leave to join a great battle, bearing in each of us the honor and dignity of Canada.

"In training you have been tough and resourceful. In war you must be better. Good luck."

Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds, chief of the general staff, said in a signal from Ottawa: "The thoughts of the people of Canada will be with you throughout your great venture and, on behalf of those who remain behind, I wish you all Godspeed and a safe return."

It was a lonely departure for battle with only 15 wives able to see their men.

It was snowing about dawn as the men strapped on their kit and formed up on the parade square at nearby Fort Lewis, where the force has trained since November.

But it cleared as the fleet of buses moved the first contingent 40 miles to embarkation pier.

The remainder of the force will follow in a day or so in two other ships and the force will be in action as soon as they re-condition after the long sea voyage.

Fri on Blackout

The army put a blackout on reports of the time of departure and the name of the big, grey transport which carried the men. NCO's barked out orders as the men jumped from the buses on the misty pier. They formed up in three ranks and while they waited to go aboard American Red Cross girls served them doughnuts and coffee.

Brig. Rockingham, commander of the force, stood at the foot of the gangplank as the troops filed up the deck.

"Nice crease in the trousers," he said to one man.

Some of Quebec's 22nd Regiment sang French songs as they moved aboard. American navy personnel on the ship and dock workers gaped.

"You Canadians, too?" a docker asked one of the "Van Doos."

Before he could answer, an English-speaking man from the Royal Canadian Regiment shouted: "You're bloody right they are."

A band from the RCRS and Royal Canadian Artillery played marches and hit tunes on the pier.

The men disappeared into the dim hold to find their bunks, stacked four deep in dozens of sections of the hold. Each man had about a foot of space between himself and the man above.

A 215-man fatigue party had come aboard 12 hours earlier to get the kitchen in shape. The troops had their first meal about three hours after going aboard. The consensus was that the grub was okay.

The 15 wives weren't able to get near the ship but the husbands were permitted later to say their farewells near the gate. Authorities said it wouldn't be comfortable for the men whose wives and families weren't able to get to Seattle to watch others saying their farewells. The men agreed.

By the time the ship moved into the stream, the sun was low on the horizon and nearly everyone had left the pier.

FLAG HAULED DOWN

Cambridge, Mass., April 20 (AP) — A communist flag was hauled to the top of a Peabody Square flagpole yesterday — but its stay was brief. The banner, obviously home-made, was quickly taken down by police who collared two Massachusetts Institute of Technology freshmen as the perpetrators. No charges were made.

WEDDINGS

WANNAMAKER—JOHNSTON

White wedding bells, pink and white streamers and an evergreen archway formed an attractive setting on Saturday, April 14, at 11 o'clock, for the marriage of Madeline Ruth Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Johnston, of Mrs. Johnston, was united in marriage to Ronald Roy Wannamaker, son of Mrs. Mae Wannamaker and Mrs. Roy Wannamaker by the Reverend J. F. Lane.

The wedding music was Mr. Gordon Pigden's recording of Wagner's "Wedding March from Lohengrin."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an attractive blue crepe gown of street length with cutwork trim, pink straw hat, black accessories, and corsage of red Bettertime roses.

Miss Gloria Dawn Johnston, sister of the bride, was her attendant, becomingly gowned in allover pink lace gown with pink hat and matching gloves, and corsage of blue carnations.

Mr. Earl Wannamaker, of Madoc, and brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman.

Following the wedding breakfast, which was served to the immediate family, including both grandparents, Mrs. Mae Wannamaker, Mrs. J. Johnston, the happy couple left for Ottawa, New York and New Jersey, the bride wearing a light brown gabardine suit with brown accessories. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker will reside at the bridegroom's farm, at O'Hara's.

GRABOWSKI—KELLAR

Tall standards of pink, white, and red roses, flowering potted plants and ferns formed a lovely setting on Saturday, April 14, at Mohra United Church at 11 a.m., for the marriage of Doris Irene Kellar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kellar, of West Huntingdon, Ontario, to John Joseph Grabowski, of Bonarlaw, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Grabowski, of Poland. The bride and Monley Clarke, pastor of the church officiated.

Mrs. George Williams, of Bonarlaw, rendered the wedding music, and the soloist, Mrs. Floyd Ray, of Holloway, sang before the ceremony, "I Love You Truly," and during the signing of the register "I'll Walk Beside You".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her bridal floor-length gown of white rayon satin with rich turquoise embroidery highlighting the front of the fitted bodice from the deep yoke to the waist. The sleeves were long and tight-fitting and the full skirt fell in graceful folds. Her fingertip veil of fine rayon net edged with rayon Chantilly lace was held in place by a matching lace halo set with rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers, gardenias, roses, snapdragons, and ferns.

Mrs. Dean Dafoe, of Foxboro, Ontario, was matron of honour, and a floor-length gown of organdy with veil and matching flower-trimmed hats. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers similar to that of the bride.

Mr. Lewis Kellar, brother of the bride, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Dean Dafoe, of Foxboro, Ontario, and Mr. Fred Osborne, of Peterborough, cousins of the bride.

The reception was held at the home of the bride, where the 55 guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore a gown of navy blue crepe with matching accessories and pink carnation corsage. The bride's table was daintily appointed with a fine, white linen cloth centred by a bride's cake, beautifully decorated and flanked by lighted, tall pink candles in crystal holders. The bridal table were similarly appointed and centred by bowls of pink carnations.

For travelling to Peterborough, Toronto, Niagara Falls and the United States, the bride chose a wine gabardine suit with navy accessories and gloves, and corsage of pink carnations. Upon their return, they will reside in Frankford.

Prior to her marriage, the bride-to-be was entertained at the home of Miss Mary Rose Thompson, when she was the recipient of many lovely gifts, in commemoration of the coming occasion.

Mr., Mrs. J. Menzies Celebrate Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Rawdon—Last Tuesday evening over 150 relatives and friends thronged the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. James Menzies, on the occasion of the celebration with them of the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

The bay window in the living-room was arranged with an arch of yellow and white streamers with a large bell in the centre. The table below was covered with a white lined yellow bordered cloth and yellow tapers in silver holders.

Lovely Cakes

The four-layer wedding cake was a picture of loveliness with a miniature bride and bridegroom gaily wavering from the top layer. The cake was made by Mrs. Kenneth Menzies, and decorated by their son, Kenneth, in a color scheme of white and gold.

Nearby was the bride's cake, made and iced in gold and green by sisters, Mrs. Nina Frank Osborne, (formerly Eleanor Hubble), of Campbellford.

Two lovely blooming potted plants added beauty to this corner, one a gift from their grandson, Master Leslie Nelson.

To bride of 50 years received, for her guests in a frock of green pleated crepe with a golden rose corsage.

The honored couple were married on April 17, 1901, by Rev. R. E. Gerrish, the Methodist minister residing at Coe Hill. The wedding was held at the home of the bride's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bird, of "The Ridge", in the Coe Hill district.

The bride was Miss Angelina Victoria Bird and she was gowned in a frock of pale blue sheer. The groom, Mr. James Menzies, was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander (Sandy) Menzies, of "The Ridge".

The attendants were the bride's sister, and brother, (both deceased), Miss Ellen Bird and Mr. William Bird.

Following their marriage they spent two years farming near the "Lake Post Office", in the North, later moving to the Mount Pleasant community near Morganston, and seven years ago they purchased the "Maynes" farm in the Mount Pleasant, Rawdon community.

Messrs. Arthur Brown, Peterborough, and George Bird, Frankford, attended the wedding 50 years ago and were also in attendance at the golden anniversary.

Many Cards Received

The happy couple received almost 70 cards of congratulations, many coming from relatives in the United States, London, Ontario, and from old and new friends and several of the cards were displayed on the buffet.

At 8.30 p.m., Rev. W. H. V. Walker, pastor of St. Andrew's, Presbyterian Church, Stirling, presided over a brief program with the honored guests seated near the altar.

Mr. Harry Brown, Carmel, conducted the sing-song, with his daughter, Miss Verna Brown, as accompanist.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen recited, "An Old Sweetheart of Mine", by James Whitcomb Riley.

Mrs. Rose Hoard contributed a musical selection on the piano.

Mrs. Frank Jeffs read an appropriate poem, entitled, "Fifty Years of Life Together".

Two musical selections, violin and piano were also contributed by Mr. George Potter and his sister, Mrs. Leslie Hermiston, of Warkworth.

Words of appreciation and congratulation were given on behalf of the old community near Morganston, by Mr. Leslie Campbell and on behalf of the community on the Anson Line, by Mr. Bert Bedford.

The address to the honored couple was read by Mrs. Percy MacMullen and paid tribute to the friendliness and hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Menzies and congratulated them on reaching such a famous milestone having spent fifty years travelling together on their matrimonial voyage.

Many Gifts

Mr. and Mrs. Menzies were the recipients of a large array of gifts which were presented as follows, a chest of silverware in "Fantasy" pattern, from their daughter, Gladys and husband, Mr. Cecil Nelson, from a nephew, Mr. Jack McMahon and a niece, Mrs. Robert Treneer and Mr. Treneer; electric clock and yellow bordered bath towels, from Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Menzie, Lorraine and Allen, of Warkworth; a tri-light floor lamp with fabri-sheen shade in gold trim and a large buffet mirror from Mount Pleasant community, near Morganston, and relatives from Campbellford. As the juncture, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Nelson and Leslie, were given seats of honor and Mr. Harold Hagerman read an address of appreciation to them as they have moved to their new home east of Stirling. Gladys and Cecil will be missed on the Anson Line but the loss here will be a gain to the new community.

Mr. Ross Jeffs made the presentation, of a large chesterfield table in walnut finish and to Leslie, a horse ornament of rockville.

This was a complete surprise to the recipients, however they extended their thanks and invited the guests to visit them in their new home.

A large of relatives served refreshments, which included the two special cakes.

Mrs. Douglas Turner, Mrs. Leon Turner, Mrs. Max Turner, and Mrs. Eddie Turner, daughters-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Turner, received the guests.

Mrs. Sam Turner and Mrs. Morley Spiker, charmingly attired in navy flowered crepe with corsage of red and white carnations, and navy sheer over taffeta, with corsage of pink and white carnations, respectively, were most gracious hostesses. During the evening, the Sunshine Euchre Club, of which Mrs. Turner is a member, presented her with a lovely gift, and in the evening she was the recipient of several other remembrances as well as a handsome walnut telephone table and chair from the immediate family.

The evening was spent in a general get-together, the playing of games and contests and a sing-song led by the hostess, Mrs. Turner.

A buffet luncheon was later served by the daughters-in-law.

Many telephone messages were received conveying to the holders of the dual anniversaries, congratulations and best wishes for many more years of happiness, as well as many floral offerings.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

April showers . . . for May brides and June brides

"April showers bring May flowers" . . . May weddings and June weddings, too. From coast to coast this is the merry time that is being sung these bright April days, and by and by the many-veiled bride-to-be who are looking forward to the Great Day in May or June.

Love-wit-find-a-way . . . this is, it should be, the origin of bridal showers. Once upon a time, in Holland, a beautiful maiden fell in love with a miller. The miller, alas, was poor. The girl's father, alas, was determined that she marry the son of a rich neighbor . . . insisted he would not give her a dowry if she married the poor miller. In those days, as you know, a girl could not marry without a dowry. What to do, what to do, in this sad state of affairs? To the rescue of Romance rushed the bevvies of friends, ingenious and understanding. Bearing lovely gifts . . . they came to her door . . . "showered" her with presents. Here, bless their heart, was her dowry. Love triumphed. And that's how showers were born!

The Pantry Shower . . . practical and fun, too.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've just received an invitation to a "Pantry Shower" . . . for this event to bring a kitchen utensil, or just what? I hate to be shy any of the girls for I don't know them very well, and I don't want to show them that I don't know. Please suggest some suitable gifts for this Pantry Shower.

Anne T.

No, a "Pantry Shower" doesn't mean a "Kitchen Shower", to which you would bring a kitchen utensil. It refers to a shower to which the guests bring tinned goods or canned items or jars of foods. It's a practical shower, and fun, too! Since undoubtedly the majority of the canned goods will be used "for two", I suggest any of these: several jars of jams or jellies and marmalades, in a decorative box or basket; perhaps two or three tins of boned chicken, or a jar or two of smoked turkey; one or two kinds of honey, or one bottle of honey and one of maple syrup; two or three bottles of dessert sauces, melba sauce, for example; preserved fruits; old standbys, such as baked beans, corned beef hash, spaghetti, one with tomato sauce, cans or packages of soups; or a group of small tins of hors d'oeuvres, such as antipasto, anchovies, sardines, and so forth; tins or jars of various kinds of nuts; jars of olives . . . green, ripe, stuffed; a group of jars of various kinds of herbs, for salads, sauces, and so forth; or the salad-making combination, one or two kinds of vinegar (perhaps tarragon and red wine vinegar), olive oil or other oil, a pepper grinder with a cellophane package of peppers; jars of cheese spreads; or tins of any kind of "tasty tidbits" which will be delectable additions to the new pantry shelf.

Merry Gadget-Shower . . . given "on location" in Five-and-Ten or convenient store

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I want to give a small, intimate shower for a dear friend of mine who has already been given a linen and personal shower, and who has flat silver, china and glass, for her new home. I want to give it on a Saturday afternoon, soon, inviting the new members of our Sunday School class, about ten girls. It must be an inexpensive shower, for we all have limited budgets. Have you any suggestions, please, Mrs. Beeckman?

Friend

How about a "Dime Shower", or "Quarter Shower" or "Half Dollar Shower" . . . to be given on location", that is, in a Five-and-Ten or in the housewares department of a local department store? One of the several special advantages is that the guest of honor, bride-to-be, chooses her own gifts. Each guest is told to bring a certain number of dimes, or quarters, or half-dollars, to the shower. . . . these coins to be enclosed in an attractive envelope with an appropriate picture or drawing or decalcomania on it, or otherwise interestingly "packaged". The collection is gathered together for the shower, presented to the guest of honor, and then the group goes to the local or nearby Five-and-Ten, or to the housewares department of a department store, and follow the guest of honor around as she chooses gadgets for her homeshe. It's fun-for-all, a merry parade. After the garnering of the things the bride-to-be can buy for the amount given, the group returns to your house for refreshments, and for the guests to receive her "Thank you, my dear friends, for providing me with just the gadgets I know I'll use so delightedly for the little bachelor girl's Ken and I are planning. Come to see us soon after we're married . . . and you'll see!"

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature about FOOD ... What's Cooking?

My kitchen is complete in a French household unless there is a scale. The French housemaker doesn't measure her butter or flour. She weighs it, instead, which is the most accurate way of following a recipe.

A cup of flour, for instance, may turn out to be 1-4 cups or 2-4 cup depending on whether it is sifted or packed down in the measuring container. One of the commonest causes of failure in baking is inaccurate measurement of flour. Four ounces of flour is four ounces no matter how many times it is sifted.

The best rule to follow in baking is to sift the flour once. Then spoon it lightly into the measuring container, and run a spatula over the top to make the measurement level. Use a nest of measuring cups if less than one cup is measured.

In today's recipe cake flour is combined with all purpose flour to make light tender muffins.

Apple and Raisin Muffins
Makes 12

1 1-2 cups all purpose flour
1-2 cup cake flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
1-4 cup vegetable shortening
1-3 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup milk
1-3 cup apple cubes
1-3 cup raisins

Heat the oven at 400 degrees.

Sift the all-purpose flour and cake flour. Then measure each spooning lightly into measuring cup without packing. Sift again with salt and baking powder.

Have shortening at room temperature. Stir the shortening to soften. Gradually add the sugar to the shortening, beating well.

Add unbeaten egg to shortening mixture. Beat well.

Peel and core the apple. Cut into small cubes. Add the apple and the raisins to the flour mixture.

Add the dry ingredients and the milk alternately to the shortening mixture. Begin and end with the dry ingredients. Do not overmix. Stir lightly only until a coarse batter is formed.

Turn batter into well greased muffin pan, filling each section 2-3 full. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until brown.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An unusually mature teen-ager is treated like a baby

Tess has a mother who, she says, doesn't realize that she's not a baby any more.

She's 17, a senior in high school and an honor student besides.

"By working after school, I support myself," she writes me. "I've earned my spending money since I was ten years old and now I don't depend upon my parents at all financially. During an illness of my mother's, I shouldered all responsibility, yet she still treats me as a child. If I have to work late, still I call home to tell my mother I'm working overtime, she is sure to call the boss up to find out if it's true, or else she'll send my brother in to see if I'm really there. I never go out with boys, because my mother doesn't want me to and I don't want to lie to her."

Even though Tess does not go out, with boys regularly, she has met one of whom she is very fond. Until he went into service he would take her home at night after she was through working. He wanted to come and meet her mother, but she was afraid to have him do this. Now that he is in service, he writes her regularly, and while the mother hasn't forbidden the correspondence, she opens all Tess's letters.

As far as the mother's opening the letters is concerned, I think this girl has a perfect right to prevent this by having her mail come to her elsewhere. Perhaps she could make arrangements to receive it at the place where she works; if not, then I would suggest that she spend the few dollars necessary to rent herself a box at the Post Office and have the letters come there. I hardly need to say that I am not in favor of deception, but I think in a case where a parent has so little respect for her daughter's right to privacy that she reads her mail, it is entirely in order for the girl to take steps to safeguard that privacy.

It will . . . s a little more difficult for her to establish her other important goal—that of greater independence to live her life. When her mother refuses to recognize her as a responsible person, and, instead, insists on checking up on her in the ways described, she is acting very childishly. And when an adult behaves like a child, it's not an easy problem to solve, involving, as it does, the whole character pattern of the individual.

The best I can suggest here is that the girl try to have as much patience as she can with the situation, always remembering that it won't be too long until she is of an age to assert herself. Obviously, a girl who has earned her own money from the age of ten, and who has been self-sufficient to make herself relatively independent financially before she is out of high school, is an unusually mature teen-ager. As such, she may be able to understand that if her mother's attitude is to be changed at all; it is far more likely to be influenced by consideration, patience and tolerance than by active opposition. And as such, again, she will be in a position, after she graduates from school, to leave home and go out on her own if she is unable otherwise to get the independence to which she is entitled.

It might be an effective thing to let it be known that such is her plan for the future unless her mother's attitude toward her changes in the meantime. If she could find a way to state this position just once, without any quarreling or bitter words, but with calmness and firmness, then never refer to it again, it might work wonders.

AMELIASBURG

Inspirational Addresses Feature Amelia sburg S.S. Convention

Amelia sburg—The 63rd annual Sunday School Convention of Amelia sburg township convened in the Methodist church on Wednesday with the president, Mr. Morley Dempsey, in the chair. Rev. H. H. Hemmings led the devotional service and minutes of the last session were read by the secretary, Mrs. Ivan Wannamaker.

The C.C.C.E. speaker, Rev. P. J. Stockwell, spoke on "Opportunities and Obligations of Township Officers", in which he showed how the Association can help the Sunday Schools in a township. Some points he emphasized were the duty of every considered worthwhile that we pass year. Mountain View, Ameliasburg and Massassaga reported a fine Vacation Church School conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie.

Mrs. Morley Davidson sang "Let Not Your Heart be Troubled", accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Hemmings.

Bible Study

An address, "Church Schools Reach Out", was given by Mr. Stockwell, who said in part: "The modern church must reach out for boys and girls, the titular interests are for them. The governments interested, the census is being taken, in a few years the boys and girls will be taxpayers. God is concerned. The boys and girls must become citizens of His Kingdom.

"People are becoming more interested; more people are attending church services and we must reach out for the boys and girls. Find out by a survey of them. How many are attending Sunday School. Hold teacher-training classes so we may have trained teachers. Mature people are needed as teachers and we have the best material to teach—the Bible.

"Be careful what we read to our children. Instead of reading fairy tales, read Bible stories. Teach children to read the Bible. Teach them to pray. Our parents should have taught us to pray. Our children should be taught. The reward for faithful work is the approval of our Heavenly Father."

Don Dawson reported on boys' work in the Sunday Schools, also a short talk on the world convention in Toronto, which he attended, also on the Boys' Parliament of which he was a member.

Mrs. A. Sills spoke on home-department work and Mrs. Kingsley spoke on leadership training.

Supper was served by the Massassaga ladies to the visiting delegates.

Mr. Kingsley was in charge of evening worship service, using hymn "Rejoice, The Lord is King", and prayer.

Reports of the committee was given by Mrs. Kingsley. "As a result of questionnaires we recommend organizing annual Sunday School rallies in different charges and that an executive, composed of members of Sunday Schools in Ameliasburg, Richmond and Consecon charges, be appointed to put this resolution into action and we ask that a motion be passed and reported to this effect." Moved by Mrs. Ivan Wannamaker, seconded by Mrs. A. Sills.

"We also recommend that the convener of committees be given the authority to notify superintendents of Sunday Schools in their charge to attend the annual visit from the convener, who will give a talk on his (or her) work. We ask a motion on this". Moved by Mrs. Kingsley, seconded by Mrs. C. Vancliff.

Officers Named

Officers were named as follows —past president, Morley Dempsey; president, John Wannamaker; vice president, Donald Dawson; secretary-treasurer, Audra Brickman; children's department, Mrs. George Harris, Jr.; boys' department, Donald Dawson; girls' department, Mrs. Kingsley; Young People's department, Miss Barbara Redner and Miss Barbara Brickman; adult department, Mrs. D. Watson; home department, Mrs. A. Sills; missionary department, Mrs. A. Hillman; Temperance, Andy Dobald; Vocational, Mrs. Henderson; leadership training, Mr. Kingsley.

A solo, "It is His Secret", by Mr. Billy Cook, was much enjoyed by all.

Education Defined

Mr. Lewis' address for the evening "Education by Accident", gave much food for thought. He said, "education is the acquiring of knowledge. The kind of people we are is the result of our education. So education is the total of all our lives, of all the things that happen to us. Other people in the environment affect us, other children influence us at school, the teacher influences us, hence we receive training by accident.

"It takes place in the home; in the attitude of parents to church and Sunday School. You can't do that at Sunday School if the parents are against you. Conversation in the home, pictures on the walls, magazines, all contribute to the attitude of children.

"It is our task as Christian parents and teachers to pass on the best we can, because we give so much education by accident. God is building a temple for eternity; some are given great tasks, some, very unimportant tasks but it is so important that we each do our part well. We never know what our influence will mean to some one else, but when we see the result may we each be able to say 'we are so glad we did our part well'."

The officers were installed by Rev. D. C. Lewis and the convention was dismissed by Rev. H. N. Hillis.

Next year's convention is to be held in Ameliasburg.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON OF THE WEEK

That Mountain Man, Moses

By ROY L. SMITH

Call the roll of the great names of history: Sargon, Shalmaneser, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Caesar, Napoleon, Washington, and not one of them can compare with Moses, the founder of the Hebrew nation.

Call the roll of the great lawgivers: Hammurabi, Caesar, Solon, Pharaoh, and none of them inspired such heights of thought as Moses.

Call the roll of the great patriarchs whose wisdom and leadership produced great states, and not one of them has approached the life of the world as did that man who led his hordes of slaves from the foot of Sinai.

The Founder of the Nation

The Scripture tells the story of Abraham, the father of the race. The Sunday school lesson of one week ago lifted his name up to honor and reverence.

Moses found a horde of ignorant and illiterate slaves who groaned under the most terrible taskmastering the world has ever known and in the brief space of forty years molded them into a nation that had in it the power of survival.

A People of a Law

This mountain man made them a different people—a race set apart from all the races of men.

The Old Testament is redolent with the charges of sinning of Israelites, and of lapses into paganism. But history is agreed that the Hebrews at their worst were vastly superior to paganism at its best.

The Sunday School lesson for April 29: "The Period of Moses", Exodus 14-15; Deuteronomy 5-6; Psalm 136.

An epochal event took place in the wilderness when God laid his stamp upon the Hebrews for all the years of eternity. They entered into a covenant with the God by which they bound themselves to live differently from all other men. There is no explaining the Jew on any other basis.

Historians and scientists have searched the record with exceeding care, and find nothing to explain the difference between the Hebrew and the other ancient dwellers in the Near East. They are all of approximately the same blood; their moral standards seem to have come out of the very soil; the desert marked them all. But to the Jew there was given something extra.

That Fine Was Their Law!

That "something" that made them different—which enabled them ultimately to survive—was their system of law.

It combined high ethical standards, enlightened social ideals, infinite devotion to justice, a profound religious base, and a democratic concept which rested back on two supreme convictions; (1) that there is a divinity about humanity, and (2) that all individuals enjoy a sanctity that cannot be ignored.

Just a little way under the surface of their ancient system of laws contained in the book of Deuteronomy, we find a sincere concern for the poor, an innate sense of basic justice, a conviction that all men are responsible to a moral authority which rules the world. Read the entire book and you will find it makes no room for an aristocracy either of birth or of economic power. Leadership is invested with responsibility; the great are great for a purpose; the strong must bear double the burden.

What man in all of history,

IVANHOE

Mrs. W. Shaw Addresses W.M.S.

Ivanhoe—On Tuesday afternoon the Ivanhoe W.M.S. of Ivanhoe United met at the pastoral cottage for the regular meeting.

The president, Mrs. Earl Benson presided.

In the absence of the secretary, Mrs. George Wood read the minutes from the last meeting and called the roll by all responding with a verse of Scripture containing the letter "A". This showed an attendance of 14 members and three visitors present.

During the business period, thank-you' letters were read from some of the older members who had been remembered at Easter.

Mrs. Leroy Rollins, leader of the Mission Band, gave a splendid report of their work. Further plans were also made for a Visitors' Day to be held early in May.

The program was conducted by Mrs. Sam Twiddy using the theme, "Recruiting for Full-time Service in the Church". The Scripture lesson, March 10: 17-21, was read by Mrs. Leroy Rollins. A reading on Christian Stewardship was given by Doris V. Twiddy outlining on the great need there is for each one to help even in her own small group.

A helpful paper on the keyword was given by Mrs. Elymer Rollins, stressing the need for each to give their "all", whatever she might have, to the Master's Work.

Mrs. Will Shaw, a guest from St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, gave a message on "Temperance". This was very much enjoyed and food for thought and was an aid to help in this great work.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. B. J. Beckel and assisted by several of the ladies present.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Rev. and Mrs. B. J. Beckel for their kindness and the fine hospitality shown.

CAMPBELLFORD

Hospital Auxiliary

Campbellford—The April meeting of the Hospital Auxiliary was held in the Co-Op rooms on Friday last with the president, Mr. H. E. Fox, presiding. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were given, the latter showing a bank balance of $147.86. The proceeds of the tea meeting also were $55.89, the Catholic Women's League donated $15 to the Auxiliary and the proceeds of the play in the High School by the Young Adults' Club and the Hill Billies were $33.75.

Mrs. Jos. Smith kindly offered her home or lawn for an afternoon tea and cooking sale to be held on Saturday, June 2. Mrs. W. F. Scott was appointed convener with a helper from each ward. The draw for a donated quilt will take place at the tea.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ridings, of Sale, Cheshire, England, arrived in Canada on Sunday and proceeded to Campbellford for a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Jack Steele and Mr. Jack Steele. Mrs. Ridings was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. J. Barnett. They will remain in Canada for about three months.

Why do we contour plow?

By plowing around a hill rather than up and down, small dams or ridges are created by the furrows. These hold the soil back during rains and spring thaws. Crop increases of 20% to 30% have been recorded the first year after contour plowing. It takes almost 1000 years for nature to produce one inch of topsoil.

Chandler May Run For Governor Of Kentucky

(By The Canadian Press)

Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler is seriously considering giving up his "easy" baseball job for the Kentucky governorship race, friends said yesterday.

After telling Representative Noble J. Gregory he may seek the governorship, Chandler declined publicity to Senator Thomas R. Underwood, Democratic floor leader in the Kentucky Senate. They both emphasized, however, that Chandler still has not definitely that he would be a candidate.

The former Kentucky governor and U. S. Senator has been turned down twice in his bid to have his commissioner's contract renewed.

Krieger, now 42, started his ring career in 1923 and retired in 1941.

The Chesterfield, England, soccer club yesterday signed up for sale all its players—including a town magistrate.

Smythe, Campbell Had Talk Fest During Game

Montreal, April 30 —(CP)— Conn Smythe, president of the National Hockey League said in the general manager of Toronto Maple Leafs—and vice versa — was still a matter of speculation and even a possibility, today.

The incident cropped up just right in the second period of the Stanley Cup hockey final between Leafs and Canadiens. The game was in overtime 9-2, if that is pertinent.

Max Bentley of the Leafs had just been given a penalty. In a few seconds Smythe had left his ringside seat and was talking with Campbell, seated in a nearby box seat.

In another few seconds Smythe was the centre of attraction, with fans swarming about him in couple of cops and ushers hand.

Smythe said Campbell spoke to him first. He didn't say what Campbell said. He didn't say what he himself had said.

But there was no implication that Smythe considered Bill Tobey boss of the Chicago Black Hawks and overseer of the series for the NHL, was the man to do any authorizing or talking as far as the game was concerned.

Some of the pop-eyed onlookers said Smythe emphasized his words by grasping Campbell's coat lapel. Others said Smythe just talked. That's what everybody else did after the incident—talked, with the usual number of versions of the affair.

Citadelles Score 7-2 Win Over Barrie Flyers

Quebec, April 30 (CP) Quebec Citadelles slaughtered Barrie Flyers 7-3 on home ice last night to revive their hopes for the Ontario Canada Memorial Cup finals.

Unabashed by two previous defeats in the best-of-seven series, Citadelles went all out before 18,331 fans to defeat Barrie in a rough fast game.

The Quebecers' display left Happy Rochefort's crew completely shellshocked for the series. "If they (Citadelles) keep on playing like they did last night I think they'll take the series four straight," he said.

Jean Beliveau Citadelles' much publicized centre, started and ended the scoring. He slammed a brace of markers. Copper Leyte, a big, rugged pivot man, also scored two goals one of them a rousing solo dash while Quebec were playing short-handed.

Gaston Gervais, Rollie Dubeau and Roger Guay scored the other Citadelles goals.

Rene Chevrefils and Leo Labine, Barrie's always-threatening wingers, scored for the losers, while defenceman Jerry Toppazzini was a power-work behind the blue line and on the attack.

Territorial play was about even with Citadelles outshooting Flyers 28-27. Both goalies, Marcel

Financial Worries Close Cape Breton Senior Ball Loop

Sydney, N.S., April 30 (CP) — Senior baseballers probably got the knock of a lifetime when the Cape Breton Colliery Senior Baseball League announced it would not operate this year. Many fans think it will be a shot in the arm for the development of the home-grown product.

Executive members of the four-team Colliery League have stated that no plans have been made to continue the circuit, which was dependent upon United States imports. All the squads—Sydney, Sydney Mines, New Waterford and pennant-winning Glace Bay Miners went into the red last season.

According to one league official, the failure of the Nova Scotia Baseball Association to control the playoffs was one reason for the collapse. He claimed that two years in a row Cape Breton winners were shorn of changes when Halifax and district senior baseball league champs refused to stick to decisions on playoff dates.

Colliery League president Judge D. W. Macadam of Sydney said no meeting had been called to make the break-up official but "there is no doubt about it. The clubs are not in a position to continue."

Even before the 1950 season closed New Waterford and Whitney Pier, old rivals, were against re-entrance in 1951. To them, the handwriting on the wall was plain when a three-team Cape Breton Junior League started to cut sizeable holes in senior attendance.

Now the juniors are expected to blossom into the main performance this summer. Six teams are definitely in the fight.

Fallis of Quebec, and Barrie's Lorne Howes made some apparently-impossible saves.

A number of high-sticking fights that involved almost every player at one time or another saw the overworked referees, Stan Pratt and Hap Shouldice of Ottawa, hand out 72 penalties. Barrie was given 10 penalties, including three majors, while Quebec received 14, including two majors.

Winnipeg Wins From Regina Pats By Shutout Route

Winnipeg, April 30 (CP) Winnipeg Monarchs edged in the first game of their semi-final series to whitewash Regina Pats 2-0 last night in the Western Canada Junior hockey finals.

The victory gave Monarchs a 2-1 edge in the best-of-seven series with one game tied. The fifth game will be played here Saturday night.

Laurie Mitchell bagged Monarchs' first goal. Ross Parke got the other. Regina goalie Bob Taylor had been yanked in the dying moments of the game in favor of a sixth attacker.

The game was one of the roughest played here this season, with 24 penalties handed out, including four majors and two misconducts.

Monarchs' best line was Laurie Mitchell, Bruce Bell and Johnny Novak, while their defence played a solid game. However it was goalie Don Collins who again grabbed top honors. The agile netminder time and again foiled the high-scoring line of Eddie Litzenberger, Bun Smith and Lloyd Cowan. Collins handled 21 drives compared with Tyler's 15.

After Regina had pressed for the first few minutes, Winnipeg roared back and broke into the scoring at 4:49 when Mitchell took Bell's pass out from behind the Regina net and planted it past Tyler.

Timekeeper Arthur Morrison was kept busy as the referees Paul Bozak and Pat Morrison penalized player after player. Tony Schneider was the only defender with three minors and major for charging defenceman Bill Burega into the boards. It was announced later that Burega had a possible concussion.

With six minutes and 40 seconds left, coach Murray Armstrong pulled Tyler from the net and sent on six attackers. They tried to gang the Monarch nets but Parke got a double pass from Barr and Novak in his own zone, fired the puzzler the length of the ice and into the empty Regina net.

Leafs in Driver's Seat by Third Win in Overtime

Harry Watson Blasts one Home in 5.15 After Regulation Time To Defeat Canadiens by 3-2

By W. E. WHEATLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 20 (CP) — Big Harry Watson, overtime hero of game No. 2 for Toronto Maple Leafs, last night fired the winning goal that left Montreal Canadiens with only a slender hope of surviving the Stanley Cup final.

It was the fourth consecutive overtime game between the teams and the husky left-winger's tell-tale shot — for a 3-2 victory gave Leafs a 3-1 lead in games in the best-of-seven series.

If maidens pray must win three games in a row against terrific odds if they are to grab the unconquerable they last held in 1946, the fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Toronto Saturday night.

Watson's goal, his first of the series, climaxed a thrilling duel between the closely-matched clubs.

Twice Canadiens came from behind to tie the score in a grim-faced, wide-open game in which goaltending even average shocking played an important part.

Both teams played it to the limit in a dazzling display before 14,433 shrieking fans at the Forum. Caution was forgotten in the desperate scramble for goals. Both teams defied safe opportunities and Watson's big punch with 15 minutes remaining polished to a brilliance the thin, jagged edge the Leafs had held through the regulation game by their speedy, opportunity matching play.

For the fourth straight time the breaks played their part. The Leafs proved the better opportunists.

Watson's goal suddenly crushed Canadiens' all-out drive in the extra play. Billy Reay, Montreal centre, missed a setup in front of the Toronto net by lifting the puck into goalie Al Rollins' pads.

Trapped a Pass

The play swung to the other end. Max Bentley, ailing Toronto centre, trapped a pass from Montreal's Bernie Geoffrion. At the same moment Watson hopped to the ice from the Toronto bench in a swift change of players. Bentley slid the puck to Watson. Big Harry shoved it ahead, went around Defenceman Doug Harvey, regained the puck and rifled it past goalie Gerry McNeil.

Each Leaf goal in earlier periods was matched by Canadiens but it was a long, tough haul.

Sid Smith opened the scoring for Toronto after only 38 seconds of play, rapping in a short goal-mouth pass from Ted Kennedy.

Maurice (Rocket) Richard, Montreal's sensational right-winger and a standout in every game, scored 13 minutes later, plowing and whirling on Billy Reay's pass and driving a backhander into the net.

Smith's goal marked the fourth time in the series he has scored the opening goal for the Leafs, and gave him a total of five. Richard's was his fourth against the Leafs.

Little Howie Meeker put the Leafs ahead in the second period, deflecting in Watson's shot at 1.37.

Canadiens' desperate bid for the tying marker didn't click until 13.49 of the third period, when Elmer Lach steered Richard's pass past Rollins.

The rugged, bruising game produced records of sorts. It was the first time a Stanley Cup playoff series brought four overtime games in a row. In 1933 the Leafs and Boston Bruins played three consecutive overtime games.

Richard Holds Record

Richard's goal and assist last night gave him a total of 64 scoring points. The best previous was 62 held by Joe Blake. Richard's former linemate who now coaches the Valleyfield club of the Quebec Senior League and his his team in the chase for the

Hornets Rally With Three Goals To Defeat Barons

Cleveland, April 20 — (AP) — Pittsburgh's Hornets rallied with three goals in the last period last night to defeat Cleveland Barons 3-1 and tie the American Hockey League's best-of-seven Calder Cup championship playoff at 3 games each.

A crowd of 8,328 saw the Hornet victory which sends the series into a final game here Saturday night.

Bob Solinger scored two goals and Phil Maloney got the third as Pittsburgh made its last - period bid to stay in the race.

Ward opened for Cleveland at 8:33 of the first period, but after that the Hornets dominated the game, being held at bay only by the expert goaltending of Johnny Bower, in his third period appearance.

Solinger scored for the Hornets at 4:44.

With less than two minutes to go, Maloney made it 2-1 for the Hornets.

In the final minute, Bower was taken out of the net, and from a face-off play in Pittsburgh's zone, Solinger went the length of the rink to drop the puck into an open cage, at 19:21. Solinger, former Cleveland star, has scored 10 goals in the playoffs, seven of them against Cleveland.

M.P. Calls N.H.L. Greatest Combine In Dominion

Ottawa, April 20 (CP) — Rev. Dan. McIver (Fort William) told the Commons last night he believes the National Hockey League is "one of the greatest combines we have in Canada."

The veteran Conservative and long-time sports enthusiast said he feared for the future of hockey "if it continues to be so destructive to our good athletes by way of injuries."

Dealing specifically with the NHL, he said:

"Boys of 16 years of age are infatuated with hockey. They play a good game, have plenty of speed and can find the goal. A scout comes along and such a boy signs something.

"Afterwards he may want to change his mind. Perhaps his dad has talked to him, or a man who is coaching him or his mother has had something to say about it.

"Nevertheless, the big magnate says to him: 'You will play for us or you will not play at all.'

"To my mind, that is one of the worst combines in Canada."

Alexander Trophy

Richard, playing in his seventh playoff series, has 42 goals and 22 assists in 56 games. Blake counted 25 goals and 37 assists in 57 games of playoffs.

Despite the ruggedness of last nights' game, in which threatening brawls quickly subsided, only seven minor penalties were called by referee George Gravel. Four went to the Leafs. Neither team could score when holding a man advantage.

Canadiens, fighting from behind all the way, barely edged the Leafs in shots on goal, 21-19.

Cambridge Crew Heads for Home With Two Wins

Cambridge, Mass., April 20 — (CP) — The Cambridge University crew headed home for England today with clean - cut victories over two old and respected American rowing powers, Yale and Harvard.

The Cambridge shell, using what Americans consider the old style of rowing as compared to the prevailing conibear stroke, was never behind in its two races — the first intercollegiate international rowing competition on this side of the Atlantic.

"We were fully extended in each race," said the delighted British coach, Harold Rickett. "We came over here hoping to show Americans some good rowing, and to cement Cambridge's relations with Yale and Harvard."

Cambridge beat Yale by four lengths at Derby, Conn., last Saturday, and Harvard by a length and a half here yesterday. Boston University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology were distant third and fourth in the regatta here.

The British oarsmen showed themselves superb competitors. Their shell rowed in matchless unison, the oarsmen leaning far back at the end of the stroke at once did American crews under the Ten Eycks at Syracuse or the Gleasons of Navy and Columbia. And the cox, John Hinde, always kept his eye on his opponents. His chief was to get ahead and stay ahead — and he succeeded.

Howe Credited With Goal Instead Of Ted Lindsay

Montreal, April 20 — (CP) — National Hockey League headquarters announced yesterday that a Stanley Cup playoff goal previously awarded Ted Lindsay of Detroit Red Wings has been officially credited now to Gordie Howe.

The decision was reached after league officials conferred with Referee Bill Chadwick and official scorer Ed Sanzino of Boston.

The game was the memorable sixth of the cup semi-final between Montreal Canadiens and the Red Wings, played in Montreal April 7. The goal was scored at 19:15 of the third period during Detroit's furious attack in an effort to tie the score.

Canadiens won the game 3 - 2 and the series 4-2 in games and advanced to the final against Toronto Maple Leafs.

The goal was fired from a swarm of players inside the Montreal blue line. The scorer awarded it to Lindsay with assists to Sid Abel and George Gee. Many spectators, newspaper men and radio men watching the play said at the time they thought Howe was the marksman.

The official change gives Howe four goals in the playoff series. The assists remain the same — to Abel and Gee.

Quakers' Coach Riled About Team's Showing

Toronto, April 20— (CP) Coach Riley Mullen, whose Saskatoon Quakers are just a game away from elimination from the Alexander Cup semi-finals, isn't making excuses.

"We were rotten, that's all there is to it," said Mullen, commenting on the team's showing against Toronto St. Michael's Monarchs in the third game of the best-of-seven series here Wednesday night.

Quakers lost the game 6-4 and now trail Toronto 2-0 in the series to decide the playoff opponent in the major series final against either Valleyfield Braves or Sydney Millionaires.

"My boys didn't want to skate, they didn't want to check and they didn't even want the puck," Mullen said. "They looked as though they were walking on wooden legs. I've never seen them so bad before."

But Mullen's comments are no indication of how he feels about tonight's fourth game at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"We'll be trying our best tonight and should be able to take them. As I've said before, if we reach our peak we can skate them off the ice."

The Saskatoon line-up will be different for tonight's game. George Sexsick, individual high star Wednesday, will not be in action, result of an ankle injured in the third game.

However, Mike Shabags, formerly with Owen Sound Mercurys, will play for Saskatoon for the first time in weeks.

In the St. Michael's camp there was confidence. Coach Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty admitted he was pleased with the showing of his crew. He figured the team might be able to finish the series tonight.

O'Flaherty coached from behind the bench Wednesday night but he hopes to be playing tonight. Johnny Arundel who suffered a severe charley horse was skating yesterday and will also be ready to go.

Chicago White Sox Hitting Like Boston Red Sox Thanks To Stickwork of Al Zarilla

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Maybe it's only Al Zarilla, but Chicago White Sox era hitting looks like Red Sox now.

Zarilla is making Frank Lane, the baseball general manager, look like the American League's Branch Rickey.

Last December they laughed when Lane traded Sky Hamner and Cloyd Boyer to Boston for Zarilla, Joe Dobson and Dick Kokos. "Maybe he got plenty of dough involved," the wise guys said.

Lane insisted it was an "even trade" that would help both clubs. All winter it seemed Boston Red Sox would be the only club helped. Most experts thought the two regular pitchers received from the pennant 31 star yet, but the first week's evidence is behind them.

Right, knocked out by New York opening day, was Boston's first loser. Zarilla, batting with two home runs, is batting .545 with two home runs, a double and two singles accounting for seven runs batted in.

Zarilla and Eddie Robinson each spanked a three-run homer yesterday off Al Widmar in the 15-3 rout of the Browns before only 1,070 fans.

Both Hitting Rich

It's been years since you didn't have to turn the newspaper upside down to find both Chicago teams on top. But look quick, before something happens. Both the White Sox and Cubs are riding high, tied for first place.

Frankie Frisch, Cub manager, got a well-pitched game from Paul Minner to shut out Cincinnati 3-0 on seven hits. Willie (the Knuck) Ramsdell was the victim as the Reds lost their third straight.

New York and Boston concluded their opening series all even by splitting a doubleheader after the opener was rained out.

Sydney Evens Alexander Cup Series With Braves

SYDNEY, N.S., April 20. (CP)—Yesterday's power play on the second game of their Alexander Cup series against Sydney Millionaires last night and it is likely they will lodge a protest to the NHL when cleared.

Millionaires edged the Braves 3-2 last night and tied the best-of-three series 1-1. Third game will be played here Saturday.

Coach Hector (Toe) Blake of Montreal protested after the game that he would protect the Sydney win. The protest probably would be based on a disallowed goal at the end of the second period, a goal that would have given Valleyfield a tie.

It came as the result of a move that left fans staring with disbelief. With five seconds left in the second period Sydney goalie Paul Leclerc was taken off and six Braves went on to face Jeff Hagerty's end.

The visitors got the draw and with a series of short passes they put the puck in Millionaire's net. However, the red light failed to go on and Referee George Dewes of Moncton, said the puck entered timing device had probably cut the current before the goal crossed the cream. The green light signifying goal of regualition time flashed on automatically.

Referees Allow Goal

Referees Jack Mellenbacher and Andy Ballemer had been following the play and signified the goal. Mather referee had noticed the green light.

The Maritime Champs built a 2-0 lead with a single in each period before Valleyfield sank two in the final frame. Fred Hildebrand scored Sydney's first goal but Billy Gray was the hero when he got the next two.

The Quebec utilists broke into the scoring column on an effort by Jack Irvine, assisted by Jack Schmidt and Larry Kwong. At 12:40 Doug Meadmore chased the puck past Sydney goalie Nick Pitkosky after a pretty play with Irvine and Schmidt.

Then the game opened up with Bob Valleyfield's Norman Netminder Leclerc moved halfway to his blue line, ready for the call to the bench.

It looked bad for Sydney, and Doug Meadmore achieved the count twice during the last four minutes for tripping and interference. With Mackinyre off at 19:43, Blake again took Leclerc out of the nets and Sydney's Don McNeil glued the puck to his stick and Valleyfield didn't get it.

Syracuse Chiefs Score Second Straight Win

(By The Canadian Press)

Baseball is a funny business. When the International League opened its 65th consecutive season Tuesday 29,159 fans turned out for the first game. The triple-A leagues that day drew only 9,561 for first games.

But apparently the triple-A International circuit can't stand Monday. Two games were played yesterday and a total of 730 paid turned out.

A crowd of 617 saw Baltimore Orioles win a 10-7 slugging match from Montreal's Royals in a night game at Baltimore, Tuesday, when the Royals whipped Baltimore 15-7, 2,526 fans were in the stands.

Four home runs, featured by Jess Moore's grand-slam homer in an eight-run fourth inning, did the job for Baltimore. Relief Joe Payne, who gave up one hit in four innings, was the winner. Montreal used five pitchers, starting with loser Glen Cox.

Syracuse Chiefs scored their second straight victory, edging Buffalo Bisons 4-3 before 3,215 fans. The Chiefs bopped out Rafalo starter for all of their runs. Pitcher Jack Robinson started a three-run outburst in the second inning with a double followed by Benny Zientara's single and Lorne Howard's homer. Hank Foiles hit a four-bagger in the fourth for what proved to be the winning run.

Rain washed out the Ottawa at Springfield game. Toronto and Rochester were not scheduled.

Noranda Copper Kings Defeat Fredericton 6-3

Fredericton, April 20 — (CP)—Noranda Copper Kings defeated Fredericton Capitals 6-3 last night in the opener of a two-game overtime and became intermediate hockey champions of Eastern Canada.

The Quebec team won the title in a best-of-seven contest-of-three series. They won the opener 5-4 and Caps took the second 6-4.

Last night's game followed the pattern of Noranda's first win, when Copper Kings shot four tallies in the last stanza.

They trailed 1-0 at the end of the first period last night and knotted the count in the second. The score was 3-3 when the third session ended.

Then the invaders fired three more during 10 minutes of overtime. Some while Caps were a man short and the other when Copper Kings were short a man.

After the game a spokesman for the eastern champions said that Noranda's Flin Flon Smoke Eaters of British Columbia for a series to decide the Dominion title.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

Columbus, O., April 20 (AP)—Minor-league baseball is about to receive a warning "commission" which will permit ball players to work at part-time jobs in other fields during the season . . . but President George M. Trautman of the National Association says there are seven fewer leagues scheduled to operate this year and that he wouldn't be surprised to see a few more fold up before the season ends . . . Molson's

Tom Gard's Note Book

Last fall, after cleaning the summer's accumulation of junk off my work bench, I decided to start afresh in and make a movable lounge for the garden. One started, the project proved not too difficult. Old packing cases provided the sides, pieces of two by four formed the frame and junior surrended two small wheels from his dilapidated cart to make it mobile. Now I can look forward to next summer and many hours of relaxation — reclining at any angle in any part of the garden. In case you haven't the packing case skids, then string the frame with rope, it will work equally well.

Framed

I am anything but an artist yet the work of good Canadian painters has held my interest for several years. Last week I spent a pleasant evening with a group who had found artists and quite conversant with the work being done in Canada. During our conversation I noticed and remarked on the attractiveness of a picture hanging on the wall of his home. After my flattering comments had ceased, he suggested I take a closer look at it. Was my face red! It was simply a cheap print framed. He explained how it had been done and made me feel somewhat better by remarking that I was not the only one who had been fooled by the particular picture. It certainly looked real — even to the old antiques frame.

Fashion Recess

Ever since junior graduated from Fashion I have been intending to put some of the items to good use. My small daughter finally put on the pressure for a new doll cradle I had promised her for last Christmas. With material left over from the drapes, White at it I finished up a knitting box that had been talked about and hinted at for an even longer period.

Another item in my new house number party crept by one seen recently. The householder had made an attractive wooden base and then fashioned the numbers from rope. The whole thing had been made weatherproof with water-resistant varnish.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 20. (AP)—Lately I've found that technical advisors are more interesting than actors.

You'll see what I mean when I introduce Lt. Louis Van den Holzer.

He is a man with a rugged face and a European accent who advises on historical pictures—from "The Life of Emil Zola" to "Anna and The King of Siam".

But his specialty is the French Foreign Legion. He was a member of the Legion from 1908 to 1915.

Not the Same

"The films often show the Legion as full of renegades and criminals," he observed. "That isn't true. A criminal wouldn't be allowed in. Or if he did get in, he would soon be found out.

"The Foreign Legion gets most of its men because of world conditions. They are mostly men seeking escape for political reasons.

"Generally, the Germans make up 64 per cent of the Legion. There have been very few British or Americans, despite what you see in the movies."

And Not Sadistic

The technical adviser objects when film makers try to portray Legion officers as sadistic.

"The Legion is not run by beatings," he said. "It is more likely that a soldier would hit an officer than vice versa. The officers do not gain obedience by their fists, but by engendering a camaraderie."

GOVT. URGED

Defence Production Minister Howe said the government does not intend to limit the advance of newsprint in Canada.

In the debate, Mr. Stanfield called for action to stop the freight - rate burden on the Maritime provinces. If they are to trade with central and western Canada, he said, something will have to be done about the high freight rates. He urged adoption of a national fuel policy to assist the Nova Scotia coal industry.

Urges Floor Price

Mr. White urged establishment of a floor price of at least 63 cents a pound for butter and 33 cents a pound for cheese. He said the government should also compensate Ontario and Quebec bacon and cheese producers to make up for the low prices received on products sold to British under contract during the war and post-war years.

Joseph Noseworthy (CCF — York South) and H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) said the budget had not based taxes on ability to pay. The rich and poor alike would pay sales, excise and income taxes at the same rates. Those in the low income brackets would be the hardest hit. They suggested that larger corporations could have been taxed more heavily along with persons in the higher-income brackets.

Dr. F. G. Robertson (L—Northumberland) defended the budget and termed it a "realistic" and "fair" budget even if it was not "it" to the opposition. He did, however, regret that the new 15-per cent excise tax on refrigerators, washing machines and stoves.

Should Be Given Option

Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, V.C. (PC-Nanaimo) urged that Imperial veterans in Canada be given the option of retaining either Canadian or British personal income taxes.

Under an existing agreement with the United Kingdom, the pensioners are called to pay the British tax. Gen. Pearkes said that part of the high British tax is used to pay for what some described as the "welfare state." But the British pensioners in Canada reaped no benefits from that state.

Raymond Brunsen (L-Prescott) called for a decentralization of industry, aid to agriculture in Eastern Canada, assistance to the Hawkesbury Flying Club in his constituency, and a government program to check the flooding of the Nation River.

Mr. White asked the government in place Ontario prices of 62 cents a pound under butter and 32 cents a pound under cheese. Low prices were making dairy farmers "desperate" to the fight against inflation.

He expressed doubt that a long-term contract could be concluded with the United Kingdom government this year. But Agriculture Minister Gardiner should tell the producers whether their cheese was going to be required. Low prices for 37 cents a pound while New Zealand cheese was imported at 32 to 34 cents, Mr. White said, were forcing scores of cheese factories in Ontario to close.

He urged Mr. Gardiner to take up with the government the question of compensation to bacon and cheese producers of Ontario and Quebec to make up for the low prices they received on products sold to Britain under contract in the war and post-war years.

"If this was not done, Mr. Gardiner dare to frate wheat growers would be asked to explain why wheat producers recently was paid for wheat sold under the Anglo-Canadian agreement.

Mr. White said the dairy industry should get the same kind of consideration given the shirt-making industry some months ago when cheap, competitive Japanese shirts were banned from the Canadian market.

Raymond Brunsen praised finance minister Abbott for his achievement of budgetary surpluses. He bringing about the national debt by nearly $5,000,000,000 in the last five years, the finance minister had relieved the taxpayers approximately $70,000,000 in interest charges.

He expressed hope that the United States Congress would approve the St. Lawrence Seaway project this year, and said he did not think it would harm the Maritimes. Rather, it would bring much good to Canada as a whole.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

The bellboy, Jigger, astounded that the interloper had dared walk should know this beautiful creature, stopped only a few feet behind Tim Reese and Jean Roland.

Then reached for his canes, moved to get up. Jean did not take her eyes off him.

"Hi," she grinned, fully enjoying her astonishment now.

Jean Roland did not smile. She was, as she studied Tim, trying to make a decision.

Abruptly, characteristically, she made the decision. She turned abruptly to Jigger.

"Would you fetch my wrap, Jigger?"

Jigger sped away.

Jean turned back to Tim "Suppose we go somewhere we can sit down and celebrate?"

Tim was embarrassed. "But—I don't want you to leave the Ball for me."

She gave him a full radiant smile.

"I do," she said.

That evening it was very quiet at Giulio's, a gracious little dining room, a few doors east of the Avenue on 52nd Street, for the saintly lighted lounges in front, a goomish young pianist played there, and there was always wistful fingers.

The music tinkled back into the luminous dusk of the small dining room, just reaching the small table where Jean and Tim sat side by side.

At first, Jean did most of the talking. She was a great happiness for her, she told Tim, to see him out of the blind alley. Now, she intimated, they could be together often in New York. That is, she smiled, if he wished it.

Then, before he had opportunity to question her, she shrewdly sought to divert his mind of any doubts or suspicions he might have had. She had been so busy on her return to New York, she explained, she had not had a single moment to herself, or the phone.

The business of getting home had thrown her into complete confusion, and, on top of that, she said, the party preparations for the Ball had all but driven her mad.

Finally, she decided, she would not let Tim know of the ball until it was over. She was certain, she said the winter white gown would win the award. She thought it best to wait then and surprise him with 'the announcement.

But Tim had long since forgiven, or more correctly, forgotten.

Earlier, when they left the Empire, Tim thought they would go some quiet new restaurant. But Jean, at Giulio's at ease and enjoying herself, made no move to return. When Tim suggested perhaps it was time she should go back, she was amazed.

"You are much more fascinating than anyone there," she said.

"Now, wait a minute," Tim protested.

"Whose design won tonight?"

"But look who modeled it."

"A model is only as good as what she wears." She was in a candor now. "Here you are in New York, walking around handsome and healthy. What could be more exciting? I haven't begun to get over the surprise of seeing you—" She was intimate, physical now, "and I have an idea it'll take longer than tonight to get over the pleasure of it."

"Take as long as you like," he grinned. "We're both young. It sounds fine to me."

Paul Panciera alone troubled Tim's evening.

It was with some uneasiness that he inquired, "What was the Paul of the Jean Paul? Was he the ogre, the Jean intimated the head of the firm to be?

Jean was immediately wary. "I don't think anyone could consider him a Prince Charming — underneath."

"He has the old charm on the surface, I'll say that for him."

"She does make a pleasant appearance, and that is important in the business." Jean moved closer. "I didn't want to describe him to you out at the hospital. I was afraid you'd be jealous."

Tim was pleased, soothed. "You knew even then I might be jealous of someone?"

She laughed her intimate little laugh. "No one could ever call you subtle, Mr. Reese."

Thus easily was Mr. Panciera silenced of.

Tim Reese, in tranquil good spirits, nibbling cheese and sipping fine red burgundy, Giulio had produced as a compliment to Jean Roland, began to relax, Tim talked now and Jean listened.

He told her of his cure, of his reluctance that night, of his dreams, of the time he had seen the face of Jean Roland Shop with her in charge and with him as designer.

At this, Jean's eyes shone. Gone immediately was the concern that had troubled her since that moment earlier when the bellboy had led her to Tim in the lobby and she had discovered Tim was no longer a far-off person in a wheel chair.

At that first sight of Tim she had realized that Paul Pancieras would no longer be able to pose as the designer genius of "Jean Paul," that, indeed, from then on Mr. Pancieras might very well be much in the way.

Jean had made her decision quickly, audaciously, in that moment in the lobby. Now, as she heard Tim tell of his dream of a gown shop of her own, she knew how wise her decision had been.

She was very close to him and her voice was soft, personal, as she said, "suppose we call the shop 'Teresa's,' darling? That is how we met and how it all began."

Tim looked at her, pleased and gratefully, and found himself completely. Now, when he talked again, his dream seemed no longer a dream, and time tinkled inaudically away to music, as the gnomish young pianist conjured from the keys the haunting pathos of Debussy.

Before long, even Jean was enchanted.

Paul Pancieras was waiting for Jean when she returned late that night. He sat in an easy chair by the fireplace. On the table beside him stood the miniature gold mannequin awarded him at the Ball.

Neither spoke for a moment. He watched her carefully as she removed her wrap. Her movements were light, almost gay.

"Your mood eludes me, sweet," he said. "It gather however, this time the young man did not give you the—what is it you call it? —the willies."

Jean did not answer. She went to the mirror, scrutinized herself and appeared pleased, with what she saw. Mr. Pancieras, who had never leaving her, got to his feet, went to her.

"What did he do?" he asked her. "Wheel you around in his chair all night?"

Again she did not answer.

"I hope I am not harassing you, but the evening proved very difficult after you left with everybody questioning me about your disappearance, and my curiosity—I think, quite legitimate." His smile was ironic. "I could hardly explain you had run off with a man in a wheel chair."

She turned away from the mirror and he could see the amusement in her eyes.

"He doesn't use a wheel chair any more, my love," she said.

It was Mr. Pancieras's turn to be silent as he considered Jean's words. He had not escaped this and it promised complications which he did not like to think about.

"I see. A miracle. He walks now." He watched her even more carefully. "Will we be having him around very much, do you suppose?"

"Very much, I'm sure."

It was a moment before he spoke again. "It could prove very awkward, couldn't it?"

She smiled coolly. "I wouldn't be having the very happy standing around watching you take the bows for his creations."

"His being around could prove very awkward for me—is that your point?"

"That's about it, sir." She, still smiling, settled in the gold mannequin on the table by the fireplace. "I'm afraid he wouldn't care to have you decorate your apartment with his trophies."

He picked up the mannequin held it up shining in the light. "It is a lovely thing. It seems a pity to waste it on such a primitive person."

She laughed softly. "I was under the impression it belonged to him."

Last Contingents Canadian Brigade Pull Out for Korea

'Rocky' Sees Troops Off From Seattle Docks

By DAVE McINTOSH
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Seattle, April 21 "(CP)— The last two contingents of Canada's United Nations brigade have sailed for Korea.

One of the contingents, at least, sailed in style.

After inspecting the 30,000-ton transport, Brig. John Rockingham, commander of Canada's force, said: "After seeing this ship maybe I should go by sea."

He will fly to Korea early next week from Tokyo in order to oversee unloading of equipment and to map out the brigade's movements toward the front line.

The first contingent sailed Wednesday — five days ago in one ship. Two other ships now have left with remainder of the 6,000-man force. The army consored mention of the sailing dates and ship names.

The last two ships loaded simultaneously with one leaving Thursday and the second a day after the other.

One of the two ships was built to carry dependents of American soldiers. Not only officers but the troops in the sergeants' and many corporals got spacious staterooms for four men to a cabin—with lockers and a bathroom. Not bunks, either, but regular beds.

The men had lots of room on the troop-deck, where the bunks rose in three tiers instead of the usual four.

Plush Surroundings

There were soft-drink machines scattered about the ship, a post exchange, an elevator in the main rotunda; stewards to wait on officers and senior NCO's at tables, a big, bright cafeteria for troops and promenade and sun decks for all ranks.

The ship is air-conditioned throughout.

The other transport, less crowded than the first ship to sail recently, was originally a mother ship for landing craft. She was first used in the American invasion of Italy in the Second World War.

Brig. Rockingham, who looked into every nook and cranny of the ships on his inspection tour, stopped at one point and said to some officers working in the galley: "things are looking up on this ship."

The men grinned at him.

Still Painting Ship

Civilian workers were still dabbing paint on the ship at the Canadians started to come aboard. They were to be thrown at their camp at nearby Fort Lewis and began moving them to the pier at first light.

As at the previous sailing, Brig. Rockingham shook hands at the foot of the gangplank, passing the odd remark to his men as they streamed by.

Then he would nip over two piers to the next ship and help with loading to offer a cheerful word or two to the men there.

LOST PART OF ONE ENGINE

Frederick, Md., April 21—(AP)—An air force jet fighter lost part of one engine and its tail cone over the city's outskirts yesterday. The falling parts caused no damage, although a part of a jet turbine dropped within 200 feet of a brick apartment house. The plane made it back safely to its base.

How to Address Mail to Canadian Troops in East

Ottawa, April 21 (CP) — The army Friday issued instructions on how to address mail to Canadian troops in the Far East.

Once the Patricias rejoin the brigade, a new address will be issued for them.

Here are the four addresses:

DEMAND FOR GOVT ACTION FEATURES BUDGET DEBATE

Members are Allowed To Raise any Topic

Ottawa, April 21 (CP) —The feature of a week long debate on Finance Minister Abbott's 1951-52 budget has been demands for government action in a wide variety of fields.

Many of the speakers have not even referred to the budget in the debate, adjourned late night until Monday, they simply preferred to the grievances of their own constituencies.

Sufficient latitude is granted in the debate for members to raise almost any topic.

Still to be dealt with are Progressive Conservative and CCF motions calling for votes of non-confidence in the government because of the contents of the budget.

They predict the Progressive Conservatives have called for repeal of the resolution increasing the general sales tax to 10 from eight per cent. They also have urged that the 20 percent surtax on personal incomes be applied only to incomes in excess of $10,000 were indicative of the trend of the debate. They ranged from repeal of the advanced corporation tax half inflation to formation of a commission to study government spending. They touched on defence contracts for the Maritimes, an economic survey of eastern and western Canada and improvement of telegraph communications in Newfoundland.

No Foundation

At the House opening, postmaster-general Ribfret said there is "absolutely no foundation" for a report that ordinary postal letter rates are to be increased to 4c instead from four.

Finance Minister Abbott said Canadians serving in Korea will be a liable for income tax as are of their countrymen.

Prime Minister parliamentary assistant to external affairs minister Pearson, said there are 370 Canadians in Korea, of whom 230 are missionaries.

Transport minister Gardiner said he expects to announce the new floor price for butter next Friday.

Manslaughter Charged After Woman Killed

Toronto, April 21 — (CP) — Floyd Roberts of suburban Richmond Hill was charged with manslaughter and drunken driving as a result of a head-on collision in which Mrs. Ethel Best was killed yesterday in which a girl was critically.

Helen Ruby Hillier, 22, formerly of St. John's, Nfld., died in Toronto, Mrs. Earl Griffin of Newmarket, 35 miles north of here, with her son and daughter was injured. Roberts, in another car, suffered a broken leg.

Crown Attorney Armstrong of Newmarket said Roberts, now in hospital, probably will not be charged with murder. He is to be arraigned at Newmarket.

Snuff-Sniffers in Britain Increase In Wake of Rising Tobacco Costs

London, April 21 — (Reuters) —The high cost of smoking is drying more and more Britons to snuff.

The result is that an ounce of snuff will last even a confirmed addict a week and costs five to six shillings (72 to 90 cents). Smoking may cost four times as much with cigarets at three shillings, sixpence (52 cents) for 20 and pipe tobacco at three shillings, 10 pence an ounce.

At one time the regular snuffers were found in professions where it is difficult to smoke — the stage, music, law, some offices and factories.

But now the word is going around that snuff sales are booming.

Snuff today is different from the mixtures used by the Beau Brummels and dandies of a generation ago — the 18th century.

Those days some of the blends got their headiness from admixtures of such improbables as port wine, stewed plums and even cheese.

Now snuff is just powdered tobacco with only such things as essential oils, attar of rose, lavender and the like allowed as bonafide scents.

Only one type of snuff remains that allows the addict to make a meal of his habit — the "snooze" sucked between the lower lip and the teeth — a form of snuffing almost unknown here.

Football Special Wrecked, Two Men Killed, 70 Injured, Scots' Tartans Strew Tracks

Glasgow, April 21 (CP) —Two trains carrying soccer fans to the biggest game of the Scottish season crashed near a suburban station today, killing two men and injuring 70. Twenty-five of the injured were sent to hospital.

The trains were taking 1,000 fans to Hampden Park Stadium for the Scottish soccer cup final.

One train plowed into the rear of the other, standing near Pollok Shields Station. Some of the passengers were trapped but switchworking rescue crews had the wreckage cleared within 30 minutes.

Every ambulance in Glasgow — a city of over 1,000,000 population—was rushed to crash.

There was chaos in the city when ambulance bells and clanging fought their way through crowded streets; and relays of stretcher bearers fought their way along the rail track to the wrecked trains.

Nearby houses, houseviews whose homes were shaken by the force of the collision, volunteered down, a 30 foot embankment to the track with help for the injured.

Many of the football fans on the train suffered only a severe shaking and clambered up the embankment to continue their trek to the match.

The injured were taken by a shuttle service of ambulances to hospital. Most suffered cuts and bruises but none were seriously injured as believed earlier.

One passenger said:

Tremendous Crash

"There was a tremendous crash. All along the line I could hear women and children screaming and men shouting from under a telescoped carriage."

The rear carriage of the leading train, which was standing still at the time, telescoped under the following coach and rolled over on another stationary train — a third involved in the accident — which stood on the opposite track.

At least 50 of the injured people were detained in hospital.

Bloodstained tartan scarves and Tam O'Shanters —favorite dress of Scottish football fans—littered the track or hung limply from wrecked carriages.

Trenton Woman, Baby in Arms Fights Way to Safety in House Fire

Trenton — (Special) — Clutching her one-and-a-half-year old baby Michael in her arms, Mrs. David Young last night fought her way through heat and smoke to the safety of the street as fire threatened to trap her in the upper part of her house.

Mrs. Young, alone with the baby in an upstairs room of the frame house as her husband worked his night shift at the Trenton Cotton Mills, was awakened around 9 p. m. as smoke began filtering into the bedroom only in night attire, she gathered up her baby and fled. The fire at that time was threatening to break from the cellarway of the dwelling into the body of the house.

When firemen arrived, the flames were eating into the hallway around the stairs. They fought the blaze for one and a half hours with three lines of hose before subduing it. Traffic along Lorne Avenue was blocked for more than an hour as citizens flocked to the site of the blaze.

$2,000 Damage

Damage to the house and contents was estimated by firemen at $2,000. Mrs. Young's relatives at the home of a neighbor after her escape was described shocked and hysterical. The child is the only one in the family. Neighbors have moved here recently from Hamilton.

Firemen said the blaze was caused by an overheated furnace.

In another call yesterday afternoon, Trenton firemen had more trouble with school children than they had with the fire itself. The blaze, started by an overheated space heater at the home of Arthur Hitchens, 228 Dufferin Avenue, occurred shortly after 4 p. m. and hundreds of children streamed to the scene. They climbed over the verandah, and in general made nuisances of themselves.

First Reports Petain Dead Denied by Prison Officials

Paris, April 21—(Reuters)— Semi-official reports today that Marshal Philippe Petain had died were denied by officials at Ile D'Yeu where he is imprisoned.

Laroche, France, April 21. (Reuters)—Former Marshal Philippe Petain died today, sources close to the local prosecutor's office said.

(The Associated Press in New York reported in a note to editors that its Paris Bureau advised that Petain's condition on Ile D'Yeu said Petain was still alive at 10:30 a.m. EST.)

(The AP report was made almost one-half hour after Reuters quoted sources at Laroche as reporting Petain dead.)

The 94-year-old First World War hero had been imprisoned on the tiny Ile D'Yeu off the French Atlantic coast since his conviction on treason charges for collaboration with France in the Second World War.

Quarters close to the local prosecutor's office in Laroche here said Petain died about mid-afternoon in his fortress, where he has been confined since 1945.

The Laroche prefecture, which supervises the fortress, would be the first official department to hear of Petain's death.

All journalists were banned from approaching the fortress earlier today when it was reported Petain was "passing away ever so slowly".

Petain became the idol of France and the inspiration of her armies, spent his last years in prison in national disgrace, branded a traitor.

His command "they shall not pass", which inspired the French in the Battle of Verdun in 1916, brought glory to his name.

Twenty-four years later—Aug. 15, 1945—he was sentenced to death and loss of civil rights for high treason during his control of the Vichy regime which sought a honourable peace" with the Germans.

Exiled For Life

The jury recommended mercy because of his age and four months later the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in fortress exile on Ile D'Yeu.

He was given three rooms in the island's fortress, guarded by 90 soldiers. For the most part each day his 74-year-old wife was allowed to visit him. They lived in a stone house and played piquet.

His condition aroused sympathy among friends and former foes and during the last two years requests for clemency were made to President Vincent Auriol for his release.

His health deteriorated and his mental faculties were said to have been affected by old age.

For weeks before his death Petain had been reported lying on his sickbed in his fortress. Double pneumonia wracked him, his lungs were torn, his heart showed a serious heart attack last night.

3,000 HOMELESS AS MISSISSIPPI GOES ON RAMPAGE

State of Emergency In Some Communities

Chicago, April 21 — (AP) — The mighty Mississippi, on a spring rampage in its upper valley, today threatened serious floods to river towns in three midwest states.

"Old Man River," fed by rains and benighted out over midwest lowlands and forced nearly 3,000 persons to flee their homes.

Hundreds more were threatened with evacuation during the weekend or early next week.

A state of emergency was declared in some Iowa communities as the big stream's crest inched its way toward levels.

There was feverish activity along the river southward from Wisconsin into Iowa and Illinois. Levees were being strengthened; sandbag barriers building around dikes.

The Red Cross, national guard and civil defence agencies joined in caring for flood victims and preparing to combat what may be the highest flood waters in years.

Two national guard units were sent to Muscatine, Ia., after state of emergency was declared for the area. 2,000 Muscatine residents in suburban South Muscatine were urged to evacuate.

About 300 families were evacuated from the Dubuque, Ia., area as the Mississippi reached a record level of 22 feet. The previous high was 21 feet in 1880. Railroad yards were under water and rail was feared all trains would be halted before the expected crest of 23.5 feet was reached.

Almost 600 persons were forced out in Prairie Du Chien, Wis., where one-third of the city of 5,000 is under water. The river was expected to crest today at 21.4 feet, 3.4 feet above flood stage.

Angry Scotsmen Demand Return Stone of Scone

Dundee, Scotland, April 21—CP —A packed meeting of angry Scotsmen last night demanded the return to Scotland of the Stone of Scone "with due formality and proper ceremony."

And one of the youthful patriots who stole it from Westminster Abbey on Christmas Day reported that one-quarter of the 458-pound sandstone slab was broken off during the theft.

Kay Matheson, 22-year-old Dundee typist who with three companions engineered the coup, said the stone broke as it was being removed from the Coronation chair. It rests beneath the chair and is used in the traditional coronation ceremonies.

Miss Matheson said it was taken to Scotland in two pieces, one piece in a different car.

The Dundee meeting passed a resolution demanding the stone's return. Scottish nationalists maintain that the English originally stole it from them.

A. Donaldson, a leader of the nationalist party, said in a recent return to Westminster Abbey is a deliberate insult to Scotland. The youth to hijack it again.

MacArthur Said So Confident in Korea He Offered Best Troops for Europe

New York, April 21 — (AP)— The New York Times said today that President Truman has confirmed that Gen. MacArthur, when he met President Truman last fall on Wake Island, was so confident of victory in Korea that he offered his best troops for Europe.

The Times, in a Washington dated story by Anthony Leviero, said it got the information from "documented sources" on the meeting of MacArthur and Truman on the mid-Pacific atoll Oct. 15.

A partial summary of the Times' story follows:

MacArthur offered to send to Korea what he regarded as his best troops, the U. S. 2nd Division, because he believed it would have a good effect in Europe.

MacArthur told the president that "time is on the side of Chinese or Russian intervention in Korea.

MacArthur apologized to Truman for embarrassing him on the Formosa issue.

Last August, the general sent a message to the Veterans of Foreign Wars suggesting American occupation of Formosa, last stronghold of the Chinese Nationalists led by Chiang Kai - Shek. Truman ordered the message to Thur to withdraw his message to the V. F. S.

The 90-minute hour-long meeting on Wake Island the president and the general cordially talk away their differences.

The president opposed the occupation of Formosa, on the ground the people of Asia that the U. S. had no imperialistic designs there.

The Times went on to say:

"After the crisis of what he (MacArthur) called an 'entirely new war' on Nov. 29 as a result of the (Chinese red) intervention, the U. S. commander pressed for a more - aggressive policy in the Far East and became increasingly outspoken against the president. The harmony turned into distrust, climaxed by the White House and the Pentagon."

Probable Death Toll in Tanker Collision is 38

Survivors Relate Stories Of Horrible, Flaming Death

New Orleans, April 21. (AP)— Thirty-eight seamen today were missing—presumably dead—after the collision of two oil tankers in the Gulf of Mexico about 300 miles southwest of here.

The collision, explosion and fire yesterday wiped out most of the crew of 42 aboard the Esso Greensboro, a 10,000-ton tanker loaded with 140,000 barrels of oil. Survivors related stories of horrible, flaming death aboard the blazing inferno.

The 26,500-ton super-tanker, Esso Baton Rouge, struck the Greensboro late last night. The coast guard reported they put out the flames and took the ship in town.

The coast guard received the first S.O.S. from the Suez at 3:29 a.m., E.S.T., and the last message read "Struck tanker and apparently all hands are lost."

The Esso Burlington, another ship at the scene, picked up three charred bodies. Additional bodies were seen in the water, but darkness prevented further recoveries. Planes joined in a search of the area early today.

Name Omission Lends Credence To Reports

Hong Kong, April 21 (AP) — The continued omission of Mao Tse-tung's name from Chinese communist propaganda announcements lends credence to an indirect report that the communist leader may be ill or shunted aside.

The report was only a scrap of news — an inconspicuous item in the Hong Kong press April 10 — quoted an anonymous Indonesian diplomatic officer as saying Mao is sick and has turned over leadership of China to Liu Shao Chi.

Is it true? There seems no reason to doubt it. There are many indications something may have happened to the 58-year-old portrayed boss who has not appeared at party or government functions since December 26th.

He did not even show up at the vital meeting of the all-powerful central people's government council when an extraordinary policy change was under the guise of liquidating the government's enemies — real or suspected — instead of "re-educating" them.

The Chinese nationalists reported without confirmation more than a year ago that Mao was seriously ill with tuberculosis.

If Mao has been shelved, it could explain the blood purge, the reports of frantic war preparations in red China, the beginning of rationing and the apparently hectic commandeering of equipment, doctors and medicines for Chinese in Korea.

Major J.W. Foote, V.C. Tells Of Need for Church, Agency Work at C.A.S. Meeting

Major J.W. Foote, V.C., Minister of Reform Institutions, told more than 300 guests of the Children's Aid Society at the society's annual dinner meeting Friday night that much of the juvenile trouble in Canada today stems from the fact that "the young people have never been happy." He went on to emphasize the need for church and agency work and showed the end product of a system which does not take enough notice of the fact by outlining the work being done in Ontario's institutions for reform.

Elections of the Society, under nominating committee of W. J. Morrison, Mrs. D. I. Fleming and Mrs. W. A. Watson, saw J. E. Hyde elected as president at the Ontario School for the Deaf elected president, and C. L. Hyde re-elected for the past four years, retired under pressure of activities and health, and was warmly congratulated by C. A. S. officials last night for his work.

Broken Homes Blamed

Major Foote said that many children in the 300 boys are finding "unhappiness inherited through a broken home. There would be no problem at all if the parents had learned to keep happiness in the home and had given their children a more normal life."

Many of the boys in Ontario trade schools at present time there because they were not encouraged to be themselves to any trade, when they were young. As a result, they drifted into a bad way and ended up in institutions. There, they are now being given nothing to fit them for a useful life.

"Boys who wound up wrong are now showing a progress in general community life," he said.

"Eighty-one percent of them, over a four-year period of time, are successfully rehabilitated."

Nothing Forced on Them

"Most of the boys do not have a great deal of difficulty," he continued. "Nothing is forced on them." Major Foote paid tribute to the men, who were teaching in institutions of reform institutions, and said that their knowledge of farm work and their liking for boys, were paying dividends.

"I have a feeling that much of our trouble that sends boys to training schools is a lack of proper training when they were young," Major Foote said. "They have guidance, love, affection and understanding at home. I have found that some have had too much rough discipline at home. They will accept affection and interest."

Cost Paid Back

Cost of maintaining a pupil in one of Ontario's reform institutions for one year approximates $1,200. If a boy stays for two years, the cost is $2,400, which is considered high in many quarters. "But they become successful citizens and tax-payers," Major Foote said. "They establish homes, give their productive capacity to the province, and in their lifetime, they pay it all back in taxes."

"Yet, some say, why waste the money of the province on these boys? They say it is cheaper to do it right, and that is why." He said that was much preferred to doing a cheap job, where the only contact was to feed the inmates cheaply and keep them there until their time was up. Under that system, the boys come back and back, and never learn how to pay their debt to society.

Operates on Profit

The institution at Guelph costs $2,700,000 each year to keep going. But it has revenues of $1,700,000 from its products, and operates on a very small margin of profit, Major Foote claimed that if it operated on a 20 per cent. profit margin, it would pay for itself. "But it is not run as competition for private enterprise," he said. "Rather, it is run to give the boys some training."

Officials of the department are not attempting to make a commercial proposition out of the trade schools of today. "We're concerned with human values," Major Foote said.

The speaker was introduced by Elmer Sandercock, M. L. A., for Hastings West, and thanked by Frank Follwell, M. P. for South Hastings. A civic welcome was extended Major Foote by Alderman McLean Haig, who represented Mayor R. J. Wills, and by the society president, C. L. Hyde, was chairman, and introduced the guests at the head table.

Entertainment was provided by a quartet of Garry Smith, trumpet, Davey Branscombe, cornet, Jack Cooker, trombone, and Paul Baldwin, bass, and Walter Bent led a sing-song. A reception followed the dinner.

But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.

THE TWIN CITIES
(Article 16)

St. Gallen, Switzerland — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — Kipling once said, "East is east and west is west, but never the twain shall meet." He was speaking about India, but he might just as well have been speaking about the twin cities of Konstenz and Kreuzlingen which lie astride the German-Swiss border. Although the greater part of the city of Konstanz lies on ground that logically should belong to Switzerland, it has always been a part of Germany and will probably always remain so. Down through the ages, Konstanz was the location of the main cathedral of the district and became the centre for all German Catholics of the area.

One can imagine how complicated the situation would be in peacetime, but in wartime things would most certainly become worse. People in such cities have a tendency to become extremely nationalistic, and this is no exception. As a result any attempt to amalgamate the two cities would probably result in failure.

Matters would certainly be much simpler if the amalgamation were carried out, for at present duplication is present everywhere. There are two mayors, two councils, two harbors, two railway stations and to see everything else one could think of. There are even two language. The people of Kreuzlingen speak their Turgauer dialect which I cannot understand, and the Germans speak the dialect of Baden, which I can, all of which makes it very easy to tell the two people apart.

Money Problem

Money is also quite a problem here as people going continually over the border would have to carry both marks and francs with them. Actually, Swiss money is in a favorable position, since some of the German store keepers are willing to accept it at the value of one franc per one mark, which is not as good a rate as can be had at the bank, but which is good enough to be accepted. It saves much trouble and that is the main thing. On the other side of the border I was unable to find a Swiss who would accept German money, although there may be some [illegible] because of the [illegible] what little German exists. I had in Konstanz, and in doing so obtained first hand information as to what feeling there actually exists. I asked what I was permitted to take across the border. They knew from my accent that I was not Swiss, but as soon as they found out I was living in Switzerland they seemed very willing, in fact anxious to express their feelings. These can be summed up as a mixture of pelity and envy.

After I told one salog girl that butter cost twice as much in Switzerland as it did in Germany, she exclaimed in no uncertain terms, "Those Swiss can afford to pay high prices for their food. Their wages are so high over there that they haven't anything to worry about. Here we have lost all our money. They didn't suffer from a war as we did." That I did not doubt in the least. Before I left she hastened to add that even though German butter was cheaper, it was not as good as Swiss butter which later proved to be true.

Much Traffic

At present there are many people who live on one side of the border and work on the other, so there is much coming and going through the barrier. A special pass is issued to such people which saves them much trouble when crossing. During the war this privilege was drastically reduced, so that only a very few were able to cross. For anyone else it was impossible. They say that the people of Kreuzlingen lived in great fear during this time would be putting it mildly. They were able to look across the Konstanz and watch the Allied bombers pound the port of Friedrichshafen to pieces. Fortunately there was nothing of great military importance in Konstanz so that it remained undamaged.

The war has left its mark to a certain extent on Konstanz, for in comparison with their Swiss playmates, the German children look rather undernourished. Their clothes are clean and mended but quite old and a bit too small. The contrast is made all the greater, for children play on both sides of the barrier, and one can stand there and see the differences at one glance. At present the people accept the border for what it is: a drawback which will probably never be erased. Relations are very formal and polite, but no more. At any rate, a person taking a dog for a walk is advised to take his papers along. The dog can go across free.

Mrs. M. Ward and Mrs. H. Tulloch gave the highlights on current events.

After the meeting was brought to a close delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and the committee, a social half-hour was spent.

Mrs. Kirkey moved a vote of thanks to all who helped in any way to make the meeting a success.

Club Activities

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary Canadian Legion Branch 99 was held last Tuesday evening in the Saco Club rooms. The meeting was opened in the usual manner with Comrade Turner in the chair. The Chartter was then draped in memory of the late Comrade Mrs. Sapp. Chaplain Comrade Gulliver performed the ceremony.

Various topics were discussed. It was decided to send a delegate to the annual meeting which will take place some time in June. Comrade Jeffs was chosen along with Comrades Bradford and Turner. It was also decided to continue the poppy boxes for Britain and to send cigarets to the Belleville boys in Korea.

Comrade Jeffs was chosen as chairman of overseas boxes with Comrade Gee as her helper.

Four names were drawn from the roll call for boxes, Comrades Smith, Jeffs, Turner and Tracey.

Comrade Mary Bailey was chosen as chairman for the Sick committee.

A fish supper will be held in Carrying Place on Friday night, at which the Belleville Branch will be in attendance.

Various committees gave their reports: Comrade Meek for bingo, and Comrade Jeffs for the sick.

A raffle was won by Comrade Styles.

Anyone having or knowing any Belleville boys in Korea, will please phone Mrs. C. Jeffs, Phone 2543J, so that the Auxiliary may send them cigarets.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

"Rock Of Ages"

Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee!
Let the water and the blood,
From Thy riven side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Cleanse me from its guilt and power.

Not the labors of my hands
Can fulfil Thy law's demands;
Could my zeal no respite know,
Could my tears forever flow,
All for sin could not atone,
Thou must save, and Thou alone!

Nothing in my hand I bring;
Simply to Thy cross I cling;
Naked, come to Thee for dress;
Helpless, look to Thee for grace;
Foul, I to the fountain fly;
Wash me, Savior, or I die!

While I draw this fleeting breath—
When my eyelids close in death—
When I soar to worlds unknown—
See Thee on Thy judgment throne—
Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee!

Ask anyone to set down his favorite hymns and, in nine cases out of ten, "Rock of Ages" will head the list.

It has proved its popularity again and again. On one occasion, when more than 3,500 persons sent in lists of favorite hymns to an English magazine, all but 300 gave first place to "Rock of Ages."

The author of this much-loved hymn, Augustus Montague Toplady, was born at Farnham, England, in 1740. He was scarcely a year old when, his father, a major in the English army, was killed at Carthagena. Later, with his widowed mother, Augustus moved to Ireland and was educated at Trinity College, in Dublin.

When he was only 16 years old, he chanced one day to attend a simple evangelistic service in a barn near Codymain, Ireland. The evangelist was an unlettered preacher, but his message, based on the Bible passage in Ephisians 2:13, made such an impression on the young lad that Toplady was converted.

Commenting in later years on this spiritual experience, the author of "Rock of Ages" said: "Strange that I who had so long sat under the means of grace in England should be brought nigh unto God in an obscure part of Ireland, amidst a handful of people met together in a barn, and by the ministry of, one who could scarcely spell his own name. Surely, it was the Lord's doing and is marvellous."

Six years after he gave his heart to God in that barn prayer service, Augustus Toplady was ordained a minister in the Church of England. But, frail of body as he was, he was stricken with tuberculosis early in his preaching career and when he wrote his famous hymn, just two years before his death, he was wrestling with this disease.

"Rock of Ages" first appeared in the Gospel Magazine, of which Toplady was editor, in March, 1776. It came at the end of a rather remarkable religious article in which the author discussed the overwhelming weight of the sins committed by a man in an ordinary life-time, and the consequent value of Christ's atonement for sin.

For some years, Toplady had been engaged in a sharp theological dispute with the famous Wesley brothers, John and Charles, and it is generally agreed that he wrote "Rock of Ages" to bolster arguments made for John Wesley's benefit in the religious article to which the hymn was appended.

Today, no one remembers the controversy and Toplady's "Rock of Ages" and Charles Wesley's "Jesus, Lover Of My Soul" appear side by side in many church song books as the two hymns which, in the opinion of most clergymen, have been more effective than any others in winning men and women to Christ.

KEEP YOUR MONEY IN YOUR POCKET

n the light of the budget handed down by Douglas t ten days ago, the advice being given in some ers about inflation and the cost of living seems to good sense. The thing to do now, it is said, is to to stop buying anything but necessities.

he reaction of the ordinary family man to that, how- may be in the form of a question: How can we do any- else but buy only necessities? In the United States, als high in the price control machinery have stated they believe that the soaring trend will end within r three months, because consumers are refusing to their money on too many forms of luxury. What appen after the consumers realize that there is a ng off is anybody's guess. They may then start to gain, and the cycle will be started once more. Price ls in the United States have not proved to be too move, if results are any indication of their efficiency. evels in the price scale have been re-established, and nsus throughout the nation is that the enforcement s stabilization laws will never take full and rigid Canadians are being told by Ottawa that the s fault in price control at the present time is that ard to extend over a long period of time. Assuming utside forces continue to exert a pressure on Cana- conomy, it would be futile to apply those controls at esent time and hope that a system could be set up aintain them for the next decade. They point out he United States is finding already that they cannot ish a fixed level and stay with it, and they have only heir control system in working effect for the past few hs.

evertheless, something must be done. Opposition s in Ottawa are blaming the government for taking uch money from the people in form of taxes, and thus g the fiscal year with too great a surplus. There are iewpoints to consider. Government sources feel that elfare of the country will increase in proportion with mount of money being spent by its citizens. There- he money taken from the taxpayers will help deflate conomy. The other view is that the taxpayer should e subjected to increases in excise taxes that tend to e the economy.

erhaps the budget point that is being belabored most he increase in sales tax from eight per cent to ten per An increase of 25 per cent is indeed a stiff jump, and nnot do anything but make the load heavier on the umer.

ertainly Canada does not want to get so deeply in- d in price control that she cannot see over the rim of he only sensible solution seems to be for Canadians to their money in their pockets.

AIR RIFLES ARE DANGEROUS

Air rifles, always a dangerous weapon in the hands of g boys, are making an appearance in Montreal. Every as soon as youngsters can put on heavy shoes and p into the woods, they want an air rifle to take with In the country, the evidence that air rifle addicts been around is bad. In the city, it is worse.

Birds and small animals are shot indiscriminately in pring by youngsters not old enough to realize the er and power of their small rifles. Anyone who has ed through the woods in the spring of the year will y that the bodies of birds and squirrels are strewn t, after they have been hit and killed by boys who do now better.

In the city, the dangers are more plentiful and, in cases, more painful. Every spring sees a rash of ents as young boys and girls are struck by pellets from the air guns. Each year, the practice of selling ifles to the young people is deplored, but little is done t it.

The best solution to the problem, it would seem, would o license, register and sell the gun only to adults. A ndary move to that would be to impress upon parents a severe penalty would be imposed if they allowed children to use the guns indiscriminately. In addi- storekeepers who sell the guns to anyone, including hildren, should be penalized for it. It stands to reason if the younger boys and girls could not buy the pons of their own accord, there would be fewer dents.

Only when an intensified campaign is put on to rol the sale of the guns will there be a decrease in ies resulting from their use. Youth organizations in treal have banded together to ask for stricter enforce- t of laws concerning air rifles. A similar move in any in Ontario would be of advantage to all. It is far er to stop the source of the trouble than to be sorry rwards. Parents, in particular, must learn that little ny often does not have enough responsibility in his eup to tell him to be careful with the weapon. The er the parents do learn, the more protection will be rded their own children and others.

"It is the unexpected that happens," is an old saying and such proved to be the case in West Belleville yesterday. A citizen in that section of the city owns an ordinary barnyard rooster and his neighbor is the proud possessor of a game cock of high degree. Yesterday the two birds met, in some unexplained way, and to the surprise of the neighbor, the barnyard bird put the bird of high-pedigree out of business in one minute and three quarters. You may draw your own moral from this incident.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Any day now you will see in your backyard a strange bird, maybe gay, maybe quite drab; but strange. If nothing else attracts your interest in it, think for a minute where it came from. And how.

At 25 miles per hour, it may have just come from Brazil. Flying only at night, with nothing to guide it but blind instinct, and resting and feeding by day, last week in Kentucky, the week before in Texas, and the week before that in Panama, this casual visitor to your garden may have come straight to you from Peru.

The first nighthawk you hear tweeting in the evening sky—consider him. He is a slow, erratic traveller, feeding as he goes. But he happens to be one of the most contemptuous of all creatures of this solid round earth and the majesty of its distances. The nighthawks of Alaska migrate, circling and tweeting 7,000 miles to the Argentine for their winter. And now come all the way back. The one over your head has just done 6,000. He may nest on your roof.

Nineteen species of water birds nest north of the Arctic Circle. If you live near a lake, you will shortly be able to see some of them quietly resting along the beaches. They are worth a glance from you. Because you are seeing, possibly, one of the six of these nineteen species which travels from the Arctic to the Antarctic Circle twice each year, 8,000 miles south in autumn, 8,000 miles north in spring.

They think nothing of it. They weigh less than your hand. When they go south that 8,000 miles most of them are not four months old.

From this week until mid-May thousands upon thousands of birds will come pelting past you, over your head, in the night. Maybe 10,000 will pass within a couple of miles of you. From the wild goose and swan down to the mites no bigger than your thumb, the travellers are hustling home.

ZEAL TO DO EVIL

We all remember the chap who, some years ago, assassinated the prime minister of Austria and was executed as a murderer. He had perpetrated his dastardly deed to further the cause of Nazism. He ascended the scaffold with eagerness and joy; and as the black hood was pulled over his head he kept crying "Heil Hitler."

This sort of thing is a debased, inverted variety of religious zeal. Think how arduously some men serve the devil. They rejoice in their service. They appear to love to do evil.

We cannot get away from the fact that side by side with the kingdom of God on earth is the kingdom of Satan. And in this kingdom many human beings work with a zeal equal, and sometimes superior, to the zeal manifested by those who are devoted to the cause of true religion.

And people such as this murderer with his zealous devotion to evil, shame the efforts of people who are nothing more than nominal Christians. If everybody in the Christian Church had the zeal to advance the good cause of Christ which others manifest in advancing the evil cause of communism, we would be able to overcome communism without spending incalculable treasure in the building up of an army, navy and air force.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

IN THE ISLANDS

Ganges Harbor

Lord only knows how old the Princess Mary is. Older than I, I expect. There's paint on yellow paint and many a thick skin on it on her high single funnel. Her decks and railings have been worn grey by uncounted thousands of shoes and elbows. She's a regular old dame of a ship.

Still, she seemed as sprightly and gay as a millionaire's yacht the other morning when she picked up her skirts and headed for the Narrows, outward-bound on her, thrice-weekly meanderings through the emerald islands of the Georgia Gulf.

It was a gorgeous blue and silver day. The usual sea gulls, well subsidized by the C. P. R., was winging along behind, occasionally dropping into the foam to fight over a morsel from the chef's galley. The gulf opened its arms wide, a danvcing blue as it alone can be, and causing you to wonder why anyone in the world should live anywhere else but right here.

The Mary steams along at a sedate pace without a rattle in her strong old bones. Other, sleeker, ships will pass her effortlessly in the open gulf, spray slicing cleanly from their bows before she enters Active Pass, but the Mary, if this may be said of a ship, looks neither to port nor starboard and takes her own sweet time.

Indeed, when you enquire of her schedule you can almost see the shrugs of the man who answers the phone on the enquiry deck. "Depends on the freight she has to drop off,' he will say and this you will find to be very true.

Like the postman on his rounds, the Mary's progress is determined by what she has in her pack. Whatever that may be, she's no ship for a man in a mad rush. For them there is now the air taxi buzzing like hornets to and from even the tiniest settlements in that lovely perimeter of isles along the eastern shore of Vancouver Island.

But for my wife and me, with time on our hands, the Mary is transportation tailored to our measurements and this is the way to go to the islands.

The First Port

It was our first visit to the islands since before the war and our baptismal voyage aboard the Mary. At $3.75 return I can think of no better bargain in mild adventure.

The leisurely journey across the gulf itself, looking ahead to the long green contours of the island and back to the massive marshmellow sundae of Garibaldi, is beautiful in its own right. The real charm begins when the old girl slows for Active Pass, that deep and often tide-turbulent channel between Galiano and Mayne Islands.

The pass this day was a quiet and windless place of lazy whirlpools. The ducks waited until the Mary's nose was almost upon them taking off in a bottom-heavy hurry across the glass surface. A mile overhead two sleeping eagles wheeled and planed in regal flight. We leaned on the railing beside the pilot house admiring the pleasant cottages that stand in evergreens along the shore, facing each other across the sun-warm channel.

Galiano is the first stop. Here you see the first of a series of dock-side vignettes.

The Mary has given a blast on her surprisingly virile whistle, a sound which ricochets in shrill echoes from the dark green hills and the bluffs around. As you coast in for the landing you see the islanders strolling down for the ritual of Meeting the Boat, sauntering down in twos and threes or driving their dusty cars out onto the rumbling planks of the wharf.

Now all of the passengers, even the old tweedy gentleman who has spent his time in a dark corner reading "Ivanhoe," are lining the rails and matching interested stares with the residents.

A great many of those on the dock here and at the other tiny ports of call are elderly people. The islands are a magnet for hundreds of retired oldsters, many of them from the Old Country, and probably nowhere in the world do you see so many ruddy, relaxed, healthy-looking ancients.

Looking down from the deck I can't help but think of some of the old age pensioners I know who live in dark places in the city. So many of them might be here in the sun in their last years if we had a pension plan that wasn't a bitter joke.

With Supplies

Now the Mary whistles again, backs out and crosses the pass to Mayne Island, backs out again and steams serenely through the timbered slopes of the channel and swings south again for Port Washington, on North Pender Island.

At each stop she disgorges an astonishing amount of cargo. Her hold seems bottomless and from it, swung out on cradles by a winch man with a flair for the dramatic, emerges bags of mail (at Port Washington this is transported to the post office by wheelbarrow) furniture, groceries, chicken feed, power plants, cases of beer, cardboard boxes filled with cheeping chicks, all manner of provisions for those who live on the tight little islands.

For all the Mary's casual pace, there's a hustle and a bustle at the piers themselves and the mate's whistle is brisk and busy, the lines are cast off while the gang plank is still being lifted, another little bit of heaven falls astern and we see the islanders going back up the pier to their charming homes.

It is mid-afternoon, some six hours out of Vancouver harbor, when we round the last bend into the long, slumbering bay of Ganges Harbor. Faint blue smoke drifts from the little settlement which is Big Town for Salt Spring Island. Now most of the passengers are getting their bags ready, small secret smiles on their faces, the look of people coming home.

This is to be our own destination for the next 24 hours, and as the Mary comes in for a gentle bump against the piles we, too, have a feeling of coming home.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WANTED: A FRIEND

I have been reading Want Ads for years. I have noted requests for almost everything under the sun—even for a wife or husband, or someone to write to because of loneliness but have never come across an advertisement for a friend!

Maybe this is just because it is expected of us that we should hunt for a friend, thus doubly being rewarded when we find such a rare possession. None of us has too many friends. There is always room for another one. One is even lucky to have but one genuine, dependable and understanding friend.

The scholarly orator, Wendell Phillips, once met Nora Perry, the poetess, upon the street in Boston and asked where she was going. She said: "To meet a friend." Said Phillips: "Oh, take me with you. I want to meet one!" To what ends any one of us would go in order to meet or know a friend!

Imagine what a sensation it would make to put an advertisement in a newspaper for a friend. You might just head it "Wanted: A Friend." Then you could tell briefly what kind of a friend you would like to have. Perhaps just one to talk to, or to write to, or to be with for a while now and then to ward off loneliness and fear.

Once you are lucky enough to have a friend for a long time, to lose that friend becomes one of the serious tragedies of life. Charles Lamb had a friend like this to whom he paid every tribute possible for one man to pay another. When he was gone, Lamb was left lonely and distracted. Said he: "There is now no one left to call me Charlie!" We all die a little when a friend leaves this world.

Should any one of us actually advertise for a friend, it would be interesting to read the replies. Most of the ones who would answer such an ad would probably be people who wanted a friend themselves. It might be something like advertising for a million dollars. No one would pay any attention to such an ad. But to advertise for a friend would put a person on his mettle. He would not want to answer such an ad without feeling that he had something to give.

Wanted: A Friend. That's what we all want!

Personal Health Talks

Signed Letters, Not More Than One Page, or 100 Words long, Pertaining to Personal Health and Hygiene, Not to Disease, Diagnosis or Treatment, Will be Answered by Dr. Brady if a Stamped, Self-Addressed Envelope is Enclosed, Etc.

ROGER FROM TWO READERS

Any time you need a witness to uphold your teachings you may cite Mrs. Jardine's little boy Henry, writes Henry Jardine—or so we may call him here.

"I have been warned ever since I began reading your articles and that goes back to the first Punic—the first World War when you wrote for the Brooklyn Daily Eagle . . . ."

Ah, great days . . . the days of Harrison Crist, Hans Von Kaltenborn, Gunnison the publisher who kept his paper clean even in the advertising department . . . not many like the fine old Eagle left . . .

". . warned . . that I would catch my death o' cold, get pneumonia or suffer other dire consequences some day because I never wore a coat except for business or social usages. Oh, yes, I was headed for the rheumatism . . . Actually I have never had even a sign of a sniffle. I believed I have escaped because I am always careful about that five-foot conversational spray range of the person who has the C-R-I . . ."

This is so sudden. Henry goes on to talk of other things but nowhere in this two-page letter does he enter an exception to my teaching or tell me where I am in error. He seems quite satisfied to go along with me just as I am. He closes with a significant remark about the educated stinkers (my term, not Henry's) who insist on peddling whatever they come down with among friends, pupils, customers, fellow passengers, ticket buyers, bank depositors, stenographers, schoolmates, companions, patients, people seated within spray range of the mat movies, concert or opera, as long as they are not forced to give up and go to bed. Henry states it mildly enough. "They should have stood in bed from the very onset."

If any physician of standing or any health authority or public health officer can or will offer a rebuttal to Henry's (and my) statement, I promise to print it here if it is not too long and to keep the writer's identity confidential unless he or she expressly consents to the use of his or her name here.

I had hardly recovered from the astonishment of Henry's letter when up came one from Mrs. Monday's little girl Mary, 2000 miles away, who says:

". . . finally get around to telling you how much your articles have been helping me for years, in fact since my children were babies . . .

I never worried about exposing them to colo, and my daughters think any one who makes a fuss about wet feet and the like was born twenty years too soon. Not my son. He was O.K. until he spent four years in college, and now he is afraid to get out in cold or damp weather without a hat! 'Nuf sed."

College? That's a place where the ignorance of physiology and hygiene acquired in high school is rounded off and polished. But I suspect this youth is just trying to cover his sensitiveness about his bald spot. If so, I can assure him that the sensitiveness will diminish as the denudation increases, until eventually he can go hatless without a qualm.

Residents Madoc Township Farming District Gather For Official Opening of Factory

A gleam of justifiable pride shone on the faces of Eldorado district residents Friday evening. It was the pride of accomplishment in a job well done and in the knowledge that their new $60,000 cheese factory was completed and ready for operation.

Friday night well over 500 residents of the Madoc township farming district, together with farmers from other parts of the county, and dairy officials representing both Federal and Provincial governments, jammed their way into the new factory for its official opening.

They heard a rather lengthy program of speech-making expressing congratulations on their foresight and faith in the future of the cheese industry, which had been necessary to construct such a fine building, and at the same time heard some mixed prophecies as to the financial returns farmers might or should — expect during the coming Summer.

Former Warden Chairman

James L. Nickle, former warden of the county and president of the Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-Operative, was in fine fettle tonight at ceremonies for the speech-making program. "We are very proud of our new factory and invite visitors to inspect the plant," he said.

Speakers included Mr. George S. White, M.P., for Hastings-Peterborough, who declared the new factory "one of the finest buildings of its type in Eastern Ontario." The co-operation of Eldorado district farmers was a good indication for the future of the cheese industry in the district, he said.

He said it was unfortunate that the dairy industry during the war years had been forced to accept the dregs of the milk pail market, and noted that cheese producers should present a solid front to meet their demands.'

Critical of Government

He criticized the Federal government for the lack of announcement for cheese policy for the coming season. "I don't know what will happen to cheese this year as there has been nothing decided," he said. "But I do know that a price of anything less than 32 cents f.o.b. factory, would show no profit for the producer.

"If cheese producers hope to get anywhere at Ottawa they will have to take a lesson from the wheat growers and present a solid front to back up their demands," he said.

The new cheese plant was officially opened by W. C. Cameron, executive director of co-operative service, Ottawa. He said the new plant was a credit to those who had the foresight to construct it, and was one of which the entire district could be well proud.

He noted the importance of the cheese industry as the balance wheel of the dairy industry and said that improvement of cheese quality at lower cost was one of the reasons why the Cheese Factory Improvement Act under which new amalgamated plants were entitled to a 50 per cent subsidy on construction and equipment.

Gradual Improvement

Also the government subsidy on premium cheese had been a gradual improvement in cheese quality. In 1939 less than half of the cheese was of premium quality, while in 1950 this had risen to 72 per cent in Canada.

He said there was a vast undeveloped market for fine Canadian cheddar in the United States and also in Canada.

Thereafter amalgamation factory patrons in the Eldorado area had placed themselves in better position to produce quality cheese and to meet competition.

Jack Lockner, Instructor for Central and Western Ontario referred to the new regulations with respect to sediment testing. The new regulations were necessary as a quality produce was essential. Full co-operation of the producers was asked.

Richt Step Taken

C. E. Lackner, director of dairying for Ontario, said amalgamation of factories in the Eldorado district was a step in the right direction.

He reviewed the dairy industry, noting that 50 years ago cheese was the large end of the lodge tent. Then butter took the lead and now the powdered and concentrated milk industry was increasing rapidly. "Amalgamated cheese plants offer the largest measure of the industry trend," he said.

Commenting on the thought of Eldorado cheese co-operative directors to develop a demand for their product by catering to the tourist trade, Mr. Lackner assured this was a splendid idea. "The idea is all to the good," he said "We simply must pay more attention to the domestic market.

Needed was a type of cheese demanded by the domestic market and more plain "bragging" about the fine qualities of Canadian cheese.

Warden Pay's Tribute

Warden Harry Coulter paid tribute to factory patrons and directors noting they now have something of which they can be proud and of which the entire community could be proud. He complimented directors in choosing Mr. Nickle as their president, assuring this position was in capable hands.

Brewer Robson, M.L.A. for Hastings East, said he was glad to see the Eldorado district represented factory in Hastings. Thirty years ago he had realized the advantages of amalgamation and this was the realization of a dream come true.

Patrons customarily fierce manner. Mr. Robson drew applause from his listeners when he declared that 45 cents per pound did not fat out of line as compared with the cost of other commodities.

Will Increase If Paid

If farmers get paid for their work they will produce", he declared, "and today farmers have the organization to demand a fair price for their products.

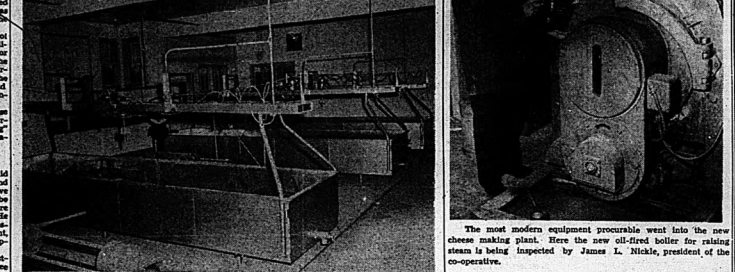
Dairying, he said, is not to be referred to recently increased prices for canned goods products.

He also emphasized the importance of catering to the domestic market but stressed that the type of cheese asked by this market should be manufactured.

"The Canadian domestic trade demands a softer cheese than cheddar, and farmers are pressalised by graders if they made this type of cheese," he said. He said Ottawa should revise its system of grading to allow a softer type of cheese to be made.

He said that a satisfied customer was the cheapest and best form of advertising and was the best advertising, which should be carried on by the Eldorado plant to develop a tourist market for their cheese.

Movies Shown



An interesting feature of the evening was the showing of the two colored movies showing construction progress of the plant. Shots of the four old factories — Cold Spring, Champion, Eldorado and Spring Creek — were included, the picture ending with the completed building. The movies were taken by Miss Alma Moorcroft.

Gibson Bailey, construction superintendent of the building of the plant, was honored by the factory directors who presented him with a framed lunch. Adopting as "all you want" policy, members served generous sandwiches, cheese and pickles cake and tarts with coffee and ice cream.

New Cheese Factory at Eldorado Opens May 1st

The new cheese factory at Eldorado built by the Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-Operative, which was officially opened Friday evening. The new plant will go into operation about May 1st.

Three ten thousand pound vats will give the new plant a daily capacity of about 30 ninety-pound cheese, with make room capacity for still another vat if necessary. The spic and span white painted make room is shown above. The vats have mechanical agitators for both milk and curd.

The most modern equipment procurable went into the new cheese making plant. Here the new oil-fired boiler for raising steam is being inspected by James L. Nickle, president of the co-operative.

One of Finest Cheese Factories In Province to be Opened In Eldorado in Near Future

Demonstrating full confidence and new equipment is about in the future of the cheese industry approximately 80 patrons of four factories in the Eldorado district in Madoc township, have amalgamated to form a co-operative and construct what is possibly one of the finest cheese factories in the province of Ontario.

The new Eldorado cheese factory has a floor area of over 6,000 square feet and has the best and most modern equipment that money will buy. It has an oil-fired boiler for the manufacture of steam; a milk clarifier, and many labor saving devices calculated to reduce labor to an absolute minimum.

Situated immediately to the south of Eldorado village and alongside the C.N.R. highway north from Madoc, the new plant is now completed and is ready for operation. The first cheese will be made about May 1st.

Amalgamation Answer

Roughly eighteen months ago farmer patrons of four old factories in the Eldorado district—Cold Spring, Eldorado, Champion, and Spring Creek — decided that something would have to be done as their present plants were too old for efficient operation. The answer seemed to be amalgamation and in October 1949, the first meeting of the Eldorado Cheese and Butter Co-operative was held at Madoc. President of the new co-operative is James L. Nickle, Warden of the county warden.

Directors include the four former presidents of the amalgamated factories. They are Allan Ketcheson, Cold Spring; Berzi Carman, Champion; Clayton Blackburn, Eldorado, and Derwood McCoy, Spring Creek. Other directors are Bert McCarey, Bruce Robinson, Stanley Moorcroft, and John Thompson who is secretary.

Draw Up By-laws

Edward Robinson, of Malone who, although not a director, has been of great assistance in drawing up by-laws and in the plans of the project.

The four factories which have now lost their identity in the merger have a history dating back well over half a century and in their heyday had patrons numbering about 110 Madoc township farmers. All four factories, with the exception of Eldorado, were operating last year.

Of cinder block construction covered with gleaming white stucco, the new cheese factory is situated atop a knoll, which greatly enhances its appearance. The building measures 72 by 84 feet and was built under the supervision of Gibson Bailey, Queensboro district builder. Cost of the new building was slated to be slightly under $30,000 with directors feeling that a distinct saving was effected by having the work done by day labor. $35,000 Total Cost

Total cost of the new factory will be around $35,000 with the co-operative to receive a 50 per cent capital grant from the Federal Government through the Cheese Factory Improvement Act. Jack Bale, chief dairy Instructor for Central and Western Ontario, and C. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying, have been in close touch with the project.

An oil-fired boiler at the plant will do away with the familiar slab pile outside cheese factories and at the same time materially reduce the cheese maker's labor. The make room, finished in gleaming white, has three vats with room for one additional vat. The curing room has sufficient capacity for an estimated make of 30 cheese per day. The space is both refrigerated and has facilities for steam heating during cold weather operation.

Can Make Small Cheese

Although it is expected the majority of the make will be of 90-lb cheese, hoops and presses for the manufacture of 10-lb cheese have also been provided.

It is in these ten-pound cheese which directors of the co-operative hope to build up a tourist demand for well cured cheddar. The factory plans include a special room which will be used as an office for the cheese maker, and as a showroom and reception centre, where it is hoped cheeses of various sizes can be kept on display as a tourist attraction.

Directors of the co-operative are also toying with the idea of manufacturing square cheddar cheese for Kraft, but as yet no definite action has been taken.

The equipment at the new factory is such that would make the cheese maker at an older plant envious. The latest in hoisting equipment is provided at the unloading platform. Milk routes will be operated, the longest of these being about nine miles. Directors feel that one of the advantages of amalgamation will be the reduction in the cost of milk drawing.

Clarifier Installed

A milk clarifier has been installed. The vats are equipped with the latest type mechanical agitators for both milk and curd. A cheese waxing tank has also been provided.

The flat-topped build-up tar and gravel roof is drained into a cistern beneath the factory, this soft water to be used in the boiler and also for washing. Corrosion in the boiler will be reduced by use of soft water. All pipes lead back to the boiler when condensed steam will be re-heated, this effecting a saving in fuel costs. Drinking water is supplied from a drilled well equipped with a pressure system. Whey Tanks Inside

Whey tanks are inside the factory and it is hoped that one of the more difficult problems of a cheese factory — that of sediment whey loading — has been eliminated.

To receive whey, trucks will drive onto a cement platform at the rear of the factory. The cement platform will drain into a cesspool from which lead weeping tile. All whey spillage can be washed into the cesspool. Milk cans may be cleaned at a special platform alongside.

The property of the new cheese co-operative has an extent of about nine acres and includes the former residence of Alfred Purcell, which was purchased as a cheese maker's residence. Driveways and parking areas along the factory have been covered with white crushed rock.

First cheese maker for the new factory will be Athol Dudgeon, maker at the Champion factory in last season. Mr. Dudgeon's father before him was a cheese maker for 40 years and he himself has been making for several seasons.

Only One Helper

With the advantage of modern equipment and labor saving devices installed at the factory he expects to hire but one helper with possibly another helper for the flush milk period.

"We are proud of our new factory," stated president James Nickle. "Nothing was slighted, either on fittings or materials or equipment."

When asked what he thought farmers should get for cheese this season he replied that he hoped the price would be at least 35c per pound.

A patron and shareholder in the plant added that unless the price was at least 35c he thought farmers would find some other outlet for their milk.

DEMAND FOR

First reading was given to a bill, presented by Sidney Smith (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), which would allow the government to disclose some of the information contained in the tax returns of corporations.

In the debate, John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) urged the government to rid Canada of a "galloping" inflation which threatened to drive the country's defence costs "to bankruptcy heights".

"We can't fight Stalin with a 58-cent dollar," he said. At the same time he suggested the government fight communism by extending aid to under-privileged Asiatic countries.

He asked that an appeal be made to the United States government to return Canadian accounts needed for the movement of wheat.

Want Erosion Halted

P. E. Gagnon (Ind.—Chicoutimi) suggested the government should pay more attention to providing relief for Canadian citizens. He said the Liberal government in 1935 has shown a readiness to spend billions on defence, but a reluctance to help the aged and ill-supplied within Canada.

C. W. Carter (L — Burin-Burgeo) called for improvement of the telegraph and shipping facilities in Newfoundland.

W. Chester S. McLure (PC — Queens-Lunenburg) that Prince Edward Island be given its share of defence contracts. He asked the government to build a marine railway slip at Charlottetown to enable the city to undertake the repair of ships.

Harry Cavers (L — Lincoln) and F. E. Hamilton (PC — Hamilton Wentworth) urged the government to assume some of the responsibility for halting the erosion along the south shore of the Lake Ontario.

Heard New Protests

The Commons heard new protests against the handling of divorce bills by parliament.

Mr. Gagnon reiterated a view that parliament should refuse to handle divorce cases from Quebec and Newfoundland, the only provinces without divorce courts.

Rev. Dan McIver (L-Fort William), a United Church of Canada clergyman, said he was not in favor of divorce but the divorce bills before the chamber had been examined by a competent committee of the Senate. He did not think it would do any good for the Commons to block passage.

He felt it was the duty of the Church to "tell the thing that causes divorce, whatever that thing may be."

The discussion occurred when bills providing for the divorce of 10 persons were called for second reading—approval in principle. They were given the reading and referred to a committee at the conclusion of the debate.

Angus MacInnis (CCF — Vancouver East) suggested the whole discussion was out of order. The proper way of dealing with the question of whether certain couples should be granted divorces.

Speaker Ross Macdonald agreed and said that any discussion other than on the principle of the bills was out of order.

Mr. MacInnis said he does not believe in divorce, but if divorce simply for the purpose of being allowed. He does believe, however, that when two people cannot live together in harmony it is not a crime to sin, but decent for them to separate.

He could thing of nothing more indecent than for two people who could not get along to go on living together in the intimacy of married life.

Bells of Tragedy

The Coast Guard listed the four Greensboro survivors as: Arthur Wolf of St. Cloud, Fla.; Leroy F. Fay or Baltimore; John A. Pirro of Leominster, Mass., and John W. Hanlon of Melville, R.I.

Fay and Rohm were flown to Corpus Christi, both badly burned.

Fay, who was lying on his bunk when the crash came, told of the tragedy through swollen lips.

"I was sleeping soundly with men trying to get out. You should have heard all those guys screaming and hollering for help. Every body tried to run topside. Quick as they did, they were burned alive.

"I opened a hatch and flames blew back in my face. There was a big there got burned standing up.

Fay said he was barefoot and his feet "were all burned."

"I ran over the red-hot deck in my bare feet. Then I jumped over the side . . . I swam to a lifeboat.

"It was red hot. There were two burned-up guys in the bottom of it."

Seaman John Horton of Cambridge, Mass., was on the bridge of the Esso Suez when the two ships collided in the dense fog. He said he didn't see the Greensboro until it was about 50 feet away.

"It seemed like they were right on top of us. Then there was a hell of an explosion.

"The minute we hit, there was nothing but smoke and flame. I don't think those guys (on the Greensboro) had a chance. I saw one of the men from their engine room try to escape through the vents."

"The Suez caught fire just as soon as the boy oil from the Greensboro hit us. I don't know how it happened."

Three New Stars Are Discovered By New Telescope

Philadelphia, April 21—(AP)— The 200-inch telescope, the world's largest new eye on Mt. Palomar, Calif., has discovered three new "lighthouses" in the heavens.

Lighthouse means a star whose brightness tells how far away it is. The new lighthouses will be particularly useful in measuring the size of the universe.

This work was described by Dr. Edwin P. Hubble, astronomer of Mt. Wilson, Calif.

Dr. Hubble explained that the most powerful lighthouse is made up of thousands of stars bunched so close that they look, through ordinary field glasses, like a single diamond.

The next dimmer lighthouse is a novae, old stars which literally blow off their covers, to become temporarily millions of times brighter.

The third is nebulae, which are huge star families as big as the milky way, but so distant they show only as little patches of light. The big telescope makes it possible to measure the light of all three to read distances.

Dr. Hubble showed photos of two nebulae which, if the new lighthouses are correct that their light started earthward a billion years ago.

SISTERS ALL

Tally cards can be conversation pieces and do much to put across an enjoyable bridge party. They need not be expensive, in fact the home-made kinds usually provide much more fun. Tallies are easy to make from the backs of old Christmas cards, recipe cards, or just scrap paper. Cut-outs from magazines pasted on the face of the cards are quite effective . . . If you have children, get them to make your tallies. It will keep them busy on a rainy afternoon and they will be ever so proud to know how they can really produce something useful for the grownups.

One of the best sets of two-table tallies we've seen, were those made by one lad who cut out the faces of members of the Royal families from a recent issue of Life magazine. The faces of Princess Elizabeth, Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra were pasted on the women's tallies, while the faces of the Duke of Edinburgh, King George VI, George V and Edward VIII were glued on the men's tallies. The party-goers were supposed to match their tallies by faces instead of the usual way by numbers.

Another variety of tallies can be made with the colored food ads in magazines. You might have bacon on one tally, eggs on the other; macaroni and cheese; pork and beans; fish and chips.

They say that one of the best ways to save on food costs today, if you have the space for her, is to get a cow. We went visiting a young couple with two small children over the weekend who have done just this. The cow cost has been a God-send to them and to the two other families who live from the cow.

Our young family needs four quarts of milk a day, which runs about $300 in a year. They use a pound of butter a week, which is about $40 annually. With the odd bottles of cream they would ordinarily buy during the year, the cost would come close to $350 in all for fluid milk, butter and cream. Multiply this amount by three for the three families who live from the cow and you get a total annual cost of $1,050.

How much does it cost you to keep a cow in these days of high feed prices? Last year, it cost them $175. That means each family saved about $300 each on the cow venture. So it's quite plain to see that a cow can save a family money, if they are willing to look after her, and if they are situated in a place where a cow can be stabled.

The one thing that bothered us was the making of the butter. "That's no job at all," replied our hostess. "We have a small churn. It is easy to whip up three or four pounds of butter at a time."

She explained that with chickens, they have all the eggs they need, and bless 'em, they have "Chicken every Sunday." With a few fruit trees, a big garden, a deep freeze, they buy practically nothing from the grocery store. For them, food costs are not at all high.

Their income goes into life insurance, medical insurance, clothing, furniture and cash savings to build a new small home . . . So often these days a person will remark, "I don't see how people are getting by, to day without a burden or debt creeping up on them." Here's how one family is managing to slide along without serious worries.

St. Thomas' Parochial Guild Holds Most Successful Spring Tea

Blue skies and welcome sunshine ushered in the successful spring tea and sale of homecooking held yesterday in the Parish House of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, under the auspices of St. Thomas' Parochial Guild. Receiving at the door were Mrs. Arthur Smith, with the president, Mrs. Allen H. Ketcheson, assisted by Mrs. J. E. Genet, and Mrs. Norman Edwards, who most graciously welcomed the many guests.

Just inside the door, as collector of customs, was Mrs. Gordon Mitter, the treasurer, also aiding her smile of welcome, while at the left in the adjoining room, were the tables of homecooking and homemade candy, both literally groaning with good things to eat. Mrs. Harold Tait, candy table convener, Mrs. D. McNish and Mrs. J. Sherwood assisted by Mrs. E. Hobbs. On this long table, were so many delicious confections one could hardly choose among them, many ending up with the purchase of all varieties of maple creams, some with nut meats generously sprinkled through them, others with whole walnut meats centred on small squares chocolate fudge, dates stuffed with green and orange cream, nut-topped; pink and white peppermint patties, pastel tinted fondant creams, and nut-filled creams. On leaving, one noticed that this table which had been so replete with goodies at the start, so quickly were the dainties disposed of.

Directly across from the candy table, was that of the homecooking, displaying a bounteous array of lovely cakes, some with mounds of heaped pale pink frosting, chocolate cake and cakes, variously topped layer cakes in white and chocolate; tiny hermits, mouthwatering pies, nutty tarts; cup cakes, lemon pie, homemade bread, which left no room to doubt, appealed, rich honey-coated, nut-topped Chelsea buns, as well as canned peaches, strawberries, and golden tinted marmalade. These delicious creations were under the convenorship of Mrs. R. Keel, Mrs. L. E. Foxard, Mrs. R. W. Brown, and Mrs. C. D. Lough.

Inviting to the attractive tea room, with its beautifully appointed tea table, centred with an exquisite crystal bowl of deep-red carnations intermingled with red candles, and flanked by silver candelabra with the ivory tapers, and silver and silver services upon a very lovely Scotch lace cloth, were the ten hostesses Mrs. J. E. Martin and Mrs. S. J. Connolly.

Those presiding were, Mrs. Austin Smith, Miss Amy Wallbridge, Mrs. J. W. Davison, Mrs. H. Wilson, Mrs. A. Cooke, and Mrs. F. I. L. Hawkins Those who served included Mrs. D. Pentelow, Mrs. Jr. J. Leggot, Mrs. J. Howes, Mrs. T. Kelly, Mrs. L. Howard, Mrs. Beamish, Mrs. A. Gonin, Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Catchpaugh, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. D. Brown, Mrs. Little and Miss M. Wilson, Mrs. J. Cooke, and Mrs. Mc-Kenna, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Henn who made the refreshing cups of tea.

Many guests were noticed bringing much credit to its conveners, Mrs. Beamish, Mrs. J. J. Griffin, Mrs. A. F. Young-Leslie, Mrs. H. Alford, and Mrs. A. S. Lawson, and to all who assisted in making it the success it was.

Retiring C.A.S. President Predicts Municipalities Will Increase Contributions

Charles L. Hyde, retiring president of the Children's Aid Society predicted that the amount contributed by municipalities to C.A.S. work would be increased in the near future at the Society's annual meeting yesterday afternoon at Bridge Street United Church. He expressed surprise that many people have the idea that the C.A.S. is maintained by the government and the municipalities.

"Of course," he said, "the municipalities do contribute by statutory obligation, at the present time at the rate of $1.00 per day, which may soon have to be increased for all children who are in boarding foster homes." He mentioned that at the present time in the city there are about 150 children who have to be maintained in such a manner, and the per diem rate granted by the city is to cover board, clothing, medical and dental care.

In addition to the 150 children, there are "as many more over 16 years whom we must supervise regularly until the age of 21 years," Mr. Hyde continued.

Tribute Paid

Both Mr. Hyde and William Lockyer, superintendent of the Society, paid tribute to the late Thomas H. Ruston, who was connected with the local Children's Aid for 34 years. Mr. Hyde, in his report, judged the late Mr. Ruston to be a fine influence in the Society's work in the city. He also mentioned the work of the late Theresa Ritchie in presenting the Children's Shelter to the Society at his own expense.

Indicative that some year-round effort may be organized to provide the Society with funds was given by the retiring president. "The present system of tag days, community chests and individual gifts is not sufficient," he said. He added that if it had not been for a small surplus built up from bequests, the C.A.S. would have been very "severely handicapped" before now.

Expenses Thanks !

In the same line, he expressed thanks to the county for the grant of $700, to the city for $300, and to the town of Trenton for $100. "These amounts are not nearly sufficient to cover the cost of supervision of children over 16 years of age up to 21 years of protection work and work with unmarried parents which we must necessarily undertake to do."

Mr. Hyde mentioned that the Society considered itself very fortunate to have such as William Lockyer in the office of superintendent. He paid tribute to the rest of the staff—Miss Byrd Corbet, Mrs. Laura McLaughlin, Miss Hazel Hawkins, Mrs. Allie French, Miss Grace Shields, Miss Margaret Marsh and Miss Edna O'Neill — as being "efficient and faithful in the discharge of their duties."

He also acknowledged the work of the Juvenile and Family Court as an aid to the Society, and commended the men under whom it functioned — His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson, Magistrate T. Y. Wills, and probation officer, Don McKinnon.

Carried Heavy Load

Mr. Lockyer, in his report, said that "during the past year, as usual, our workers have carried a heavy load." He said that he knew of no other work where greater demands are made on the mental and physical strength of an individual than in social work. "Each year thousands of miles are travelled in connection with visiting of our wards, rehabilitation of homes, and work with the unmarried mother," he commented.

"We are deeply appreciative of the excellent co-operation received from foster parents," Mr. Lockyer said, "and we consider ourselves fortunate in this area having such warm-hearted people who make their homes available to the less fortunate."

46 Children Adopted

Forty-six children have been adopted, and 21 more have been placed for adoption during the past year. The superintendent expressed regret at the inability of the C.A.S. to immediately place a child on application for adoption, but said that the Society was trying to do its best in that line.

"The work in connection with the unmarried parents has shown an increase," Mr. Lockyer continued, "but with the growth in population in this district, we are not too alarmed." He said that the first case the Society had in many cases came in the form of a blind notice from the hospital, which thus denied the Society the opportunity of pre-natal planning.

Despite a feeling within the Society that progress had been made in the field of protection work, Mr. Lockyer found that "at no time since the Society's existence has it been confronted with so many requests from parents to be relieved of their children." He said that a great deal of assistance had been extended to families whose home life had been disrupted, and which thus affected the normal life of the child.

Numerous Obstacles

"We encounter numerous obstacles in striving to better home-life because of over-indulgence, squalor, bad housing, and far too often delapidated standards that deny the child any spiritual foundations for life," the superintendent said.

Inquiries on behalf of the Family Allowance Board have been small in number, indicating that there is little abuse of funds from that source.

Mr. Lockyer extended his thanks to Mr. Hyde for his service, and tendered the thanks of the Society to "government departments, municipal officials, city, district and provincial police, medical professions and service clubs, and all who in any way assisted."

Read by Goodness

"The problems that confront us from day to day, although heavy and perplexing, are eased by the goodness and thoughtfulness of many groups throughout the district who have been a assist us in our financial campaigns, and to those individuals and organizations who do knitting and sewing for us, we are grateful," Mr. Lockyer said.

The superintendent's report, broken down, revealed the following figures: (for the year beginning April 1, 1950, and concluding March 31, 1951) children in care first of year, 323; number admitted to care, 72; number discharged, 83; number in care at end of year, 314; number of visits, 3,530; number of interviews, 1,028; medical, mental and dental attention, 297; adoptions completed, 46.

Under unmarried parents' work: number of new cases, 72; re-opened cases, 2; number of cases carried over the year, 80; number illegitimate children made wards, 32; number of office interviews, 199; number of visits, 232; number of settlements and court orders, 14.

92 New Cases

In protection work, the number of new cases was 92; re-opened cases, 20; children in care at the beginning, 234; number of cases open at end of year, 191; children involved, 484; number of visits, 887; number of office interviews, 165; Family Court appearances, 16, and children involved, 44; investigations completed for Matrimonial Causes Act, 38, and children involved, 60.

Financial reports indicated that $6,919.65 was spent on attire for wards, and $19.50 for non-wards. Generous donations of clothes were received, more than in the past.

Financial Report

The financial report of the Society indicated that $13,555.50 was received from the city for protection work, $2,744.29 from the county, and $6,305.38 from the town of Trenton. The days yielded $266.69, the city contributed $600 over a two-year period, and Belleville Kinsmen $100.

Balance in trust on family benefits as of March 31, 1951, was $15,301.02. Receipts for the year amounted to $68,350.21, and disbursements, $67,944.29, leaving a debit balance of $1,348.73 on the year's operations.

HARDY LILIES — A GILT-EDGED FLOWER INVESTMENT

"Have you walked in that wonderful garden
Where unselfishness blooms as a rose,
And Content is the sweetest of flowers,
Where the Lily of Peacefulness grows."
—N. M. Cook

Hardy lillies may be successfully grouped in the perennial border and make a lovely picture. There are numerous varieties. Above is illustrated a type known as The Centifolium Olympic Hybrid Lilies. They are particularly lovely and deserve a place in every garden. They should be planted in a well-drained soil. The ideal location is in a sunny position in good loam with a gravelly subsoil. If the ground is clay, dig a hole of at least 16 inches in depth and 16 inches in diameter. On the bottom, place 4 inches of gravel and then inch of leaf mould or peat moss. If the soil is sandy use more humus, then tramp firmly and use water to settle. Next, place in the hole some good rich soil to which has been added some wood ashes and bone meal. Place the bulb six to eight inches deep with a layer of sharp sand above and below. The lilies should be staked when planted and a label attached. They require a mulching of leaves after the ground freezes.

Carrots Combine Well With Other Vegetables

By KAY KEX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 20.(CP)—A bit loved with carrots these spring days? Home economists of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, suggest mixing them with other vegetables for variety.

Shredded carrots and onions make a good combination. The proportions: 12 medium carrots, two medium onions; one-half cup water; four tablespoons butter; one teaspoon salt.

Peel the medium carrots and the onions and shred them through a coarse grater or shredder. Cook together in the water and add salt and butter. Cook in a covered saucepan for ten minutes. Six servings.

Handy for Emergencies

A pot of basic soup stock in the refrigerator is handy stuff to have on hand in emergencies arise.

In addition to the officials' spree that soup makes a nutritious luncheon or supper course.

Bones can be achieved from beef or dark colored meat bones, and white stock, made from veal bones or light-colored meat, are the types most commonly used.

Home economists suggest browning the bones before putting them in the soup kettle—it gives them extra flavor. After adding the water and vegetables, bring to a boil and simmer slowly for two or three hours. If spices are used tie them in a bag so they can be easily removed.

Strain the soup through fine strainer or a piece of cheesecloth and allow to chill. Remove the layer of fat from the top before using.

Cream of Corn Soup

This is a tasty dish which the home economists recommend.

Ingredients: One 20-ounce can of corn, one medium onion (sliced); half a cup of diced celery; two cups of water; three cups of thin cream sauce well seasoned with salt and pepper. For a saucepan combine the corn, onion, celery and water. Cover and simmer for ten minutes.

Make three cups of sauce using three tablespoons of butter, three tablespoons flour, one teaspoon salt, a little pepper, three cups milk. Rub the corn mixture through a coarse sieve and add to the cream sauce.

Serve hot and sprinkle with a dash of paprika. This will serve six.

Pie Meringue

If you've been having trouble lately with your meringues, better take a tip from the home economists on how to make one. For each medium sized pie use two egg whites and four tablespoons of fruit or powdered sugar. Fine granulated sugar will do but never use icing sugar.

Along with the two egg whites and sugar use one-eighth tablespoon of cream of tartar and pinch of salt.

Beat the two whites until frothy. Add the cream of tartar and salt. Continue beating until whites are stiff and then add and continue beating.

Cover the entire surface of the cold pie filling with the meringue and put into a moderately glaze oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit). Bake 20 minutes.

Korea Not Worth Fighting Over Say Wounded

Montreal, April 21—(CP)—Korea was described by three wounded Canadian soldiers as "no dirty it isn't worth fighting over," when they arrived here Friday en route to their homes in Nova Scotia.

Two of the men, Pte. C. A. Rogers and J. E. Pentz, of Blandford, former policeman, were partially blinded by "poison," and were suffering from the well-known effects of Korean conditions. Pte. J. D. Appleby, of Kentville, N. S., was suffering from wounds caused by shrapnel from a grenade.

"I wouldn't give one square inch of Canada for the whole of Korea," Appleby commented. His comrades warmly backed him when he added that Canada looked good to him.

They had no complaints about food, drinking or treatment. They could have liked to have had some Canadian cigarets. All they received were American cigarets, but they got plenty. It was the same with the beer.

Rogers said that even while the battle was going on the Korean farmers went along with their plowing. "It made it very difficult for us to know whether they were friendly, or hiding and advising. However, we took no chances."

Honor Youths For Rescue In Trent River

Frankford—The Frankford Lion Club held their first "Father and Son night" on Wednesday, and it proved to be one of the most successful meetings. In the absence of president Arthur Duncan, 1st vice-president Preston Chase presided at the head table. Lion Preston welcomed Lions and boys, and stated that he hoped it would become an annual affair.

Following a fine banquet, prepare by the ladies of the Frankford Lady Dairy Bar, a sing-song was enjoyed.

Tail Lion was then called on to introduce his guest for the evening, a round of applause being given for each lad.

A short business period followed. Lion Preston Chase then called on Lion Sid Martin to take charge for the presentation of awards. Lion Sid asked Maynard Johnston and Earl Rogers to come to the front of the room. He then read an account of their joint rescue of Carol Blair in June 1950, from a whirlpool below the Frankford dam across the Trent River.

He praised the boys' work of heroism, explaining the presentation Earl Rogers received from the Boy Scouts Association. He is to receive a Silver Cross, a Boy Scout award, from the Governor-General of Canada at a later date.

As Maynard Johnston is not a Scout, the Lions Club felt that an award of some kind should be made to him. Lion Sid then presented Maynard with a beautiful plaque from the Lions Club, with the inscription "For Gallantry." Maynard Johnston from Stanford Lions Club." Maynard's father was present for the presentation.

Guest speaker of the evening was Rev. Duncan McTavish of Bridge Street United Church in Belleville. Mr. McTavish brought an inspirational and interesting talk, spiced with bits of wit and humor. He was warmly applauded for his address.

British Soldiers Given New Automatic Rifles

London, April 21 — (Reuters) —Britain will equip her soldiers with a new automatic rifle which her experts believe will be the best in the world, military sources said Friday.

The move indicated that attempts to standardize weapons and ammunition of all Atlantic Pact countries have fallen through.

The new British rifle will fire a .30-calibre bullet — smaller than most armies use. The United States has refused to fall in line with this because they have huge stocks of their standard pattern rifle and its .30-calibre ammunition, the military sources said.

The new rifles are lighter and said to be more accurate up to about 1,000 yards. Men in battle will be able to carry more ammunition.

It means an end to the short magazine Lee Enfield which, with modifications, has been the standard weapon here since Britain fought the Boers in South Africa 50 years ago. The Lee Enfield weighs nine pounds three ounces and fires a .303-calibre bullet.

Psychology May be Answer To Rash of Overtime Games In Stanley Cup Final Series

By BILL BUFAHY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 21—(CP)—There may be an obscure psychological reason for all the overtime games in the Stanley Cup series between Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

It could be a reaction to the frustration built up during the regular season when there was no provision for overtime and the six teams of the National Hockey League played a record number of tie games.

One thing is certain, the fans haven't been at all disappointed to see Montreal and Toronto go into sudden-death overtime in every one of their four playoff games to date. That probably goes double for Toronto supporters, because Leafs have won three of the four extended sessions.

Considering the closeness of the previous games, there's good reason to expect that tonight's fifth game of the best-of-seven series might also go beyond regulation time.

However, the teams will have to be careful less they get on too long. There's an 11:45 p. m. Saturday night curfew in Toronto and if the teams should be tied at that time the game will have to be replayed. It happened in the second game of the semi-final series between Leafs and Boston Bruins.

Most Give Everything

"We have to go out and give everything we have—and a little more," said coach Joe Primeau in St. Michael's dressing room. "Leafs will remain until shortly before game time.

"We have to be ready because it's a cinch those Canadiens are going to throw their best shot. And we don't want to return to Montreal."

Canadiens arrived in Toronto last night and coach Dick Irvin had his usual pessimism ready for inquiring reporters.

"There wasn't much use making the trip here," he said, looking almost as if he meant it. "We've given our best and Leafs are ahead. I guess that semi-final with Detroit took too much out of us."

General manager Frank Selke was a little more optimistic, and he announced that Irvin would remain as coach for at least another two years.

Another Great Team Ready

"We have won games in Toronto before (one this season) and with a bit of luck can still go on and win the cup," he said. "But come what may, I would like to say that this was Dick Irvin's finest contribution to the coaching profession. He moulded the nucleus of another great team for Montreal."

Only possible absentee from Toronto's lineup tonight is defenceman Fern Flaman, who missed the two Leaf wins in Montreal Tuesday and Thursday with a groin injury. There's a good chance he'll play, however.

Canadiens report that Doug Harvey, star defenceman, had been slowed up by an injured knee, that forward Calum MacKay was treated yesterday for an ankle injury, and that rookie Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion is bothered with a sore knee.

Sydney Ready For Valleyfield In Third Game

Sydney, N. S., April 21 (CP)—Hector (Toe) Blake's Valleyfield Braves go against Sydney Millionaires tonight for the third time in this hockey - happy city in the semi-finals for the Governor Alexander Trophy.

Both teams have won a game and are equal in points. Valleyfield won the opener 3-2 Wednesday night and Millionaires retaliated last night to win by the same score. It's a best - of - seven series to decide who will advance against Toronto St. Michaels.

But hockey took a back seat last night. Valleyfield players and club executive were tendered a monstrous reception by the city of Sydney, press and radio club and the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association.

Valleyfield farmed Cape Breton hospitality "overwhelming . . . we have never seen anything like it."

Prior to the reception, hockey officials announced that Valleyfield's protest over Stu Thursday's game, Coach Blake — one-time Canadiens' star forward — objected to the goal scored by Valleyfield in the dying seconds of the second period was disallowed.

Blake's strategy at the time had Provencher, Bouchard and Lamothe left in the period, goalie Paul Leclerc was removed, Stu Bruneau moved up into Sydney's blueline.

Valleyfield got the draw and, after a series of short passes, rifled the puck behind Sydney's Nick Riendeau. The red light failed to go on and the goal judge said the automatic timing device had cut the current before the goal cut the crease.

"We've decided to drop the protest," Blake said. "We are forgetting about that game." He did not elaborate.

City council adjourned their business for the second time in order to attend the reception. It was decided before adjournment that Mayor Percy Vickers would accompany Millionaires when they fly to Montreal for the fourth game Sunday.

BRITON GETS TOP POST

London, April 21 — (AP) — British officials said Friday that the United States has agreed that a Briton should get the top Mediterranean naval command post for the Atlantic Treaty Forces.

This was good news to Britons, some of whom expressed disapproval at appointment of an American admiral as Supreme Naval Commander.

U.S. Armiral Robert Carney had been promised the post as Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean but the job will now go to a Briton, probably Admiral Sir John Edleston, the officials said.

Trout-Fly Patterns

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Many Trout Flies)

The other day I stopped in to look over a class in fly tying. The students were in various stages of proficiency according to individual manual dexterity and the length of time they had been attending classes. Some of them were able to turn out quite presentable flies; others were outright beginners.

It was evident, however, that they had one outstanding trait in common. Like new fly tyers the world over they paid little or no attention to standard patterns and created their flies to "suit themselves." Some of the results of imaginations allowed to run wild were truly fearful and wonderful to behold.

Why it is that new fly tyers insist upon ignoring the time and research that has gone into the standardization of the old and accepted dressings I can't imagine. Maybe it is because they are new also at the use of trout flies. Perhaps they think that the tried-an-true patterns will catch fish where new "creations" will not.

More likely it is their common hope that they, more than luck than anything else, can put together that "wonder fly," thus earning the enviable title of having a pattern bear the tyer's name and be passed down to posterity as the "killer" of all time.

Time was when I used to caution beginners against the danger of wasting time and materials in the creation of new patterns. But I have listened respectfully and then went right on "creating." Now I am wise. I introduced them find out the hard way.

Several years ago I had as a visitor an artist, one of the outdoor magazines. He had done plenty of fishing for landlocked salmon, squaretail and rainbow, but his experience with brown trout was almost zero.

Lots of Gear

When he arrived he had with him a liberal supply of rods, reels, clothing and clothing. I mentioned casually that I had tied up an extra-large supply of flies, pending his arrival. Once he refused summarily, with the whole-hearted approval of us all, then he showed me box after box of flies, both wet and dry, of his own manufacture.

I looked these over respectfully, making note that nothing in his collection even remotely resembled the fly hatches then on our streams, but I said nothing further about supplying him with suitable patterns. The next day we went fishing.

As I anticipated when I invited him to come and see us, the trout were active and the fishing was good. There were plenty of natural insects drifting and the local anglers had no trouble catching trout.

No Fish

Not so the editor; for four consecutive days he labored valiantly with his "creations" and he did not succeed in interesting one single trout in his offerings. Finally he broke down and asked me for some of mine. The last two days of his stay everybody caught fish.

Just before he departed he made a confession. For years he had been accepting articles or mine for his magazine, dealing with fly tying, and matching patterns. He sent on cheques for these articles and had the stories printed, but deep down in his own heart he believed not one single word I had said.

That night we figured he could catch brown trout on "creations" but he did find out about standard patterns the hard way.

Last year about this time I wrote a news story about a new "wonder fly" called the Teal. In it I tried to explain that the only reason in this world that the Teal would catch fish was that it really was a Coachman with a slightly different wing.

Many Questions

Did that make any difference to fishermen? Not a bit. They "wanted flies" and "killers?" Not a particle. I had letters come in from all over the country asking about the Teal. Who ties them? Who sells them? How can we get them?

Believe me — and I'm saying this in all sincerity — there simply is no such thing as a "wonder fly." There are only certain particularly brown trout, under any and all circumstances, that will rise to almost anything. One of these "wonder flies" — the Mickey Finn. Now there is no denying that a Mickey Finn will catch trout to beat the band most of the time. It is a well-designed, quite bucktail and I always carry a supply of them.

Yet I have seen times when a Mickey Finn literally wasn't worth the room it takes up in a tackle kit when it came to taking trout under certain particular circumstances.

I'm not saying that a new fly can't be put together which will improve on some of the older patterns. It can be done. What I am trying to get at is that any fly is developed through research and hard work on the stream — not by throwing together some fancy colors in a "creation" at your fly-tying table.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

Columbus, O., April 20—(AP)—If you want to cement international sports relations, get in the swim . . . Two of North America's top swimming coaches, Mike Peppe of Ohio State and Matt Mann of Michigan, are doing just that . . . Mann plans to take a dozen swimmers to England and Scotland this summer. Peppe has what amounts to an international team right here . . . The Ohio State team includes Dick Cleveland, star sprinter from Honolulu, Garrick Agnew, a middle-distance swimmer from Australia and Gerry de Jonghe from South Africa . . . The Australians are in the limelight now, what with Yale's John Marshall and Michigan's John Davies winning in the recent A. A. U. championships. Peppe calls Cleveland "the phenomenon of the year" and Mann argues that Marshall has done more for swimming in the United States than all the coaches." Because he has shown home-bred swimmers how to travel faster than they thought possible.

Taking the Works

Davies, who upset Princeton's Bob Brawner in the breast-stroke event, is one of the boys who will make Mann's tour and for him it probably means a soft touch . . . They will make 19 appearances from Brighton to Aberdeen and back—holding clinics each afternoon and either swimming in competition or putting on a show at night . . . Davies is working his way through Michigan at the rate of lifeguarding in high schools and toiling in a camp each summer.

Galt Hawks Will Operate In Junior 'A'

Toronto, April 21 — (CP) Galt Black Hawks will operate in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series next season and, once again, will be sponsored by Chicago Black Hawks.

Bill Tobin, president of the Chicago club, made the announcement Friday night following a conference with Galt executives.

"There has been some talk that Galt would not operate next season, but it will," said Tobin. "We also discussed prospects on the club and talked of plans for further signings, a stolen base, and a force-out for their runs.

Toronto Maple Leafs scored four runs in the 10th inning to down Rochester Red Wings 6-2 in International League baseball before with the bases loaded broke up the game.

Bill Padgett pitched Springfield Cubs to a neat 3-0 three-hit triumph over Ottawa Giants. The cubs scored two unearned runs in the first inning and added their final in the fourth at the expense of Frank Fanovich, who went the distance for Ottawa. Montreal and Baltimore were idle.

Buffalo Bisons Appear Headed For Dreary Year

(By The Associated Press)

It looks like another dreary season for Buffalo Bisons.

The Bisons, who won the International League pennant in 1949, dropped to last place in 1950 and are off to a bad start in the 1951 season.

Buffalo suffered its third straight defeat yesterday, bowing 3-2 to Syracuse Chiefs. The Chiefs, only unbeaten team in the league, scored all their runs in the fourth inning at the expense of rookie Tom Acker.

Jack Griffore, veteran right-hander, stopped the Bisons with eight hits. The chiefs put together four singles, a stolen base, and a force-out for their runs.

Bridgeport Vets Win 'B' Title

Bracebridge, April 21 — (CP)— Bridgeport Vets won the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate B title Friday night defeating Gravenhurst Indians 4-3. The win gave Vets the best-of-seven series four games to one.

Barnes and Brazier scored for Indians in the first period, but Vets came back with goals by Kullman and Novak to tie the count at the end of the second.

Woroch, Pickel, Geiger and Wallis picked up the other four Vets' goals in the first period, while Cowell and Jones counted for Indians.

The Belleville Commercial Softball League finishes its 5 game schedule tonight at the YMCA Thursday night and it looks as though the boys will be entering their best year. All teams are affiliated with OASA and the executive will contact Picton and Trenton teams and will enter winners also in Ontario OASA playdowns.

The league is divided into two sections, Intermediate A and Intermediate AA, with five teams competing in each section. The Intermediate A teams are Moore and Masterman, Gregory Construction, Ramsay Paints, Trenton and Point Anne.

In the Intermediate AA section, the teams are Avon Jewellers, Bakelite Company, Belleville Motor Car, Glenaer Frontenacs and Northern Electric. Trenton will enter Intermediate B playdowns and Point Anne will go Intermediate C.

The executive on May 24 as the opening date with the usual opening ceremonies at the Alemite Field. The completed schedule will be published early next week. Certificates were given out at the meeting and managers are reminded no time is getting the boys signed on the dotted line.

A new trophy will replace the "Winking Well" trophy. Bill Ost, who was one of the founders of the present league generously donated a fine new trophy which is now on display at Jack McNab's Sport Store.

The rumored the fans will be seeing some new faces this coming season. We understand Smiley Maronek, the Junior Hockey coach will be touring for Ramsay Paints "Stars" pitched in the Rosedale Fast Ball League, Montreal, three years ago against the fabulous Bill Durnan. Wally Bent pitched for Galt Intermediate last year and will hook up with Howe and Masterman. Glen Ray Greenacre have lined up such players as Don Boyle and Marty Malloran to pitch and Al. Rowbotham to do the receiving. Point Anne, "A" winners of last year will probably use Pat Hurcle and Jim Hunter with Murray "Mr. Softball" Green looking after the catching chores.

Trenton has always been an ardent softball town and will probably make a strong bid for the championship.

The AA section will be strengthened by the addition of three "A" players per team of last season and should dish up a good brand of ball.

We understand Don McNevin, sponsor for Glen Ray will dot his boys out in fancy new uniforms which should add color to the game.

Convener Harry Knott received word from OASA Secretary Frank Fryer at Hamilton, that league winners must be declared before August 15th.

Happy Chandler Given Tough Nut to Crack

(By The Canadian Press)

A. B. (Happy) Chandler 3rd, baseball czar, will be hard pressed when next he has last dispute as commissioner of baseball.

It revolved around radio broadcasts of Detroit Tigers games into what four clubs of the central league claim is their territory.

They want $40,000 of broadcast money for the season, or they want the practice stopped.

It is understood here the clubs —Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Flint and Saginaw—would divide the money.

After hearing the arguments, Chandler took the matter under advisement.

Central league officials headed by President Thomas J. Halligan, appeared in support of the club's contention that broadcasts of Detroit games reduce attendance at the class A contests.

George Slater, president of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, announced on Friday night that 200,136 fans witnessed league and playoff games for the 1950-51 season, an increase of 201,089 over last year.

The big year for the QSHL was 1948-49 when 260,807 fans clicked through league turnstiles.

At New York, Kid Gavilan carved a unanimous 10-round decision over Aldo Minelli, game Italian veteran, Friday night in his first tuneup for his May 18 welterweight title bout with Johnny Bratton. The decision drew a chorus of boos.

Gavilan weighed 150 9-4, Minelli 152 1-2.

At Glasgow, Queen's Park defeated Eintracht-munste 5-0 Friday in a Scottish League division B soccer match. The match had been scheduled for today but was brought forward.

The Cambridge University crew, victorious over Yale and Harvard during a brief American visit, were to sail for home Friday night aboard the Queen Elizabeth. Sailing time was midnight (EST).

A total of $188,009 in purses will be distributed during the 14-day spring meeting of the Ontario jockey club and Greenwood Racing Club starting May 19 at the Woodbine race track here, it was announced Friday. Condition books are being distributed.

The top event will be the 92nd running of the King's Plate, Canada's turf classic, the oldest continuously run horse race of the North American continent.

It will be closed on the closing of the Ontario Jockey Club Saturday May 26. It carries a purse of $15,000 added, estimated value $21,000 plus the gift of 50 guineas donated annually by his Majesty King George VI.

At London, American-bred Turco II, William Woodward's hope for the 1951 English classic races, was beaten by a head in his three-year-old debut Friday.

The fighting Fox-Le Ross colt started as an 11-10 favorite in the amateur tournament.

They completed the contest of the Walker Cup contingent that began the tournament Monday, with Manley eliminating cup regular Dick Chapman of Pittsburgh, 3 and 1, and Patton scoring over cup alternate Bill (Dynamite) Goodlee of Valdosta, Ga., 3 and 2 in the 36-hole semi-final matches.

Boston Red Sox, Pre-Season Favorites to Win American League, Languish in Cellar

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Boston Red Sox, perennial pre-season favorite to waltz to the American League pennant, are in deep freeze, still looking for victory No. 1.

Yesterday they bowed to Philadelphia Athletics 6-3 — a dead-last club in 1950 and one which hadn't won a game in Boston since Sept. 12, 1948.

Alex Kellner, a 20-game loser in 1950, stunned a crowd of 11,401 fans by turning back the Sox with four hits.

Kermit Wahl broke the game open in the eighth inning with a 2-run double and scored the clinching when Dom DiMaggio dropped Phiten's liner.

New York Yankees ran into a snag in Washington, dropping a ninth-inning doubleheader to the Senators 5-3 and 8-4. Last year the Bombers were the only team in the majors, which didn't drop a doubleheader.

Sandalio Consuegra yielded 4 hits in the day game in outlasting five Yankee pitchers who granted only two hits but handed out 12 bases on balls. A crowd of 27,331 fans, including President Truman, turned out as Washington belatedly opened its season. The game was a playoff of Monday's scheduled opener.

Vernon Leads Attack

Lefty Al Sims scattered 10 hits in the night game which attracted 18,553 customers. Mickey Vernon led the Washington attack, batting in four runs on a triple, double and two singles to spoil the debut of rookie Tom Morgan.

The double triumph enabled the Senators to take over the lead by half a game from Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox, who each scored their third straight triumphs in the afternoon.

Bob Feller came up with a five-hitter as he pitched the Tribe to a 4-1 victory over St. Louis Browns before 48,316 fans.

Randy Gumpert pitched Chicago to a three-hit 8-0 victory over Detroit Tigers before 8,731 fans.

Opening day in the National league ended in a sour note for New York Giants and Philadelphia Phils. Brooklyn Dodgers spoiled the day for the Giants and 30,970 fans by downing the New Yorkers 7-3 at the Polo Grounds. Boston Braves pumped the Phils 2-1 before 17,423 fans in Philadelphia.

Newcombe Tames Giants

Don Newcombe tamed the Giants on five hits and coasted after the Dodgers scored four runs in the fifth.

St. Mike's Win In Four Straight Over Saskatoon

Toronto, April 21—(CP)—Citizens of Saskatoon could hardly be blamed today for making Phil Hughes their public enemy No. 1.

It's mainly the result of his uncanny goaltending ability and, of course, the power of the Alexander Cup and major hockey championship.

Monarchs, backed by their spectacular netminding of Hughes, overpowering Saskatoon Quakers 9-3 last night to take their best-of-seven semi-finals in four straight games.

They will now take on either Valleyfield Braves or Sydney Millionaires for the title, first time the Alexander Cup has been put on the line. The series will lack the old east-west battle touch, so familiar in other leagues. It's Ontario vs. Eastern Quebec this season.

Quakers, who lost the other three games 8-5, 4-1 and 4-2, summed up the series this way:

Hughes Terrific

"When you have to tangle with Hughes you're getting through those forwards and defencemen. It's a mighty tough order. Hughes was terrific. And he got wonderful support . . . they're a good team."

Quakers managed to keep up with the high-flying Monarchs for two periods last night. They battled to a 2-2 tie in the first session and split two goals in the second.

But the fiery third period was a disastrous affair. Monarchs broke loose for six unanswered goals, every one of them earned.

Johnny Hurley, fiery little centre, and big Bill McCracken led Toronto with two goals each. Gord Hanigan, Ken Watson, Sam Kennedy, Eddie Mulligan and Dusty Blair got singles. Bob West, Charlie McCullough and Cy Rouse tallied for Saskatoon.

Few on Hand

There were only 2,168 fans on hand to watch Quakers blast into a 1-0 lead in the first period and then see Monarchs push ahead with two goals by the 15-minute mark. Rouse tied it up 2-2 by the end of the period.

Quakers, playing without the services of George Senick, put on the pressure again in the second period and moved ahead on McCullough's drive from 10 feet out. However, Mulligan came up with an unassisted marker at 6:24 to put the teams on even terms.

Monarchs just ran wild in the third period. Hughes, who kicked out 24 shots in the entire game, handled only eight shots in the last period. Jack Gibson saved 32 shots in the game.

AT THE BELLE — Its moonlight and spring blossoms and June's in love, in the inspiring Technicolor musical romance, "Two Weeks With Love," starring Jane Powell, Ricardo Montalban, Louis Calhern and Ann Harding, at the Belle with "The M.G.M. Story."

AT THE CAPITOL — Harpo Marx gets inspired in a scene from "Duck Soup." Chico and Groucho, of course, are also very much present. On the same program Paramount's thundering romance of winning the west, "Wells Fargo," stars Joel McCrea, Robert Cummings and Frances Dee. Both hits open at the Capitol Monday.

Citadelles Face Barrie Flyers In Fourth Game

Quebec, April 21 (CP)—Barrie Flyers and Quebec Citadelles meet tonight in the fourth game of their Eastern-Canada Memorial Cup final.

In this hockey mad city of 200,000, odds say Citadelles are a cinch to win and tie the best-of-seven series 2-2.

The rugged hard-fighting Barrie squad is leading the series 2-1 on the strength of two earlier victories 6-2 at Toronto and 5-4 at Barrie.

Citadelles' impressive 7-2 defeat of Flyers Thursday night popped up Quebec hockey fans so much that they broke down doors at the coliseum in a mad scramble for tickets.

A crowd of more than 1,000 ducat-seekers broke down two doors last night and police reinforcements were called to send Toronto April 23.

Both teams went through a one hour practice session yesterday.

Coach Happy Emms reported Flyers fit but "the boys will have to work hard if they want to stop Citadelles on their home ice," he said.

Meanwhile, the high-spirited Citadelles appear to have regained the sharpness that led them into the series.

The crowd home. The ticket sellers closed down for the night. Some 14,000 fans are expected to attend the game.

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

For Sunday, April 22, 1951

March 21 to April 20—(Aries)—Aspects point up moderation and avoidance of persons or places that could distract you from rightful purpose. Attend necessary duties, including prayer. Get rest, recreation.

April 21 to May 20—(Taurus)—Planetary configurations stress need for more right thinking and right doing. If free, spend some time with a good book; improving a talent, at healthy outdoor sport. Don't neglect your soul.

May 21 to June 21—(Gemini)—Duties, military, government or other duties won't demand time, catch up with correspondence, visit the lonely or ill, find some time for healthy exercise for mind, body. Pray.

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer)—Your Moon's position lately warns against "moods," irritability. After your church services and necessary tasks go into the open and enjoy a sport, hobby; walking is healthy.

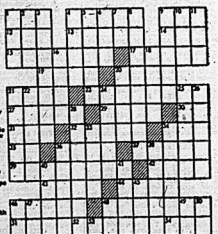
July 24 to August 22—(Leo)—Mild in your sector, really up to what your position calls for here and should spend the day. But no other plans, be sure you have right care of your soul. Spend time with family.

August 23 to September 23—(Virgo)—Ideal day for catching up with social obligations, toning health with outdoor exercise and fun, improving a hobby, talent. First remember your duty to God, you'll be more content.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Not a very encouraging, nor unfriendly, Uncessary work, money interests should wait their turn; bring God's day, it asks accordingly. Attend services, pray.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Main activities of too vigorous nature, laborious work not urgent. Very encouraging day for quieting pastimes, for religious, charity interests, chores, wholesome fun.

November 23 to December 22—(Sagittarius)—Extra caution urged in expenditures, more saving advisable. Attend to home and other tasks, also make time for church, then, pleasant recreation. Pray for world peace.



December 23 to January 21—(Capricorn)—Don't enforce any issue, you will obtain quicker cooperation using gentle, persuasive albeit justly firm reasoning. Omit useless work and finances; put essentials on top. Pray.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Stars stress need for calm, pleasant handling of chores, for attendance at your church services, and more prayers with others for peace. There should be time for healthy fun.

February 21 to March 20—(Pisces)—Take judicial care in confidential matters, how you handle important information and other duties. Remember, this is Sunday and the self is very unbecoming; start anew for God's rules.

YOU BORN TODAY: At times meditative, yet active mentally, physically. Fond of nature, kind to animals, you have ability to get on well along with children and sisters. Capable of reaching high position in life is you don'tovereffire, misuse your energies,' or take on many things, not giving self time to develop or attain worth while goals in any. Be alert for your views, listen as thoughtfully to other's. Mechanical ability, talent for military or religious life; versatility, ambition outstanding. Care quick-tempered. Birthdate of Henry Fieldings, English author and dramatist.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

"And my talent for discovering genius counts for nothing?" she asked.

"Not about that."

"Your mood, sweet, still eludes me. Do I get the subject of him? Since you may not be back in my anger in helping me to solve the problem?"

She was evident she was enjoying his predicament. "I'm not sure I want it solved."

Paul Panciera nodded slowly. "I thought I saw that in your eyes." He paused and then went on. "The gentleman tonight, I gather, turned out to be much more attractive than the—the 'poor girl' I think you called him—dirty, ark up at Cannes." His irony curled his lips ever so slightly. "Am I to assume that this is an intuition even love possibly?"

Jean Roland was beginning to be annoyed now. "Assume what you like."

Mr. Panciera sighed. "Poor youth, poor helpless youth. To break his heart upon a stone. I wish he spoke zerolessly but nonetheless pointedly. "—I think you—I shall have a little talk with the young man in the morning. Where is Tim Reese staying?"

"Not far from here, but much too far for you." Jean said sharply.

He smiled tolerantly. "Perhaps then, you might prefer to ask him over here?"

"What would you talk to him about?"

He was very relaxed, offhand. "Oh, you thing and another. Business, probably." He shrugged. "We might even, if you would stay mildly sane, work out some satisfactory arrangement for the three of us."

She took her head firmly. "You may be sure I shall not ask him even if you might. Is it him your head about me."

He smiled his ironic smile. "Could it be it has occurred to you that he and you might make a very profitable combination?

Could it ever be avarice, sweet?"

Angrily, she turned away from him and went quickly to the passageway that led to the rear of the apartment. She returned almost immediately in a heavy coat.

"Now, now. I wouldn't be so impetuous," he reproved her. "It is quite cold tonight, but I'll be the flight would be better made in the snuggling. Does he know you reside here?"

"What do you think!" she stopped, faced him. "No. It's simply I'm tired of your manners. Your artificiality is getting on my nerves. And, I might add, your conceit is also."

"He is so natural, isn't he, and so modest. One of nature's own gentlemen. How I suffer in comparison."

"You do! And I'm in love with him, if that's what you want to know!" She went swiftly to the door.

"Dear, dear," he sighed, shook his head sadly. "Love, Love at first. You, such a prettily coded steel mechanism, in love. Truly I live in age of wonders."

She opened the door. Swiftly he stepped forward, closed it.

"No." He was cool, authoritative now. "You, I would hardly be good business for you—or for me for that matter—if you should be seen tramping through a hotel lobby at this hour of the morning. It could hardly be described as in good taste. Now put it gladly. Nor do I think it would enhance your reputation any to have people saying I threw you out." He took her arm, led her into the room. "So, if it will suit you any happier.

"It will, considerably."

He shrugged, went to a closet immediately inside of the passageway. In a moment he was back with his hat coat gloves.

"Nobody will note an artificial and concealed poor creature like me at this hour of the night. He went to the door. "And if anyone should notice, it will be said that you threw me out. That will be considered amusing." He opened the door. "I shall be over for coffee in the morning. I am sure there will be much less heat and much more light then."

"I will be leaving in the morning."

"I shall try to be here in time to bid you adieu. Good night, my wonderful one."

He closed the door softly and was gone.

Over Manhattan, the morning broke grey and cold, but not for Tim Reese. His expectancy of the day announced him early and his bright memories of the night before kept him awake. The drab day and the plain hotel roof were for him golden-hazed with pleasure.

Those dreams he had had in the hospital, the play of many accents and many colors which had streched so far into the distance, were beginning to be Joo and now he was ready for anything but happy.

It was with exhuberance he had left Noonan for years and he climbed out of bed and went to the window to shut it. He turned away from the window and then stopped abruptly. Astounded, he stared at his cane standing against the wall near the bed where he had placed them the night before.

He stared at the canes a long moment, finding it difficult to believe their testimony. Then, suddenly he gave out with a whoop of joy.

He had in his exuberance walked without the canes. He had walked without help for the first time since 1944.

The sharp cold after the snow had made the city streets slippery and Tim Reese, who would have made but clumsy progress at best, walking without canes, was now compelled to move even more slowly and with more care finding it necessary occasionally to steady himself against a building or a street post.

People on the street, puzzled at the uncertainty and awkwardness of his gait turned to watch him little suspecting that they were watching a man who was learning to walk all over again.

Jean Roland and Tim had planned to be together for lunch but Tim, beside himself with happiness at discarding the canes, decided the good news should not wait. He would go to the shop and walk in on her.

He wanted to show her how swiftly they were moving in the direction of his dreams.

The shop was quiet, without customers, while the employees leisurely made ready for the day. Tim found Miss Major in the office.

"Wonderful ball," he said as he entered the office. "Wonderful evening."

He was as offhand as he had been when he left her the evening before.

Miss Major obviously did not believe him. "Was Miss Roland surprised?" she asked blandly.

"Surprised and delighted. We had supper together."

"Really?" Her cynical disbelief was sharp and unmistakable. "I suppose she is expecting you now."

"Nope. This is another surprise. Where can I find her? Do you know?"

Miss Major was very bland. "You do not know where to find her?"

"We have a date for lunch but—" He leaned over the desk. "Have you ever been in love, Miss Major?"

"If I had been," Miss Major answered coolly, "I wouldn't therefore make a fool of myself."

Tim laughed. "But that's just the point. When you're in love you make a fool of yourself. That's the fun of it. I just plain forget to eat Miss Roland's phone number home address."

Miss Major smiled a bland smile. "She'll be in around 11."

"Holy mackerel! That's a hundred years from now! You call her and tell her Tim Reese wants to see her. Will you, please?"

"You're sure she'll know the name?"

Tim was disconcerted. "Don't you know the name?"

"Sorry." She shook her head mechanically. "Never heard of it."

"Tim was more disconcerted. "How long have you worked here Miss Major?"

"About five months."

"And you never heard of Tim Reese?" It suddenly struck him as entertaining. "It may not be any great figure in the dressmaking business, but heck—" he laughed, "I ought to be known around here at least."

Miss Major sat up quickly a sharp inquisitiveness lighting up the blandness of her face. "Are you a designer, Mr. Reese?"

"After a fashion. I designed that gown that won the award last night, although you'd never know it to read the papers this morning."

"Oh!" Miss Major stood up abruptly, her blandness gone. "You're you!"

"Yup. I'm me." Tim was amused.

"I'm very sorry, Mr. Reese." She was humbly apologetic. "I had no way of knowing who you were. Your name is never used here to my knowledge. Mr. Paul Panciera takes credit for all the designs."

A small smile of satisfaction came over her face. "In the trade we've always known Mr. Panciera would not be the designer of those creations that have made this house so successful, but we could never find out who the designer was. You were kept a great secret, Mr. Reese."

"Well, the secret is out." Tim chuckled. "And maybe Mr. Panciera is out."

Miss Major moved quickly back behind the desk, got out a pen and paper. "You spell that Tim Reese." She wrote it down carefully. "And your address, Mr. Reese—"

Muskrat Run Over In Campbellford Area

Trappers in this area report the muskrat run is about over. This is particular true of the southern portion of the district, and the majority of trappers are taking in their traps for the season.

Early reports seem to indicate that this year's catch will be considerably less than last season.

Morning Inspection

Cadets of the Campbellford High School will receive their annual inspection in the morning this year, instead of the afternoon or evening as has been the case in previous years.

Captain L. J. Hystop, who is attached to headquarters of the Eastern Ontario Area, Kingston, will be the inspecting officer. The date has been set at May 16. Both the boys' and girls' corps are spending considerable time in training to be ready for the big day.

Monte Carlo

By LAVONIA STOCKELBACH

Editor's Note: The author is making a tour of France, Italy, Greece and later British Isles and Ireland. Before her kindly consented to write of her impressions of which the article appearing today is the second. Many readers will recall Mrs. Stockelbach's special series, "Flutings in Erin," which appeared in the Ontario Intelligencer last spring.

Monaco — (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — In Monte Carlo there are no taxes and there are no legacies. We shall return later to those two interesting facts, but first let us visit the chapel of Monte Carlo's patron saint, St. Devote. It is a pleasant walk along the Mediterranean for about fifteen minutes from the gambling casino.

Here is another of the stories of the deity Christian martyrs about whom we hear so little. She lived in Corsica about the year 300, had been converted to the Christian faith and followed its most difficult rules with the greatest joy.

When the Roman Prefect made his customary visit to Corsica there were to be the usual sacrifices to the gods. When he was told about this young girl who had deserted the pagan cult he had her brought before him for investigation. She refused even to bow to the gods. She refused saying, "I despise your gods of wood and stone. They are only statues that see not and hear not."

The barbarous Roman Prefect had her stoned in the month for such heresy and cried out, "Do not thus blaspheme our divinities." Then he ordered her to be dragged, tied hand and foot, over the rough rocks of Corsica until she was dead and as she died a dove was seen to escape from her mouth and fly swiftly into the skies. Thus runs the legend.

Her body was ordered burned, says one tradition, another that it was to be left to the carrion crows, but her friends in the middle of the night, rescued it and having embalmed it, placed it on a ship to sail to North Africa where there were Christian settlements. But a great tempest arose — and the storms in the Mediterranean can be great — and the ship was driven north to what we know as Monte Carlo, Monaco — the nearest place supposed to have been founded by Hercules himself.

It took refuge in the cove where girls tortured body was buried and where now is built the very small church of St. Devote, surrounded on all sides, except that facing the seas, by high rocky cliffs where many little, graceful trees are growing and amongst them the bluest of blue-bells. Toward the top where there was a little more soil tremendous geraniums looked dazzling against the intense blue of the sky. Many of the leaves were edged with red, and when you think of the trouble you can have raising a few geraniums it is quite bewildering seeing them grow like this weeds.

As I entered, the sexton was sweeping the Church, a woman was praying at the Stations of the Cross. A western image of the young saint was on a glass-covered bier, a white dove resting on her, white roses across her brow and a dainty crown above. Dressed in white with one hand holding the dove, the other a palm leaf the image looked a lovely sleeping girl.

The sexton told me the story of a souvenir pave me some white daisies from a bouquet that someone had left nearby, and a copy of the prayer, which translated reads: "Saint of youth, saint of the sweet smile, made lovely by your martyrdom, make us love beauty, the beauty that blossoms not and forbiddingly pious saints that it is pleasant to dwell on this young girl, so pretty and so utterly fearless.

Those of you who are interested in stamps will be delighted to add to your collection, first the stamp that shows the saint laid in the grave of the ship, attended by friends, with a white dove flying aloft. A very special stamp and not expensive, I think, will be a smaller ones depicting each one of the incidents mentioned, the church, the rocky cove and the huge modern bridge in front, also the celebration in January of her festival, when the scene is re-enacted with much pomp and circumstances with the Prince of the Principality in attendance.

St. Devote is the patron saint of Monte Carlo but not, apparently, of the thousands of men and women from all over the world, who came here to gamble once in a rare while to win but, as I noticed, chiefly to lose. That is attested by the necessity of business or professional people, resident in Monte Carlo, are under order to get a special police permission to enter the gambling rooms.

This Casino is a company, with the Prince -- at this time Rainier the III -- being chief stockholder, so he does not have to gather taxes of any kind from his people for all expenses of the town, of his own palace and household. Everything for which taxes can be used, are paid for by the takings from the gamblers. And still they need more.

We have all heard of the beauty of the Riviera and the surrounding country but it is difficult to have words work properly to describe the charm of those stupendous peaks with tier on tier of houses the sun up to dinner.

The Casino's palace is built on the huge rock and inside is about as gorgeous and tiresome palaces usually are, though perhaps his personal quarters are cozy. His army now consists of 24 silent men.

All of Monte Carlo could be set down in Belleville and space left over. If only we could have the flowers and the palms.

In the Casino itself there are numbers of the most beautifully decorated rooms. The first of them being used by the people who play only for small stakes, and so called by the irreverent, the kitchen room. The entrance fee is small and can be had (on showing your passport) for a day or a week or longer. The entrance rooms called whimsically, the private rooms are more expensively and beautifully decorated and carpeted.

You can exchange your money for various kinds of chips — The lowest being 100 francs. A gentleman in his 300 to get a dollar. And all you have to do is to place these chips according to your whim, hunch, or system, or whatever superstition is down deep within you.

Nothing could be more quiet than the playing of these games. The remarkable how quiet. Some hundreds of people, seated or circulating.

Every little while employees come around with boxes to collect a percentage from each of the gaming tables. Money comes in quickly, but does not take much time for those marbles to stop spinning or the cards to turn. So quickly indeed that there is no time to count the money, it is just stuffed in handfuls into the box and the point of greatest interest was the fact that the collectors had no pockets to put money in their suits. A neat safeguard!

You watch people sometimes win, you watch them most frequently lose. There were hundreds of people, men and women old and young, very rich and very poor, shabbily or showily dressed, sitting waiting to see what their luck would be. The ex-queen of Spain was there one April day and was winning. She had just come from Switzerland, where she lives most of the time. She wore a tailored grey suit, a hat with a large bow ornament common in New York last year, and very few hawks. I hope she had a run of luck. She could use it. That evening she was in Prince Rainier's box for the performance of the London Ballet on the fifth of April. The theatre is small but a perfect gem, no balcony, no gallery, but floor sloping so that a good view of the stage could be had. The lounge outside was large enough for a satisfactory display of just the kind of gowns one expects to see for such a gala evening. The only really shabby person present was the Baron Maurice Rothschild, but he could afford to be shabby. He did really need a new hat.

The London Ballet was well received; the critique was a matter of diplomacy — "worthy of appreciation for its sincerity," "a luminous picture rejoicing the eyes." "The rigorous classicism of Alicia Markova" did not sound too enthusiastic but the reception by the audience was very much so.

It is said that a coffin is always kept ready in the Casino, that those who are found drowned are floated over to the French coast, for Monte Carlo is entirely surrounded by France except for the stretch of sea in front. Sometimes one side of the street is in one country, the other side in another. However it is considered very bad taste to shoot yourself openly and as there are no inquests it is not easy to prove anything by statistics. I only know that I saw millions of francs being lost and plenty of bargains at the jewellers who buy and put a notice in their windows to that effect, [illegible]. There are no pawnbrokers. You sell your jewels so that you can lose more money.

In the midst of all this discreet silence gay laughter could be heard from one of the rooms. "Oh that is the great American game," explained my acquaintance who was showing me around, I went over to the table. It was a game of craps and the laughter was justifiable, and American. Think of coming to Monte Carlo to play craps when they could as easily get into that game with any group of colored gamins.

But there is one place in Monte Carlo that must be the envy of the world. The museum formed by the grandfather of the present Prince Albert, who took a scientific interest in everything connected with the ocean. The collection is housed in a majestic building and the lecture room must be the most perfect in the world. You feel that you could sit happily listening to the longest scientific lecture ever delivered under such ideal conditions. Back of the lecturer's stage is an enormous sea-scape, just a quiet rippling sea, restful and cheerful. There is also a movie hall for the showing of scientific features, but the lecture hall is astonishing, amazing.

RELATIONS STRAINED

London, April 21 — (CP) — Relations between Labor Minister Aneurin Bevan and his Cabinet colleagues were believed once again strained.

The basis for the renewed discord was a bitter attack on the budget made by the socialist Journal Tribune, edited by Bevan's wife ,nd a friend.

Some members of parliament suggested Bevan may consider afresh whether he can remain a Cabinet member.

Unidentified Submarine Seen Off P.E.I.

Craft Seen Moving Mile off Coast For Brief Time

Naval Intelligence Officer At Halifax Investigates

Charlottetown, April 23 — (CP) — The Charlottetown Patriot reported in a newspage story that residents of Naufrage Harbor, on the eastern extremity of Prince Edward Island, today had described by telephone the sighting of an unidentified submarine which submerged after 30 minutes.

In Halifax a spokesman for the navy said a naval intelligence officer had left to investigate the reports. There would be no official word until the officer had returned to that base.

Since last July there have been reports of unidentified submarines sighted off the Maritime Coast and hints that the subs belonged to the Russian Navy.

Flew No Signals

The Patriot reported that it had talked with residents of the Naufrage Area. They described the submarine as moving in a westerly direction in about 12 fathoms of water and about a mile off the coast.

They could make out the conning tower and what appeared to be two upright masts along with a section of deck from 25 to 30 feet long. There were no identifying marks, nor was the sub flying any signals or pennants.

After remaining on the surface for about 20 minutes, the craft submerged and was not seen again.

The only submarine known to be in this area is the British undersea raider Thule which is now docked in Halifax after exercises in the Bay of Fundy.

Transit Strike Hits Industry And Business

Detroit, April 23 — (AP) — A crippling transit strike, apparently far from settlement despite all-night negotiations, hit hard today at Detroit's war industry and business.

Hitch-hiking and share-the-ride plans were in order for about 1,000,000 bus and streetcar riders.

The strike of 3,700 A.F.L. operators employed by the city-owned Department of Street Railways began early Saturday, but limited weekend factory operations held off its full impact until the Monday morning rush hour.

Mayor Albert E. Cobo and representatives of the union struck doggedly at a bargaining session started Sunday afternoon in an effort to resolve the wage dispute. But neither side showed much sign of compromise.

The union which at first demanded a 22-cent hourly pay boost, has cut its figure to 15 cents an hour. Cobo has said the city can pay no more than 10 cents.

Saturday night Cobo invoked Michigan's Hutchinson Act, forbidding strikes by public utilities employees, and fired all employees who had failed to report for work. However, it was not known exactly how many employees were affected by that order.

Present average pay for the bus and streetcar operators is $1.87½ an hour.

Argentina Will Resume Sending Meat to Britain

Buenos Aires, April 23 — (Reuters) — Argentina has promised to resume sending meat supplies to Britain in a new trade agreement announced today.

Details of the agreement, to be signed tonight, were not known immediately but it was learned Britain will get 230,000 tons of meat during the next 12 months.

Argentina stopped supplies last July when Britain refused to pay higher prices.

(Britons now are getting only 11 cents of fresh meat a week but the ration is due to go up next August to 22 cents worth.)

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 23 (CP)—Synopsis—Showers and thunderstorms in Southern Ontario and scattered points of Northern Ontario yesterday are centred over James Bay and continues moving northeastward. Light snow is still falling from Lake Superior northward, but skies have cleared over the remainder of the province.

Today and Tuesday will be sunny throughout Southern Ontario, with afternoon temperatures around 50 today and 60 tomorrow. Snow and strong winds will be general in Northern Ontario today, and continued cool weather with snowflurries is expected for tomorrow.

Shifting Ice Delays Start Of Dragging

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., April 23 (CP) —Rough water and shifting ice today delayed the start of dragging for the bodies of a fisherman and two men, all from the Sudbury area, believed to have been drowned in Lake Nipissing.

Mrs. George Cooper, 31, her brother-in-law, Alfred Barton, 32, and a friend, Milton O'Brien formerly of Vener, Ont., disappeared early Sunday while on a canoe trip to muskrat trapping grounds. Their overturned canoe was found late last night.

Provincial police stood by to start dragging the lake as soon as conditions permitted. Meanwhile they searched the shoreline in the hope the trio had managed to get to land.

Trying New Way to Treat 'Perforated' Ulcers of Stomach Without Surgery

BY FRANK CAREY

Washington, April 23 (AP) — The United States Navy is trying out a new way to treat "perforated" ulcers of the stomach or small intestine without surgery.

Instead of cutting into the abdomen and sewing up the hole in the stomach or intestine, they are draining these organs with a pump.

A rubber tube, attached to a suction pump, is inserted through the nose into the stomach and down into the small intestine.

The idea is that if the walls of the stomach or intestine are kept decompressed or virtually collapsed for a time, nature will seal the hole.

Doctors at the army's Walter Reed Hospital say that so far the technique looks promising.

But they emphasize that many more cases must be treated before a final evaluation can be made.

A perforated ulcer is one that erodes through the wall of the organ it attacks and about seven percent of all ulcers are of this type. But when perforation does occur it may be fatal. Bile, acid, stomach juices and other fluids and solids rush out through the hole into the abdominal cavity, causing the belly a rigid as a table top.

Until a few years ago, virtually all such cases were treated surgically.

About the only cases not treated surgically were those in which the perforation was known to have existed for at least 24 hours and the patient was apparently improving.

Sometimes when surgeons operated they found nature already had sealed the hole. Studies of that the operation was unnecessary.

Brig.-Gen. Sam F. Seeley, chief of the surgical service at Walter Reed now has collected information on 106 cases treated by this method. The death rate among the 106 cases was less than one percent— compared with death rates up to 18 percent among cases treated by surgery.

TRADE MINISTER WILSON TO RESIGN REPORTS STATE

Labor Minister Bevan Resigned on Sunday

London, April 23. (CP)—Informed sources said today Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, has resigned. These sources said official announcement of the resignation awaits formal notification of the King.

London April 23 (CP) —Aneurin Bevan said today he quit the Labor cabinet because Britain has been "dragged too far behind the wheels of American diplomacy." He is protesting arms expenditures in Britain's new budget.

Against the backdrop of a deepening crisis in Britain's Labor government, the fiery Welshman told the House of Commons that arms production in the United States will gobble up raw materials at such a rate that "the civilian economy of the western world outside America will be undermined."

Many officials and London newspapers reported unofficially that Harold Wilson, president of the board of trade, had also resigned, and that other junior ministers might follow.

Labor party circles believed that Prime Minister Attlee's shaky government might undergo defeat in the budget debate this week. This would bring on a general election. The conservatives delighted at the turn of events, predicted it would soon be back in power.

Protests Budget

Bevan resigned as Labor Minister in protest against the 1951-52 budget. He objected to cutting free medical services in favor of rearmament.

Taking advantage of the traditional opportunity for a cabinet minister to explain his resignation, Bevan asserted that Britain's three year £4,700,000,000 ($12,381,150,000) arms program "is already dead."

Wilson, failing to show up for the cabinet meeting at 10 Downing Street, went to his office in the Board of Trade. He had no comment on reports that he had resigned was:

"I have no statement to make."

Question Raised Out

After Bevan left the House Conservative Sir Waldron Smithers immediately asked the question which is on the minds of members on both sides of the Commons:

"Would it not be the duty of the government now to announce the date of the general election?"

Speaker Douglas Clifton Brown ruled the question out of order.

14 Per Cent Freight-Rate Increase Requested by Rails

Ottawa, April 23. (CP)—The railways today asked for a new freight-rate increase of 14 per cent—about $64,000,000 a year—but offered to ease its impact on shipments of some basic commodities.

The rate boost was sought from the Board of Transport Commissioners to cover the cost of a 40-hour work week starting June 1,—It also will cover higher material costs and some wage increases besides the one obtained by the main body of employees through last year's general strike. The carriers want it made effective June 1.

The railways proposed the main wage increase be met by a five-per-cent rate hoist—about $23,000,000 a year—which they asked last December and which now is under consideration by the board. They want the new increase in addition to that.

Today's proposal for lesser increases on primary goods would be the first implementation of any part of the report of the Royal Commission on Transportation, which more than a year ago recommended this measure in line with urgings from the Maritimes and the West.

Commodities exempted from the full effect of the proposed higher rates would be livestock, lumber, pulpwood, apples, sand, gravel and stone. Increases on them would be limited by distance-and-carload regulations regardless of how far they were hauled.

Double-Barrelled

Charges on coal and coke would be boosted between 10 and 30 cents a ton, but only in the percentage increase. This is in line with the railways' practice in recent rates cases.

The application of the Railway Association of Canada was a double-barrelled one, offering these alternatives:

1. A general 14-percent increase except for the 10-20-cent coal increase, following the old rate pattern.

2. A general 15-percent increase accompanied by the exceptions on basic commodities.

Basic Commodities Get Preferred Rate

Ottawa, April 23 — (CP) — Here is how the railways would exempt basic commodities from the full effects of a freight-rate increase they sought today:

Maximum increase on:

Lumber, six cents per 100 pounds.

Pulpwood, two cents per 100 pounds.

Fuelwood, two cents per 100 pounds.

Livestock (cattle, calves, hogs, sheep, lambs), nine cents per 100 pounds.

Fresh apples, 20 cents per 100 pounds.

Sand, gravel and stone, 20 cents a ton.

Rates on coal would be boosted by 10 cents on charges up to $1 per ton; 15 cents between $1 and $2, and 20 cents over $2.

The general increase would be pushed up a point to make up for what the carriers would drop on the basic goods.

This would indicate that, overall, the increase on the primary products would be about seven-percent less than on other types of traffic. This saving might run to between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 a year.

Effects of the second proposal it was expected would be felt most on long-haul shipments of the exempted articles. For instance, a lumber plant far livestock was shipped, the increase could not be more than 90 cents per 100 pounds.

Concurrent with the freight-rate application, the railways told the board they will apply for an increase in sleep.ig and parlor-car fares estimated to give an annual yield of $448,000 to the Canadian Pacific Railway—the line used by the board as the "yardstick" for railway rates in Canada. This application was not filed immediately.

Logger Held In Brutal Murder Of Young Woman

Vancouver, April 23 — (CP)— Police today held a 25-year-old logger for investigation in connection with the brutal murder of a 22-year-old girl in a Skid Row hotel here.

Police said Velma Louis died from body blows. She was beaten early Saturday and died in hospital Sunday.

Inspector Fred Dyke said: "She was quite definitely murdered."

Police quoted Leo Yin, operator of the East-End Hotel, as saying that the girl had come to his room a third-floor apartment with a logger for three months.

They quoted Yin as saying: "About 5 a.m. Saturday I heard a terrific noise from the third floor. I went up and told them that people should be asleep at such an hour. They said they'd quit. I saw the girl — she was all covered with blood."

Petain Reported Slightly Improved

Port Joinville, Ile D'Yeu, France, April 23 (AP)—The condition of former Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, gravely ill with pneumonia, was reported slightly improved today.

An official bulletin said the aged Petain—he will be 95 tomorrow—has taken some nourishment and is refusing artificial feeding for three days. The bulletin said the improvement in Petain's condition started last night and continued today.

He was stricken almost two weeks ago.

80 SQUARE BLOCKS OF DUBUQUE, IA., ARE UNDER WATER

Wisconsin, Minnesota Heavily Hit by Floods

Chicago, April 23 (AP) — The swollen Mississippi, on a spring-time spree, today plagued Iowa and Illinois towns along its upper reaches after heavy rainfall in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Eighty square blocks of Dubuque, Ia., were under water Sunday, as the big river crested at 22.7 feet to top the 1880 record of 21.5 feet.

Downstream from Dubuque, patrols labored through the night sandbagging dikes. Flood water surrounded Sabula, Ia., and authorities there said that if either of two dikes should give way, the town would be submerged by 12 feet of water.

The Mississippi is expected to crest at 19.5 feet at Sabula today.

Police Chief Ed Collins of Fulton, Ill., said there was "little chance of holding the dike south of Fulton." If it goes, 40 families will be forced from their homes.

Illinois communities on the river's bulging levees, Rock Island set up an are-shaped flood wall to protect the city of 49,000. Moline, Ill., 10 miles north, called for more men to help strengthen levees.

21.5 Foot Crest Expected

At Muscatine, Ia., is expecting a crest of 21.5 feet Wednesday. The water temporarily dropped .1 of a foot there Sunday after the Mississippi washed a 700-foot break in the levee at Port Louisa, Ia., sending water OUT acres of rich farmland and a government game refuge.

At Davenport, Ia., across the river from Rock Island, Ill., flood waters forced 1,200 persons from their homes.

In Wisconsin at Prairie Du Chien and La Crosse, the river was still plenty of water to cope with although the Mississippi crested last week. Red Cross officials said it will take up to two weeks to get all the refugees back into their homes.

St. Paul and Winona, Minn., turned to the tedious task of cleaning up. The inundation in the Minnesota area was the worst since before the turn of the century.

Bodies of Two Men Found Frozen to Death

Lamond, Alta., Apr. 23 (CP)— The bodies of two men missing since last Tuesday were found frozen to death near here yesterday.

They were identified as Robert Marquet, Special Areas Officer clerk at Lomond, and Lloyd J. Williams, Buffalo Range Rider.

The two men left on a fence-mending mission 12 miles north of here just prior to last Tuesday's unseasonable snowstorm.

Their horses returned to the stable without riders. Searchers found the bodies Sunday.

Two Brothers Guilty of 17 Rape Offences

Montreal, April 23. (CP)—Two brothers today pleaded guilty to a total of 17 rape offences.

The charges are part of a total of 48 brought against Rene Vaillant, 29, Montreal, and Ovila Vaillant, 27, of nearby Boucherville.

The remaining charges, involving conspiracy to commit rape and attempted rape and theft, will be dealt with Thursday.

Rene Vaillant pleaded guilty to seven charges of rape and four of attempted rape. Sentence was postponed.

U.N. Forces Pull Back 12 Miles On Central Front

Enemy Takes Terrific Punishment From Bombing

Tokyo, April 23 (AP) —United Nations troops pulled back as much as 12 miles under the impact of a major communist offensive which raged along 100 miles of the Korean front today.

In other sectors the allies stopped the reds cold. Where the allies withdrew it was in orderly fashion.

The communists, with nearly 700,000 men facing the front, launched their attack at 7:30 Sunday night behind their heaviest artillery barrage of the war. Their assault lasted in daylight Monday but was reviewed with fresh vigor Monday night.

One intelligence officer called the attack the red's "major effort." But another spokesman said Monday it's still too early to tell if it is the reds' long-expected big spring push.

Censorship Delays News

Close censorship delayed news of the offensive 14 1-2 hours. Then it permitted only a fragmentary picture of the battle. This was it:

The reds forced a crossing of the Imjin River along a 15-mile front in the west. They were checked by concentrated U.N. air and artillery fire. This crossing is 25 miles northwest to 30 miles north of Seoul, shell-shattered South Korean capital.

United Nations troops pulled back south of the Hantan River, in the adjoining sector to the east. They blew the bridges behind them.

The western front was strewn with bodies of thousands of Chinese.

All along the central front allied troops "rolled with the punch." They fought from new positions Monday night over a battlefield garishly - lighted by giant search lights, flood lights and flares dropped from planes.

Withdrawals Strengthen Line

(U.N. withdrawals below the Hantan and on the central front apparently were to strengthen the allied line. It budged northward at this point. Heaviest communist pressure was noted in this area.)

Allied forces stood firm on the east central front against red assaults through Sunday night and Monday after falling back a few miles.

On the extreme right the reds drove wedges into the defence line north of Inje.

Attacking reds took terrific punishment from U.N. air and artillery both blasting away around the clock. Allied fliers said they killed 1,800 reds Monday their biggest toll in 3 1-2 months.

Want to Buy a Village? One for Sale Lock, Stock and Barrel in Michigan

Nahma, Mich., April 23 (AP)— This village of 300 persons is for sale, lock stock and barrel.

It was founded 70 years ago by the Bay de Noquet Company, a lumbering firm. It is being sold because the company's available timber supply is exhausted. Lumbering operations will end about August 1 this year.

Company President Charles E. Gerard put the village on sale Monday. Included in the 4,300 acre town site are 102 houses, a general store, a company office building, a $100,000 civic centre, 10 miles of railroad track and equipment and an eight bed hospital.

"Nahma (pronounced Nay-Ma) has produced at least 1,500,000,000 board feet of timber within its own vicinity," Good said. "But . . . we have the problem of preventing the village from becoming a ghost town."

"We are in hopes of getting a factory to come in and employ our 250 workers who want to stay here with their families.

"It's a contented community and we don't find another industry to take over, it would make a wonderful summer resort."

The village has a beach which is three blocks from the business district. Wild life is abundant in the area, particularly deer. Chippewa and Potawatomi Indians live among in their own village of 25 homes.

The last boat load of lumber will be shipped from the docks shoved off last Saturday.

The fifteen-ownership of the village lives in company-owned houses. They pay rent ranging from $7 to $10 a month. Gerard said: "Some claiming dissatisfaction with this setup have left. Others can McTavish, Special music. All welcome. A31-36

Young Illiterate Half-Breed Held In Triple Slaying

Fort Resolution, N. W. T., April 23 — (CP) — A young illiterate half-breed trapper was arrested Saturday for the murder of an Indian woman and two of her children.

Twenty - three - year - old Victor Beaulieu as arraigned before Justice R. H. Bolton shortly after his arrest by RCMP but no plea was entered and the case was adjourned until next Saturday.

Beaulieu declared seriously throughout the preliminary proceedings but did not appear to grasp the full significance of the situation.

Victims of the triple slaying were Mrs. Mary Norn, 32, her 10-year-old daughter, Dorothy, and a son, Stanley, five. They were found shot to death in their tiny shack Wednesday.

A third child, a baby, was left by the killer to starve or freeze in the subzero cold. The infant now is recovering from pneumonia in hospital here.

Husband Suffers Relapse

Mr. Norn has been confined to hospital for the last six months with tuberculosis. He is reported to have suffered a relapse when informed of the killings.

The young Indian woman was shot in the face five times. Her half nude body was found lying in a pool of blood and evidence at the coroner's inquest indicated rape as a possible motive.

The children apparently were killed because they recognized the gunman.

The triple murder was not discovered by neighbors until Wednesday afternoon and they still believe the slayings took place before then. Drawn blinds failed to arouse suspicions of passers-by earlier.

Beaulieu was arrested by RCMP after a house-to-house check for the murder weapon. It is believed he was finally tracked down with a .22 rifle.

Fort Resolution is on the south shore of Great Slave Lake about 600 air miles north of Edmonton.

MUST STAND TRIAL

London, Ont., April 23 (CP) — Jack Pavlovich, 24, today was released from hospital Saturday to stand trial on a charge of murder.

The 41-year-old Caradoc township man is charged in the death of her husband, George, at their farm home January 21.

Post-mortem observation since March 27 Mrs. Lawrence was remanded in custody to April 25.

Defence counsel W. R. Poole indicated a further remand would be asked before preliminary hearing of the charge.

Busy Shoppers Pick Their Way Thru Broken Eggs

Unless a new breed of flying chicken has been developed, somebody dropped a dozen eggs on Front and Street late Saturday afternoon, and five-o'clock shoppers had a busy time picking their way through the pavement omelette.

The large yellow gobs of breakfast food were evident, not in one heap as though the bag had been dropped, but at intermittent periods suggesting the eggs had crashed one at a time.

In any event, occupants of parked cars had some interesting if humorous minutes, as busy shoppers picked their way gingerly through the mess, or the more indifferent ones plowed through, their shoes spattered a neat and gaudy yellow.

Heavy Rainfall Delays Work On Farm Land

Spring seeding in the Bay of Quinte district suffered a still further set-back over the weekend when nearly an inch of rain fell to make wet fields still wetter and muddier. Rainfall on Sunday was .68 inch.

Still very little seeding has been done in the area and this only on high and very light land. One or two farmers report having planted early potatoes, but in the main spring cultivation is still to get started and it is not expected that much seeding will now be done before May 2.

So far this month rainfall received in the Quinte area totals 2.81 inches. Average rainfall for April is but 2.7 inches.

Sunday Express Cudgels Britons About Princess

London, April 23 — (AP) — Chaplin — born Lord Beaverbrook's Sunday Express Sunday cudgelled Britons who grumble that Princess Elizabeth should stay home more with the kids. It said:

"Some or the squawkers croak that she should not have gone away and left her children. But they really believe that the Princess in a bad mother? For that is what they imply. And the allegation is atrocious."

The Princess has made four trips to visit husband Prince Philip — on duty with the Royal Navy at Malta. She's now in Italy with Philip since April 11 and is due back in London Tuesday.

Lt.-Angus Duffy A. and T. Officer For Hasty Pees

Former regimental sergeant major of the famous First Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Lieutenant Angus B. Duffy is back in the uniform in which he served so well in World War II.

Lieut. Duffy has been called out for three months in an administrative and training capacity with the Second Battalion "Hasty Pees" and is stationed at the headquarters of the regiment in the Church St. Armouries.

"Lack of an administration and training officer in the regiment for the past seven months and the subsequent piling up of administrative work was the reason he was called out," Mr. Duffy said. His present duties call for travelling to the various companies and platoons of the regiment located in various parts of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

Lieut. Duffy has resigned as Boy Scout Commissioner of the district, and an active part in the affairs of the Canadian Legion branch here, due to pressure of military duties. He is retaining his service station business on Front St.

"I fail," he said, "that these are perhaps dangerous times. One way to prevent war is to show a strong front to the enemy — which is up to those of us who have had the training to do what we can."

Prompt Action By Firemen Saves Building

Prompt work by members of the Belleville Fire Department saved the barn of Ralph Redner, Bedford, from fire early this morning as flames raced a nearby haystack.

Cause of the fire which destroyed the large henhouse, was undetermined, but the owner stated that electric wiring was thought responsible. There were no hens in the building but three ducks and two kittens were burned.

The henhouse, which was formerly used as a driveshed, was situated only about 20 feet from the barn and flames were blowing directly toward the larger building. Firemen concentrated their efforts on saving the barn and were successful in their efforts by keeping the side of the building continually wetted.

WIDOW AT FUNERAL OF ERNEST BEVIN

The bereaved widow of Ernest Bevin, former foreign secretary of Great Britain, is shown being helped by Mrs. Clement Attlee, wife of the British prime minister, as she left Golders Green crematorium following funeral services. Eyewitness Says A-Bomb Looks Much Like Large Hot Water Tank

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Apr. 23 (AP)—Look Magazine today publishes what it says is the first eye-witness description of the A-bomb.

This comes from Jim Berryman, Washington Star cartoonist and illustrator who Look says took an authorized flight in a B-50 carrying an A-bomb in a practice run. Look says the Air Force cleared the story and Berryman's drawings.

As he saw it the present A-bomb is shaped like a hot water tank. The bomb's length is about 20 feet, diameter 5 or 10 feet. Nose rounded. Tail slightly tapered, but stubby, and fitted with four wings. The bomb was not actually dropped, Berryman does not say whether it was really live, or only the dummy whose exterior is that of the A-bomb and whose weight and interior volume are the same.

Berryman says the weight is 10,000 pounds. This is much lighter than many of the unofficial estimates that have been published.

He quoted Maj.-Gen. Roscoe C. Wilson, Deputy Chief of Staff on Operations for Atomic Energy: "I believe it is high time some of the ridiculous stories circulated about the A-bomb be killed and buried once and for all. I've even heard that many of the thousands of American people fearfully believe that an enemy agent could board a Hoboken ferry toting the bomb in a zipper bag and blow Manhattan clear into Brooklyn."

Headquarters Co. Hasty Pees Hold Outdoor Scheme

Rainy inclement weather did not deter the Belleville headquarters company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from carrying out its training scheme Sunday.

Four officers and 25 other ranks under the command of Captain Ken Ross, second-in-command of the company travelled by military vehicles to Crystal Beach near Madoc where the scheme was fielded.

The cavalcade left the city at 8.30 Sunday morning braving the elements and despite the falling rain the tactic was carried out in its entirety. Field conditions, section training with the unit in attack featured the exercise, while despite weather conditions, was said to be a complete success.

The Hasty Pees put on a real taste of "army stuff" when they cooked their meals outdoors. During the manoeuvres and conditions not exactly conducive to outdoor training, the troops enjoyed the manoeuvres, with not a "beef" being registered.

Officers of the company who took part in the scheme were, besides Captain Ross, Captain John Field, Lieutenant R. J. Fisher and Second Lieutenant G. Harding.

JOB WITH HIGH INSURANCE RATES

Not the safest job in the world is that tackled by a group of divers, headed by Herbert Pipkorn, refugee from the Soviet zone of Germany, whom you see descending into a West Berlin lake to carry on the work of removing a cargo of phosphor bombs from a barge sent to the bottom there in 1945. The lake has been a danger spot since the barge and its lethal cargo went down. Part of the superstructure of the craft is in background with a death's head crudely painted on it to warn off the curious. — Central Press Canadian.

U.S. Steel 44 1-4

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 23 (CP)—A few strong spots kept the market ahead in afternoon trading on the stock exchange but the whole picture was one of mixed gains and losers.

Some steels were especially strong; others lost fractions. Ahead were Dominion Steel B, with an earlier $2.50 gain slashed to $2; Algoma up $1.75, Steel of Canada up 1 1-8 points.

Great Lakes was active among papers. It gained $2.50 to a new high of $49 but this was later shaded to $48.

In other sections Canada Cement gained $1.50, aluminum and asbestos each $1; while Canadian Marconi dropped 20 cents; CPR was up 1-2 but Bell Telephone and Brazil Traction ended off.

Gains, had a slight edge in base metals. Gainers included Golden Manitou, 65 cents; Quebec Manitou, 30 cents; Anacon, 14 cents and Mindamar, 10 cents.

Western oils were divided.

Golds saw little action. Teck Hughes dropped seven cents.

Boys Marooned All Night on River Island

Galt, April 23 (CP) — Sought all night by police, friends and neighbors, Billy Dennon, 13, and Wilbur Knowles, 13, were discovered early today marooned on an island in the Grand River a couple of miles from here.

They were discovered by Bob Gowing, their Sunday School teacher, who heard their shouts. Firemen rushed to the scene with a boat to effect the rescue.

The two boys discovered a boat along the shore Sunday afternoon and paddled out into the stream. The craft was caught in a fast current and overturned and the lads were dumped into about five feet of cold water.

When the current threatened to carry one lad who had grabbed the boat, down stream, the other boy pushed it toward the shore and the pair waded the rest of the way. Soaked and with a cold wind blowing, the marooned lads dug fox holes for protection. They were suffering from exposure when found but were soon in their beds and receiving hot refreshments from their happy mothers.

It is hoped to have the new addition ready for use by June 1st.

Will Track 'Ghosts' In British Commons

London (CP) — The government has promised an investigation into reports that "ghost voices" have been heard in the House of Commons.

A government spokesman gave this assurance when the matter was raised in the House by Major Tufton Beamish, Conservative member of parliament for Lewes, Sussex. Major Beamish said he doesn't frighten easily, but he had definitely heard ghostly voices in the new $2,000,000 ($6,000,000) chamber.

The voices, he said, seemed to come through the grill through which conditioned air passed into the chamber.

The government spokesman said engineers could offer no explanation, so an investigation would be made.

Dulles Ends Series of Talks With Japanese

Tokyo, April 23 (Reuters) — A projected United States - Japanese security agreement is expected to double American troops garrisoned in Japan, observers said tonight as presidential envoy John Foster Dulles left here for Washington.

Dulles ended a series of talks with Japanese leaders believed to have cleared the way for agreement on a peace treaty with Japan. It was reported he might visit Britain soon to discuss Anglo-American differences of opinion on the treaty draft.

It was understood the latest discussions here foresaw four U.S. divisions with strong air and sea support stationed in Japan — two more than have occupied the country since the close of the Korea.

The cost of maintaining such a force of about 120,000 men would be borne almost entirely by the United States.

CONSTABLE IMPROVED

THE INFLUENCE OF TELEVISION

The tremendous influence that television is having on the lives of people in the United States has been revealed twice within the past few weeks. The first time that an overwhelming vote of confidence was registered for video came when Senator Estes Kefauver took his crime investigators into New York. The television cameras followed them, and a nation sat entranced.

The second conquest of television over time, work, and other interests came last week, of course. When General Douglas MacArthur stood before a joint meeting of the Houses of the United States, all eyes in the nation, and indeed, quite a few in Canada, were cast towards Washington. In this country, only those living in cities bordering on the dividing line between Canada and the United States were able to watch a man often portrayed as America's greatest general speak his piece before the people's representatives.

There has been much comment in Canada on the effect television will have on the habits of video addicts. In the United States, where television has come to be the accepted thing in the living room, habits of a lifetime have been changed. The evening meal has been moved from the dining room to the parlor, where members of the family eat and watch at the same time. Many of them use chairs constructed in much the same manner as those used in high schools, with a large arm on one side. A dinner plate fits there very nicely, and the video watcher can watch his set without uncomfortable craning of the neck.

Educationists in Canada have warned that boys and girls will suffer when television becomes a reality in more areas in Canada. As yet, however, there have been no indications that children in TV areas at the present time are being affected unduly by the silver screen.

The same protest was raised about radio when the first crystal sets were made. It was claimed that the new invention would take up too much time, and would be a distraction to its owners. A few hardy souls even predicted that it would not last any length of time. Radio did stay, however, and went through a grand and glorious period when it was considered the final accomplishment in home entertainment. Lately, however, it has felt the pinch of video, and now it has reached the stage where one of the large networks in the United States has decreased its rates on advertising after one o'clock in the afternoon, because of television competition.

The novelty of TV in Canada, however, is indicated by the fact that metropolitan newspapers took pictures of MacArthur as he spoke, and spread them over their front and inside pages. For the majority of Canadians, nevertheless, it will be a case of "wait and see" as the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation awaits further developments in the field.

ETHIOPIA GETS INTO THE FIGHT

Thirteen hundred years is a long time for one nation to keep its troops within a continent while war raged around and about. The tradition of thirteen centuries is hard to fracture at any time, but when it means subjecting men of the nation to possible death, it is even harder.

Last week, more than one thousand troops left Ethiopia for Korea, and in so doing, broke a record. They were leaving to fight with other nations banded together in the fight against aggression in a war-torn republic. Well-trained, and hardened physically and mentally by life in Ethiopia, they were ready to fight in a situation not unlike that of 1935, when they themselves had to battle for their very lives.

At that time, it was the League of Nations, not the United Nations. And it was not Mao Tse-tung, but Mussolini. It was not communism, but fascism. Other than characters and qualities such as that, the problem bears faintly reminiscent qualities. In 1935, Ethiopia was being threatened by Mussolini, and she appealed to the League of Nations for help. The aid did not come, and the League, already foundering on the rocks of uncertainty, finally sunk, never to be recovered. The Ethiopian crisis dealt a death blow to the organization that might have prevented the Second World War, the following cold war, and the conflict in Korea.

The United Nations is in no way comparable in strength at this time to the League of Nations of 1935. Nevertheless, like any other organization, it must have support to live, and it, in turn, can give the world a chance to live. Ethiopia is not forgetting that she did not receive support in 1935, and rather than hold back, she has decided to send 1,153 officers and men into the fight. The men will be equipped with British rifles, fed on U.S. rations, and will fight in Korea. They were granted a special dispensation from their church to eat non-orthodox food. They will fight like the finely-trained guerrillas they are.

Other nations already in the fight may take heart from Ethiopia's move. She has signified that she is willing to fight for an organization not unlike one that failed her in the time of need.

BEAUTY LOVERS

You can mark the beauty lovers walking any little street.
There are curtains at the windows and the lawn is always neat.
There's a tree that's being cared for, and some tulips in the spring
And a mother and a father who look after everything.

Take any row of dwellings, size and cost about the same,
And a few are turning shabby, which I always think a shame.
But there's one that's newly painted, where the walk is daily swept Which proclaims that with devotion from decay its being kept.

There is bridal wreath in blossom, and some window boxes gay
With geraniums and fuchias that are watered every day.
And, though nothing's very costly, it has charm that plainly tells
It's a home in bleak surroundings where a beauty lover dwells.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FEEDERS OF CONFIDENCE

One of my twin boys, when very young, was operated upon for the removal of his appendix. The surgeon who did the job was a young man, but high in reputation. During the first night he kept in close touch with the hospital and called up several times to know how his "little patient" was getting on.

I remarked to the nurse in charge that this doctor took my fancy because of his great solicitude, but her reply was: "That doctor always worries about his patients." Well, I thought, when I get ill ,or a loved one of mine gets ill, I want the doctor to do the worrying! The doctor who takes an interest in his patient as though that person were his own blood is the one who forever creates confidence.

Any one of us who has ever been ill and had to have a physician can well testify to the value, or good will, of the one who attended us. Some doctors lift you in spirit the moment they enter the room. The confidence they create within one is their best medicine. Often it is the only medicine needed!

I was a great admirer of the late Gen. George Patton. He was a rough talking man at times, and his personal conduct got him into a little trouble, but he was so brave, so daring, so inspiring that his men would follow him anywhere. Continually he fed his boys confidence and imbued them within them a love of liberty and a love of country. Gen. MacArthur is the same stamp of man. He fed his aides, as well as his soldiers with confidence.

Without boast, I would like to state that the purpose of these brief talks, written for each day of the year, has always been to create confidence in those who read them, also to try and create hope anew, to share with others some of the joys and happy instances that have added to my own life. No one can live happily to himself alone.

All great leaders are feeders of confidence. That's what makes them leaders. When that ability to feed confidence withers away that one's influence is at an end. We like to have those about us who inspire us with confidence in ourselves, thus endowing us with the ability to inspire others.

KILLED EVERY INHABITANT

Taipeh, Formosa, April 23 (AP) — The Nationalist Defence Ministry said today Chinese reds killed every inhabitant — more than 1,300 men, women and children — of five villages near Chaoping in Kwangsi province after a clash with guerrillas April 9. The ministry said the reds wiped out the villages because they suspected the residents had some connection with the guerrillas.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

ROOM TO LIVE.

Ganges Harbor

There are some forward-looking people in these lovely green Georgia Gulf islands who predict that before the century runs out the islands will have become a kind of Riviera suburb to Vancouver and Victoria.

Even now it's as easy and as swift to commute from some of the island as it is from the outlying residential areas of the city. The small seaplane taking us back this afternoon (and we leave reluctantly) is in the air less than 20 minutes. It is truly an air "taxi."

We've met a half dozen semi-retired businessmen who visit their Vancouver offices once or twice a week and it may be that they're the forerunners of a type who will commute by plane each morning and night in the days to come.

Such idle speculation is greeted by the gulf islanders themselves with either anticipation or dread.

Those who have commercial interests in the islands naturally, encourage new population and speak with pride of "development." Others, who come here to find a retreat from civilization and who, in most cases, speak of their "discovery" of the island, view with alarm any crowding in their personal paradise.

Whether the isles ever become the city's bedroom or not, they are almost certain to build up a great deal. This is a wonderful place to live — certainly my own choice of any place I've seen — and more and more people are making that discovery every year.

Even now real estate is in brisk demand, not merely for the summer visitors, but the year-round residents and homes and waterfront acreage sell for high prices. You do not occupy your little bit of heaven without a little bit of hell in your bank book.

Plenty of Sun

What makes these parts so desirable? A great many things; and not the least is the feeling itself of living on an island, an illusion of being in a castle with a wide, salty moat around is as protection from the seamy old world across the river.

There is, too, the matter of climate. One of the delights of being an islander is to stand smugly in the sunshine and look across the gulf to the rain cloud and fog piling up over the turrets of Vancouver.

A kind of amiable rivalry exits among the islands on meteorological matters. Salt Spring Island, for example, claims an annual rainfall of less than 28 inches with an average winter temperature above 42 degrees and boasts the slogan "2000 hours of sunshine every year."

The folks on Galiano, to the east, claim a precipitation of 24 inches (or just about half of Vancouver's average) and in almost any weather passengers aboard the Princess Mary may observe by my good friend, Don New, the postmaster, meeting the boat in khaki shorts as living proof of the balmy climate in "the banana belt."

Right now the islanders are at least two weeks closer to summer than we on the mainland. The dogwoods are in full riotous bloom. The neat gardens are masses of color. But enough of these clinches! The whole place looks like fifty million bucks.

As for scenery, everything is a vista. Here the burnt-orange arbutus, grow in with the evergreens that march right down to the rock shore. A man might spend a lifetime exploring the coves and inlets and channels, the small knobs of island tufted with Douglas fir, the gentle bays with water so clear that purple rock cod may be seen two fathoms below your boat.

Through the woods deer wander and when the tide is out you may dig for clams or find yourself a pail of succulent oysters and live the life of a Swiss Family Robinson. Figs, grapes, melons, apricots and peaches grow on the slopes that give themselves to the sun. And everybody lives to be a hundred because it's just too nice to leave.

And People

Part of the islands' charm, as it is with any other place, is the kind of people you meet. There is a popular fallacy that the islands are inhabited entirely by retired British major-generals. This is not the case.

There are, of course, many settlers who came originally from the Old Country—the two leading families here at Ganges, for example, have their roots in Island and in Cornwall—and many of the residents cling to the dress and the manners of those other isles.

Yet, this in itself, adds a picturesque side to life and there is no snobbishness involved. The most formidable looking Britisher I encountered was the first to invite me out for a go at the trout in this island's St. Mary's Lake.

With everyone you meet there is a noticeable and contagious calm after the jitters of the city-dwellers. Life here is taken as seriously as it is anywhere else, but with deliberation and a wider perspective that seems possible in the shadow of the city.

Indeed you could look the world over and find nothing quite so ideal as these sparkling jewels across the horizon.

Letter to the Editor

DISCUSSES TAX RATE

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer:-

With your permission we would like to discuss a matter that is of importance to a particular portion of the population of the city of Belleville.

For some seven months beginning about the first of November 1950 the citizens of Belleville were repeatedly told that in 1951 the tax rate would be lower than it had been in 1950. In fact we believe that the raise in taxes in 1950 over 1949, which became a major election issue in December 1950 was in our opinion the means of ex-mayor Jack Allin being ousted from office at the end of one year, although he had by virtue of his office on Jan. 1st, 1950 inherited a huge deficit.

A few weeks ago big headlines in your paper acclaimed the Belleville tax rate to be 59 mills, one mill under that of the previous year. Recently upon receipt of our tax bills a portion of the landlord population of the city discovered that our taxes are even higher than in 1950 by some 3/10 of a mill, a total of 60.30 mills instead of 59 mills as has been so widely announced.

Upon inquiry at the treasurer's office we were told that a new city street flusher had been purchased and that cost of same had been charged against the citizens owning property along the streets, that were being flushed. This to us implies that such property owners are being asked to pay for the flushing of streets, which in all probability are more used by the people who make no contribution to the flusher than by many who are being required to help pay this expense. To us this is in principle the equivalent of saying that when some new piece of fire equipment is purchased for the benefit of the citizens the cost of such new equipment should be charged against the property owners who have fires and the others be exempt. Certain streets require flushing because they are the most used streets, ie, being main arteries that are used by practically all the citizens. Why shouldn't an individual owning property on a side street share proportionately in the cost of a flusher? In many cases he uses the streets that are flushed more than do the property owners living on these streets.

Why is this cost not itemized on the tax form? Instead it is put in with all other local improvement items. To us this policy is on a par with the turnover or hidden 3% tax being discussed at present by some of our governments.

We presume that in future an increased number of streets will require flushing and that may easily be at a time when the flusher has been paid for. When that date arrives will the flusher be used on the above streets or will it be regarded as the property of those property owners who have paid for it and reserved for their specific use? This to us is the only fair conclusion that anyone can reach. Whoever pays for the flusher ought to be allowed to own it and should be kept for their exclusive use. A system which we readily realize would lead to endless dissatisfaction.

To us it is very unfair and unjust that the cost of a street flusher should not be equally and proportionately shared by all property owners throughout the city.

We would like to have Mayor Potter and the members of his council who assured us that taxes would be at least a bit lower in 1951 explain the policy adopted to the satisfaction of the property owners who find their taxes higher instead of lower for 1951. We have no objection to higher taxes so long as that increase is democratically and equally shared.

FLESH SEWED BACK ON

Syracuse, Italy, April 23 (Reuters) — A 17-month-old girl who had a three inch piece of flesh pinned back to her leg after it was snicked off by broken glass will be well again in 10 days, doctors said. Lucia Siruge fell from her cot on a broken bottle, cutting the flesh from her calf. Her mother wrapped the flesh in a handkerchief and took it to the hospital with the baby. Doctors sewed it back on.

POST-OPERATIVE COMFORT

A month ago I was operated on for internal and external hemorrhoids by Dr. ———. Having read in your column that hemorrholdectomy is about the most painful operation one can undergo I went to the hospital expecting the most excruitiating pain. To my amazement I suffered no pain, none at all after the operation. I asked Dr. ——— why I had no pain. He explained that the operative area is injected with a slowly acting local anesthetic before the patient is taken from the operating room back to bed. For this I feel grateful to the doctors who developed and those who administer this comfort-giving technique. As a doctor you must admit that there are cases of hemorrhoids (piles) that require operation, even if injection treatment may suffice for some cases. I want to tell you that I suffered two years longer than I need have suffered, because your teachings made me afraid of the operation for hemorrhoids. The least you can do is apologize to the public and print the truth . . . (G. W.)

No apology. But I congratulate your doctor for his evident skill in the injection treatment. Incidentally I must say that your description of your experience ain't the way I hear it from the majority of correspondents who have been operated on. Most of them swear—or shall we say declare that they suffered more pain and distress in the days following the operation than they had ever suffered from the piles.

As a doctor I am well aware that external piles generally require operation and are not amenable to the injection treatment. However, a physician skilled in the injection method can treat some cases of external piles under local anesthesia in the office without obliging the patient to enter the hospital or to lose more than a few hours time from his or her ordinary work.

Even with the assurance that the surgeon has the skill to apply local anesthesia as successfully as it was used in the correspondent's case, there is still this great difference between the operation called hemorrhoidectomy and the office, ambulant or injection treatment, namely, that the latter method does not require hospitalization and does not detain the patient from ordinary work.

To be sure, the injection treatment takes longer—say a series of six or eight weekly or semi-weekly treatments — treatments which are painless if the doctor is really skilled in the injection technique — whereas the major operation may be finished in half an hour or so and the patient, if lucky, may get back home within the week.

Now, personally I don't mind undergoing a nice clean appendectomy or a cholecystectomy. but when it comes to the treatment of piles (hemorrhoids) I give you first priority on the operating room. Make mine the injection treatment, please.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Acne Cleared Up

Sent for your Acne pamphlet for my daughter, and it was wonderful the way the recipe cleared up her greasy skin, blackheads and pimples. Her very personality has improved greatly since her complexion became normal. She thinks you are . . . . (Mrs. M. R.)

Answer—Aw, I bet she says that about all the doctors. On written request (no clipping, please,) any reader who provides stamped self addressed envelope may have the pamphlet Acne—Blackheads and Pimples.

White of Egg

Is there any nourishment in the white of an egg? I dislike it and would like to take only the yolk. (H. F. M.)

Answer—Yes, about one-fifth as much as in the yolk.

Not So Fast

Is there any danger of cholesterol deposits in the arteries from eating eggs, milk and other foods containing cholesterol? If inosotol breaks down this fatty deposit, please state which foods contain inosotol—and don't holler "B-Complex" and leave the question to speculation. (M. W.)

Answer—Stick around—maybe we'll know something about it in the sweet by-and-by. At present it is all speculation. Richest sources of both cholesterol and inosotol are milk, egg yolk etc.—but don't you cry, Ma'am, for the science of nutrition is making great strides and eventually we'll catch up with the bright young people who write the articles for the magazines.

GROWTH OF HABIT

Some time ago we saw a motion picture of a natural aquarium on one of the islands in the West Indies. Fish, when they are small, can get through a certain little aperture which leads from the sea to the aquarium; but after the tourists have fed them for a few weeks, the fish are so large that they cannot get through that same opening. Then they have to stay. To keep the number from increasing too much, the larger fish are scooped out once in a while and hung up in the fish market.

A generation ago practically every college student was familiar with that famous chapter on habit found in William James' text book of psychology. The present generation knows very little about it. But it might be read with profit by every generation. It gives a vivid picture of how habit grows by feeding until we find ourselves at last prisoners and apparently unable to escape the disadvantage of our ways of life. Habit formations begin quite naturally and innocently. Like the little fish, we go through a small aperture in response to desire, and we cannot go out the same place we went in.

Many a man, like the poor fish, has found himself hung up in the fish market because of an easy, indulgent attitude toward life, which finally involved him in trouble.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Some hundred thousand or so of our fellow citizens who happen to be in their late teens and very early twenties are right now in need of our most sympathetic consideration. They are the university students and senior matriculation candidates for whom examinations are imminent, or have already started. No spring lamb, baaing out on a hillside, ever felt more forlorn than they.

Most of them put on a braver front than a spring lamb does. For the benefit of any of their teachers or professors, they encounter, as well as for their parents, they may adopt a confident and knowledgeable air, as they march towards the guillotine. But if you speak to them suddenly, catching them unaware, all they can say is baaa.

Many years ago, when I was a student, we formed an organization to agitate for examinations to be held in February, or March at the very latest. One of our planks was that every examination should be over and done with by March 21, the first day of Spring. We were humanitarians. It seemed to us a cruel and senseless practice deliberately to rob youth of four, five or six springs of their lives. There are only so many Aprils and Mays in a man's life. And they are never more precious than in the late teens and early twenties.

To submit the chosen youth of the nation to the exquisite torture of final swatting and examinations at the one time of year when the human mind is bewitched by the fairest goddess of them all, Persephone, seemed to our organization a wrong that should be righted.

I regret to say, we got nowhere. In fact, most of the members of the organization failed their year, and went to work in foundries, newspapers and sawmills.

And if we may say so, baaa to you, my dear sirs and demoiselles.

Newburgh Young People's Union Emerges Winner of Silver Cup At Recent Drama Festival

By LEO Ba... Press-Leader Staff Writer

Lasting entertainment was the keynote of the Newburgh Young People's Union "Drama Festival" at Tabernacle Church Hall, Sidney, on Friday. Frank R. Harbeck presiding, while Miss Jessie R. Mills, dean of women at Albert College, and head of Dramatics of Conservatory, Albert College, acted as adjudicator with the honors going to the cast of "In Doubt About Doris."

Three Unions entered the festival: Newburgh, Alma Hill and Tabernacle.

Between the presentation of the plays, Rosslyn Robertson and Ted Robbins entertained the audience.

Following the presentation of the play, Miss Tulle gave her criticisms of the three plays, which were greatly appreciated by the casts of the different Unions. She said that the casts were worthy of much better plays than those presented.

The cup was presented to Mrs. Frank Smith, director of the winning Y.P.U. When asked "How do you feel now that you have won the cup?", Mrs. Smith replied, "How could you feel if you won a cup the first time you entered into a dramatic festival?"

The scenery was under the direction of Earl Lashway, Don Clifton, Ross Mary Hunter, Mrs. Erwin and Lois Wood, who were neither sparing of time nor labor. Mrs. R. Young and Mrs. George Leavitt, had charge of the make-up.

Dainty refreshments were served by the Tabernacle Y.P.U. bringing the evening to a close.

Cast of characters in the play were as follows:

Mrs. Tolliver, Y.P.U. president, Mrs. Ralph Swan; Tim Mcsweeney, by Clarence Clapp; Mrs. Mcsweeney, Mrs. Reginald Badger; Mrs. Sweetly, Miss Swan; Mrs. Mcsweeney's son, Gerald Ronald Hutchison; Gertie Brass, Carol Ross; Mrs. Boggins, Beth Boggins; Willie, John Rudduck; and Gladys Charming, Flora Lavena. The director was Mrs. W. Clare.

Mrs. Myra Ketchson, Sidney, Celebrates 95th Birthday

"The way I feel this morning, I shall be here for a long time yet."

Her eyes twinkling, her face alight with happiness, Mrs. Myra Ketcheson hailed her 95th birthday with the above statement on Saturday.

Yesterday she sat in her comfortable chair in the Green Real Home, near Stirling, and chatted gaily with a representative of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Nearby a table was "covered" with greeting cards bearing congratulations from relatives and friends. Beautiful spring flowers and candy completed another lovely Prized Gifts

Among her prized birthday gifts was a small "plot" of pretty April blooms brought fresh from the woods by 13-year-old friend, Margaret McKee. Another was a letter, Mrs. Ketcheson received from a sister, Mrs. Fenny Robinson, of Vancouver, who recently celebrated her 101st birthday.

Time has been kind to this grand Hastings County lady. Her memory spelling disappears, belie her years.

"You can put my age down as 29, not 95," she quipped her eyes shining with merriment.

She has never worn eyeglasses. She reads the daily papers with interest. She had one small complaint regarding the Ontario Intelligencer. "Tell that cousin of mine down there that he does not put in enough news about the 'Fourth of Sidney'," she smiled. "That is the best part of Hastings County."

ON A DIET

My friends are living on a diet—
Of course you're asked to keep this quiet.
On orange juice they make a meal
And it again they hungry feel
They eat a satisfying gruel
And when again they hunger soon,
Of whole wheat bread they take a slice,
But shun a taste of pie and spice;
On vegetables and fruitless gloves
They feast, but hunger more and more;
Unrecognized by nearest kin
Behold they're growing slim and thin;
But oh! they say they're feeling fine
Regaining every youthful line!
Methinks I'll give a dinner party
Since my dear friends are not so hearty.

— Helen B. Anderson.

Life-Long Musician

Mrs. Ketcheson crochets with the dexterity of a lady half her age. The musician practically all her life, she still derives great pleasure from her daily playing of the organ in the Real Home. She travels up and down stairs with no assistance and still gets a great 'kick' out of life.

She is in excellent health and recently recovered from a "touch of the flu". It left no after-effects, and Mrs. Ketcheson was as bright and cheerful as the proverbial new penny, yesterday.

Descendant of two of the oldest Sidney Township families, Mrs. Ketcheson is the daughter of the late John Bogart Wood and Margaret Merritt. She has lived practically all her life in her native fourth concession.

Organist 50 Years

For over a half century she was the organist at the Stone Church in Sidney Township. Possessed of a retentive memory Mrs. Ketcheson recalls several incidents that happened when she was a young girl. She has never lost her ability as an interesting conversationalist.

Mrs. H. Honeychurch Addresses W. A.

Mrs. H. Honeychurch, of the Salvation Army, addressed the April meeting of the Holloway Street Women's Association on "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart and lean not to thine own understanding". Her address was well received by the ladies. Other members on the program were, a reading by Mrs. Robson, of Alvanley, and a solo by Miss Guest Comer; and a solo by Mrs. Rose Bell, entitled "Songs my Mother Used to Sing". Mrs. Bell was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Jack Grills. The program was planned by Mrs. Charles Ketcheson's group.

Previous to the program, there was a business session in charge of the president, Mrs. B. M. Moore. Mrs. Symons gave the secretary's report and Mrs. W. Pierce gave the treasurer's report. Good reports were heard from the various committees. The meeting of the Presbytery to be held in the church in May, was discussed and Mrs. W. Hall was appointed as delegate. On account of the convention, there will be no meeting of the W.A. during the month of May. A motion was carried that the W.A. meet again in November. A bale of clothing is being packed to be sent to Korea and it was decided a donation for this cause was asked to bring it to the June meeting. Mrs. Charles Ketcheson announced a rummage sale to be held in the City Hall shortly.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mrs. Ketcheson and her group served tea. Mrs. Robson, Alvanley, moved the thanks of the ladies to the committee for their splendid program.

BEAUTY

Give aid to beauty aids

Cosmetics are a blessing if the lines would be dull without them, but they cannot perform miracles. Powder puts the dull finish on the complexion; pretty blushes takes from the rampant pallor; the highlight; the lipstick serves, and that's just dandy. They boost feminine countenance unless the skin is in abnormal condition—texture fine, coloring attractive.

The condition of the skin and the manner in which the glands function, are affected by the general health, the state of the digestive machinery and that of other internal organs. If you do not drink enough water, your skin is likely to be dry. If you fail to get exercise out of doors, you will be pale. If your liver is acting up the skin may be a sallow that is not likely to make you happy or add to the sum total of pulchritude.

The complexion is sympathetic. Dietetic errors can cause blotches or eruptions. Overeating will make the complexion florid. Proper care of the facial covering consists in taking proper care of the body and in keeping it in tiptop form.

It is not necessary, my friend, to tell you what loss of sleep will do to appearance. After a restless night, the face, on arising, is a sight. Lack of sufficient sleep will make a woman look ten years older. The skin speeds up, causing a sense of fatigue and exhaustion. Digestive processes come to a halt. The liver becomes torpid and constipation takes a terrific beating. Many women fly off the handle because of the slightest irritation. In the course of time, frown lines appear and the countenance looks hard and brittle.

Cosmetics are a blessing.

We all seek peace of mind. Without it we cannot be happy. Without happiness we cannot be well.

"Worry affects the circulation, the skin, the glands, the whole nervous system and profoundly affects the health. I have never known a man who died of overwork, but many who died of worry."

Anxiety and worry are not the same thing. Anxiety, in times of trouble, we cannot avoid. But worry is fear that something terrible may happen. Many times worry does. The worrier pays with early wrinkles, grey hair, loss of youthful appearance.

For little girls who would be tall

The size of the bony frame of the body is inherited—not always from one's father or mother, but often from some more remote ancestor. If grannie is a cutie, a pint-size, granddaughter may also be of the tabloid class. Many characteristics have been known to skip a generation.

Tall teen-ager who isn't as tall as her classmates need not fret her heart out. If she is under eighteen, she still will have periods of growth. And she should not forget that most fellows prefer small girls to tall ones. Makes them feel big and strong and masterful when they are with them.

The size of one's bony framework is inherited

To encourage growth it is necessary to respect certain health laws. We realize that the subject of health is not particularly exciting to young girls, but it should be. They are keen about good appearance, and good appearance is not possible without health and vitality.

Nutrition is important. The growing girl needs more food than her mother does, no matter how active the mother may be. Daughter should drink a quart of rich milk a day to supply the calcium that is necessary for bone development. She needs proper proportions of protein, fats, sweets and starches. The diet should include meat, poultry, seafood, lots of vegetables, green salads, cheese, fruits and fruit juices. Orange or tomato juice will supply vitamin C necessary for good looking and for the health of the teeth.

There is the important matter of sleep during the growing and development phase. Eight or nine hours in a well-ventilated room is the ideal for a girl to be in condition to do her school work with a clear brain and to indulge in social affairs. Cutting down on sleep not only stunts growth, but it takes the starlight from the eyes, puts shadows under them, and also slows the step that should be light and alert.

There should be daily exercise or play out of doors, and certain amount of gym work. Strenuous exercise may overstrain the girl who is underweight or undernourished.

Incorrect posture makes a girl look shorter. Keep the head high, the back and backbone extended full length. Chest must be carried high to permit deep breathing and circulation brisk, to bring the red carnation bloom to her cheeks.

The out-of-style styles in clothes have much to do with one's apparent height. Avoid cross-lines as much as possible.

GREEK WOMEN VOTE FOR FIRST TIME

For the first time in the long history of Greece, women are having a voice in government as they cast their ballots in the municipal and communal elections held on April 15. These were the first such elections held since 1934 and the first in which women ever participated. The distaff side had separate polling booths. However, women in Greece still do not have the right to vote in parliamentary elections. — Central Press Canadian.

Bright Future Predicted For Child Pianist

Ottawa (CP) — Monica Chopin's name and Pierrette le Page's small face lights up like a beacon.

The 11-year-old miss, who tips the scales at around 60 pounds, played the piano well enough to win a silver trophy at Ottawa's recent musical festival.

Most of the other competitors were in their early or middle teens. But Pierrette was "way ahead of them with 180 marks for her playing of the First Movement of Mozart's D Minor Concerto — enough for the adjudicator to call her "child prodigy" and predict a brilliant career.

Pierrette moved here from Quebec City six months ago with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. le Page, and her four brothers and sisters.

The family lives in West Ottawa and with Spring just around the corner Pierrette's roller skates have become a fixture near the front door.

Enthusiastic Musician

But Pierrette is just as interested in Chopin as she's interested in skates—or even dolls.

Oh yes, she likes dolls, but mention of Chopin brings on the smiles. Then she nods her blonde head vigorously and heads for the piano, stacked high with music —to show the latest of his pieces she is learning.

Pierrette didn't have a great deal to say during a recent interview which was conducted chiefly in English. That was because French is her key language at the moment. However her mother says she knew it rapidly learning to read and speak English.

Mrs. le Page, who speaks fluently in both languages, says Pierrette makes the trip back to Quebec City every two weeks or so "for her music-lessons."

Those lessons, incidentally, are at Laval University, where milady —aged 11 — expects next year to take a degree in music.

MARRIAGES INCREASE

Dayton, April 23 — (AP) — Marriages in the United States increased last year for the first time since 1946, the Public Health Service said today. At the same time, divorces declined for the fourth consecutive year. There were 1,669,934 marriages, 5.7 per cent more than the 1,579,796 recorded in 1949. Divorces totalled an estimated 385,000, three per cent less than the 397,000 estimated in 1949.

Rehearsals are Under Way for Showboat Days

Rehearsals are progressing favorably for the sparkling musical comedy, "Showboat Days", being presented by Belleville Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs in the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium on the evenings of May 2, 3, 4.

Nightly, rehearsals are being carried out in the Canadian Legion Hall through the generosity of the management. George Zarfas, director of the show, told the Intelligencer that although rehearsals have only been underway for ten days, he is more than satisfied with the results.

The show has a cast of 100, including 40 in the dance sequences, 12 portraying the story and the remainder being members of the Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs who are taking part in the minstrel scene.

Story of the South

The story centres around the story of a southern showboat owner and the performers. Before the action of the play starts Jeff Dillard has fallen in love with Virginia Lee Stuart, daughter of an aristocratic family of the old south. He has been refused her hand, principally by her mother, who regards Jeff as a ne'er-do-well reputation. He has departed by showboat with the promise of both the girl and her father that if he does, the wedding will be arranged. After five years, absence, he returns to his home town the owner of one of the most popular showboats sailing down the river.

The action of the play begins at this time, which is laid approximately in 1880 in the old south and at a time when showboats were popular in all river towns. The showboat has arrived, the village is excited over the romantic aspect of the performance will be given that night. The wedding is still opposed by Mrs. Stuart despite the fact that Jeff is now wealthy. She writes a letter to the Sheriff of the town down the river where Jeff has lived for a short time and plans to stop the marriage with his information she expects to receive. In spite of her objections, the wedding plans go ahead Col. Andy Stuart feeling that since he is now able to support Virginia Lee it is only necessary to present a good show and Virginia is his.

In reporting on the Juvenile Court, Judge W. S. Lane said that there had been only one case of non-school attendance, a marked improvement over previous years.

Miss Anglin reported the Society as having a busy year.

There were 14 adoptions during the year, and all requests of this nature cannot be filled. She gave a review of the work done, and expressed thanks to individuals and organizations who had made donations.

William Lockyer, superintendent at Belleville, congratulated the local Society on its work.

Four New Stamps To be Issued Next September

Ottawa, April 23—(CP)—Canada's spectacular growth from a colony to a great trading nation will be depicted in four stamps to be issued next September.

The Post Office Department, releasing details of the issues Sunday, said they will commemorate the 100th anniversary of the transfer of postal administration from the British government to the then New World colony.

One of them will be a 15-cent stamp, carrying a miniature of the first issue of the colony, the three-penny "beaver" printed in 1851.

A four-cent stamp will show the wood burning steam engine in use 100 years ago, compared with the modern diesel.

A side-paddle steamship, plying the St. Lawrence before confederation, in contrast to the modern steam ship is displayed on a five-cent issue.

Finally the seven-cent issue will show an 1851 stagecoach, passing before a King Street hotel in Toronto, then called York, in contrast to a Canadian-built North Star aircraft now used to carry the mails.

WILD GEESE

When April comes with changing shade and size,
With misty meadows and with freshet streams,
We watch upon the air when day is done
A sound that stirs us from our Winter dreams.
It is the wild honk! honk! of migrant geese
Winging their way toward their Summer home
In the far north, where bestings wings shall cease
Weary with winging over land and foam.
We watch them in their cure, unerring flight
Upheld by innate faith and courage strong;
Undaunted by the coming of the night
They keep their course the boundless air along;
And oh! that we in life's long, toilsome way
Might prove as steadfast and as wise as they.

Toronto Leafs Win Fourth Stanley Cup in Five Years

Bashing Bill Barilko Scores Winning Goal Over Canadiens After 2.53 Minutes of Overtime

By FRASER MACDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 23 — (CP) — Bashing Bill Barilko's sweet-shooting hockey play produces far more penalties than goals. It ran true to form Saturday night when the blond defenceman got the referee's thumb twice and scored once.

But that one goal was the big one of the 1951 Stanley Cup finals. Tallied after two minutes and 53 seconds of sudden-death overtime, it sank Montreal Canadiens 3-2 and won for Toronto Maple Leafs their fourth cup title in five seasons and their sixth in 10.

It finished off a spine-tingling hockey finals of second-breaking series for extra play—each of the five games being settled in overtime. Leafs copped four, Canadiens one.

In the decisive game, a spectacular goaltending performance by little Jerry McNeil forced the Leafs to come from behind twice to tie the score. Both times Toronto's ace trigger man Ted Sloan, a 31-goal man during the regular season, pulled the string. His second goal broke the deadlock of time—32 seconds before the end of regulation playing time.

The 14,577 fans—a total of 200 of them standees—roared "we want the cup" after the second period. In a minute or so it was at centre ice and President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League presented the shining 58-year-old trophy to Ted Kennedy, Leaf captain.

Introduced Princess

Kennedy spoke a few words, then introduced coach Joe Primeau, first mentor to lead teams to junior Memorial, senior Allan and professional Stanley Cup championships.

The crowd shouted for veteran Turk Broda, the greatest playoff goalie of them all, who played two games against Canadiens and all of the games of the six-game semi-final against Boston Bruins because of an injury to Al Rollins. But Broda was too shy and fought off teammates who tried to drag him to the microphone.

While the Leafs were jubilant, the Canadiens, who put up a valiant battle, were downcast. They congratulated the winners on the ice and then moved quickly to their dressing-room. There the 146-pound Barilko was the biggest in the N. H. L. burst into tears.

The cool goalie turned in an unbelievable display of puck stopping. Once the fans roared their applause when he snatched a rifle-like slap shot from Barilko's stick through a crowd of players. He had 31 saves to his credit, 14 of them in the first period and 19 in the dazzling third session. His mates, a poor second when it came to territorial play, drove 19 at Rollins.

Finished Third in Loop

The Canadiens finished third in the league schedule, staging a late rush to win that spot and make sure of the Leafs they beat Detroit Red Wings, N. H. L. champions and 1950 cup veterans, 4-3 in the best-of-seven semi-final while the second-place Leafs eliminated the fourth-place, last-slot Finishers.

And almost until the third period ended Saturday night, it seemed almost certain that the final with the Leafs would go at least six games.

Rocket Richard had scored a brilliant goal—on a typical Richard picture play in the second period. Sloan replied with another sparkling tally, scored with the defenceman Bud MacPherson draped around him.

Magur Flying

Rookie Paul Meger slipped in the rebound of Doug Harvey's shot in the third period and that seemed to be it until the Leafs benched Rollins in the dying seconds for the extra fire power of a sixth attacker. That paid off with the second goal by Sloan spotted right beside the goal to flick the puck in.

The Leafs hit a hot attacking pace in the overtime and they didn't get untracked until after the two-minute mark, when wingers Howie Meeker and Harry Watson roared right in, only to have McNeil foil them. The puck rebounded to Barilko and this time his 15-foot slap shot—his specialty—whizzed into the net so quickly that McNeil hadn't a chance.

Player Breaks Leg

The Canadiens sent Bob Dawes, a former Leaf who had been used only sparingly in the cup playoffs, into regular action but lost him with a compound fracture of the right leg in the first minute of the second period. Dawes hit the boards when he missed a check he threw at Kennedy.

Gloom settled over the rink and cries of "No, no" rose when Kennedy hit the boards in the first minute of the game and . . . oldest the ice. He was carried off on a stretcher with a wrenched back. But he was back in a few minutes and his tenacious play was a solid factor in the victory.

The cup win was the seventh for Conn Smythe as manager of the Leafs. His team won in 1932, 1942 and 1945 before starting a three-year string in 1947. It tied him for Stanley Cup managing honors with Ottawa's Tommy Gorman whose seven over 27 years included three with the old Ottawa Senators, one with Chicago Black Hawks, one with Montreal Maroons and two with Canadiens.

Cleveland Barons Take Calder Cup From Pittsburgh

Cleveland, April 23 — (AP) — Cleveland Barons captured the Calder Cup and the American Hockey League championships by defeating Pittsburgh Hornets 3-1 in the seventh and deciding game of the final series before 9,589 Saturday night.

It was Cleveland's fifth playoff title since the coming of the league in 1936. The Barons led all the way.

Cleveland took a 1-0 lead in the first period when defenceman Phil Samis scored on a long pass from Eddie Olson.

The Barons added two more markers in the second period, one an unassisted goal by Les Douglas at 19:25; and the other a short shot by Ray Ceresino at 17:15.

Pittsburgh's lone score came at 17:50 of the final period, when Andy Bathe capitalized on the rebound of a shot by Tim Horton, Pittsburgh's young defence ace.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

New York, April 23 (AP) — One of the big events 24 years ago, when this writer was just breaking, was the first 14-foot pole vault by Sabin Carr. . . about that time track fans were speculating on the 4:10 mile, which Paavo Nurmi had narrowly missed. . . within a couple of years any good vaulter could beat 14 feet and in 1940 Dutch Warmerdam showed them how to go over 15. . . Last Saturday Nebraska's Don Cooper vaulted 15 1-8 and Illinois' Don Laz went 15 1 3-4 . . . Rev. Bob Richards topped the 15 foot mark during the winter, so it seems the ceiling is rising again. . . the millers, of course, stopped with Gunder Haegg's 4:01.4 in 1945 and there's no telling what the modern boys will establish. . . records in the book now are Jesse Owens' marks for 220 yards, 200 meters and the low hurdles, all set in 1935. Isn't it about time for someone to show they can be better?

Umps on the Jump

It was in a ball game in Arizona between the Williams Air Force base Jet Pilots and the Northern AFB Rockets from California this spring. . . a Williams runner, trying for the tying run, slid toward the plate. The catcher made a stab with the ball. The umpire said nothing. . . the runner already joined his mates on the bench when someone asked the ump: "Well?" . . . "He wasn't out," the arbiter explained, "because the catcher . . . didn't tag him. He wasn't safe either, because he didn't touch the plate. Gotta complete a play or we'll be here all night." The Jet Pilots rushed toward the plate en masse figuring the catcher might be confused and tag the wrong man, and the Rockets thinking the umpire was being attacked, rushed out ready for combat. . . somehow they got the whole thing settled without damage.

LEAFS COME THROUGH!

With Johnny Barilko firing home the "million-dollar" goal, Toronto Maple Leafs won their seventh Stanley Cup before an hysterical crowd in Toronto Saturday night. Records went by the boards inasmuch as every game in the five - game series went into overtime. Fiery Connie Smythe said it was "pure luck" but I suppose he knew just that much reserve power when the chips were down to roll home with the bacon on four different occasions. It was a great night for the Leafs and their supporters, and a gallant Canadien team went home defeated but far from disgraced.

THAT MAN AGAIN!

Well, well, look who's here to start off the 1951 wrestling season. None other than our old friend, Lee (The Leer) Henning, that old roughie toughie who will face the handsome, debonair British society ring idol Leroy (Mr. Smooth) Layton. The tall artiller was introduced from the Belleville ring last season but Friday will be his first appearance. He has been making quite a name for himself in various rings of the district and has his sights lined on the British Empire championship. The Indian sensation Chief Sunl War Cloud, a full-blooded redskin will appear in the semi-final against the man mountain, Whitehead (Big Bill) Egan. In the preliminary, dashing Tommy O'Toole, a touch lrisher will face Sammy Kurgis, another newcomer to Belleville fandom. The bouts get under way in Memorial Arena at 8:45 Friday night.

UP THE GUNNERS!

Enter the Gunners. Not the famous Arsenal of Woolwich, but a gallant gang of lanyard - pullers from the Royal Canadian School of Artillery, Picton, whose colors will be displayed in the Bay of Quinte Football League this season.

So President Les Digby tells us. And he should know for he attended a fine meeting over on Doddsville the other night when the gunners organized their soccer activities for the season.

It seems that the gunners may have service commitments this year, and accordingly they refrained from taking part in the Eastern Ontario Football League. Says Les: — "Regimental Sergeant Major Jones, who is spark-plugging the gunner entry, appears to have some outstanding fitter talent and, the "oblique, que fas et gesta dicunt" laddies should give the rest of the teams some stiff competition." They probably will associate with the EOFL next year, if Joe keeps his nose clean.

Belleville will be represented by two teams this year, said Digby. Both will be sponsored by the Northern Electric Company, with one team entering the Eastern Ontario loop and both playing in the Bay of Quinte League. One will wear the colors of the N. E. and the other those of the Army, Navy, Air Force Veterans in Canada.

* * *

With the Picton entry assured, said Prexy Digby, there definitely will be six teams in the Bay of Quinte loop. These are N. Electric; ANAF of Belleville; Trenton Merchants Batawa; No. 6 Repair Depot RCAF at Trenton; No. 2 Repair Depot, Kingston. There will be a combined air force entry with Group Captain Stan. Greene's boys being augmented with those of the "south station".

* * *

In the Eastern Ontario circuit, Ottawa Combined Services have withdrawn and will operate in the Ottawa District League. However, Ottawa will face the barrier comes opening day and these include Peterborough United which has taken over the UEW franchise, and also O'Hallorans from Peterborough, Batawa, No. 6 Repair Depot, Kingston United, Belleville Northern Electrics, Brockville and Vimy Signals.

Stiff competition for all entries is predicted by President Digby in both leagues. The Bay of Quinte League games will be mid-week affairs while the Eastern loop squads will meet on Saturday afternoons, thus eliminating conflict of fixtures. The schedules will be drawn up in the near future with play starting during the first week in May.

While on the subject of soccer, Glasgow Celtic won the Scottish League Cup on Saturday with a 1-0 win over Motherwell before 134,000 cheering fans. The Glaswegians now cross the Atlantic for a nine-game tour in the United States and Canada. The club goes to Philadelphia on June 3 and will appear in Toronto June 5 and 18, and in Montreal, on June 26.

COLLINGWOOD TIES SERIES

Fort Erie, April 23—(CP)—Collingwood Shipbuilders came from behind Saturday night to defeat Fort Erie Chevs 7-5 and tie the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association intermediate A semi-final 2-2.

Cochrane and Wheeler scored two each and Sandell, Merrill and Barrett singletons for Collingwood. Benner counted twice for Fort Erie, with Zimmerman, McReynolds and McMahon accounting for the others.

Cup Presented By President After Contest

Toronto, April 23—(CP)—A lot of boys became men Saturday night, and their birthday present was the Stanley Cup.

And to cap the last October Conn Smythe, general manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs, said the team's playoff chances depended on how many boys became men.

The "boys" were Leaf squad's youngsters, fellows like goalie Al Rollins and forwards Fleming Mackell, Danny Lewicki and Ted Sloan and a few others.

They came of age with Saturday's nail-clinching overtime victory over Montreal Canadiens.

Even the veterans pranced like colts when defenceman Bill Barilko's sudden goal gave Leafs their fourth hockey crown in five years. They dropped their sticks and let loose with a community hugging and back-slapping display.

The Stanley Cup was presented by Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League in a centre-ice ceremony right after the game.

Reporters, photographers, news reel and cameramen and well-wishers flooded into the dressing room.

Luck of the Irish

Over in a corner Conn Smythe telling reporters that the luck of the Irish was with his team. That was the difference.

"We just 'out-Irished' Canadiens in this series," he said. Just then an attendant handed him a telegram of congratulations from Father H. Murphy.

"Jeepers, what did I tell you!" Smythe laughed. "More Irish luck."

There was no laughter in Canadiens' dressing-room across the corridor.

The Montrealers took their defeat hard.

Gerry McNeil, their rookie goaltender who was a star throughout the series, was unashamedly crying. He shook his big leg pads.

However, he still had cause for celebration: his wife presented him with a baby daughter in Montreal a few hours earlier.

Coach Dick Irvin, usually a fast man with a quote for newspaper men, was downcast. He shook his head in answer to all questions and slipped out of the room quietly.

Brooklyn's Charlie Dressen Steals Durocher's Thunder In 3-Game Sweep Over Giants

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

You couldn't blame Leo Durocher for talking to himself today. The wonder is that the loquacious leader of New York Giants has any speech left at all.

The way that Durocher came off second best in the season's first battle of wits with Charlie Dressen, his former first lieutenant at Brooklyn, is putting it mildly. The new Dodger pilot outmaneuvered and outgeneraled Leo at every turn during the week-end as the Brooks vanquished the Giants three straight at the Polo Grounds.

The most humiliating blow came yesterday when the Dodgers snatched a thrilling victory from apparent certain defeat to whip the Giants 6-5 in 10 innings.

Sid Hudle, the veteran Giant righthander, needed only one more strike to record his first victory of the season. He had a 2-2 count on Gil Hodges.

The third strike never came. Instead Hodges walked, moved to second on Roy Campanella's single and scored the tying run on a one-bagger by Pee Wee Reese. Carl Furillo's homer decided the issue in the top of the 10th.

Big Don Newcombe, who whipped the Giants with a five hitter Friday relieved in the eighth and buried three hitless runners tallies to chalk up his second victory.

Dodgers Now First

The triumph left the Dodgers in first place in the National League, half a game in front of Pittsburgh and Chicago. The Pirates defeated the Reds in Cincinnati 7-3 and the Cubs tripped the Cards 10-5 in St. Louis. Philadelphia's Phils salvaged the last of a three game series with Boston, by winning an opener 5-4.

Cleveland forged into the American League lead, sweeping both ends of a home doubleheader from St. Louis Browns 10-9 and 4-3. The Indians now have won five of six to hold a half-game edge over Washington and Chicago. While Early Rain washed out the scheduled game between the Senators and New York Yankees. The White Sox edged Detroit Tigers 3-2 in Chicago.

Boston Red Sox won two games from Philadelphia Athletics 6-5 and 7-4 at Fenway Park.

Ted Sell smacked a homer, three doubles and a single to lead the Pirates to victory. However it took two ninth-inning errors by Cincinnati to give Pittsburgh its tie breaking runs. Sell's four-base hits tied a modern National League mark. Lou Boudreau, then with Cleveland, holds the modern major-league record with five.

Fain Hits Two Homers

Andy Pafko hit two homers and drove in five runs to pace the Cubs over St. Louis.

Willie Jones, who had homered with one on in the eighth, slammed a bases-loaded single in the last of the ninth to give the Phils a victory over the Braves. Winner Bubba Church went all the way to beat Johnny Sain.

Early Wynn and Mike Garcia went the route in the Indians' double victory over the Browns. Wynn smacked two doubles in the opener. Garcia also got two hits and drove in what proved to be the winning run in the nightcap.

Ted Williams' homer and Mel Parnell's 7-hit pitching helped win the opener for the Red Sox.

Six-Team Loop In Major Series May be Outcome

Toronto, April 23 — (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association senior series may operate as a six-team league with an international touch next season.

After a weekend meeting here it was learned that at least seven clubs have shown interest in entering the league, a four - team affair this season with two teams from Toronto and one each from Kitchener - Waterloo and Hamilton.

Most likely makeup for next season would be one team from Toronto, Kitchener - Waterloo, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Ont., Kingston, and Syracuse, N.Y.

Mercurys Win Eastern Allan Cup Finals

Jonquière, Que., April 22—(CP)—One of the good chances of coming [illegible] more of Canada's top hockey trophies, besides the Stanley Cup. And the province is certain to take the Allan Cup.

That came about when Owen Sound Mercurys won the eastern Allan Cup finals here Sunday, 5-1 in games. They go against Fort Frances Canadians, Algoma Ontario club representing the west, in the finals.

With the Allan Cup a certainty, all that is needed is a victory for Barrie Flyers in the eastern and dominion Memorial Cup series to give Ontario a major sweep of hockey awards this season.

Owen sound hesitated only once in their drive to the Allan Cup finals which open at Owen Sound Thursday. With two games under their belts against Dolbeau Castors in the eastern final, Mercurys dropped the third game Saturday night.

But it took them only two periods of hockey Monday to push Castors out of the Allan Cup picture. Castors tallied twice in the first frame and Mercs held them scoreless the rest of the session to come out with a 5-2 victory.

Castors Open Scoring

St. Jean opened the scoring for Dolbeau at 1:11 of the first frame. For awhile it appeared that they would repeat Saturday's slambang game in which they shellacked Owen Sound 10-5. But they just couldn't keep up the head of steam.

Mercs came through with a marker on a solo play by Hayward at 4:32. Gillespie made it one up at 9:35 with Buckacski and McCready figuring in the play.

Fillion netted what turned out to be Dolbeau's last marker of the season with only eight seconds left to go in the third period.

After that it was Mercs' game, or rather Forslund's game. He slammed one in early in the second period on assists from Allum and Burlington, the goal that proved to be the clincher.

Just to wrap it up neatly he slammed in another at 11:47 of the third on an assist from Ingoldsby and at 12:13 he made a solo, end-to-end rush to net his third marker.

Guelph Leafs Will Play in IC This Season

Guelph, April 23 — (CP) — Guelph Maple Leafs will be back in the Intercounty Baseball League this season.

Doubts that they would field a team were dispelled Sunday when it was announced that Leafs would be reorganized with Frank Gnup, better known as a football player and coach, as general manager.

Gnup, who played briefly and helped as coach with the Dominion champion Toronto Argonauts last fall, hopes to line up a complete team this week with the help of Gus Murray he gave up the Guelph franchise last week.

Gnup has purchased a 25-per-cent interest in the club and may act as field manager with Oscar Judd, ex-big league pitcher from Ingersoll, Ont., as player or assistant coach.

Rain and Cold Weather Puts Crimp in Schedule

(By The Associated Press)

It was a day of rain, cold and errors in the International League yesterday.

Three scheduled doubleheaders were postponed because of rain. In the only game played, Buffalo Bisons downed Springfield Cubs 8-6 with the aid of eight Springfield errors.

The Bisons took the lead for keeps with two runs in the third inning. The Cubs threatened in the seventh, scoring three runs and loading the bases before veteran Alex Carrasquel put out the fire.

Doubleheaders postponed were Montreal at Rochester, Toronto at Syracuse and Ottawa at Baltimore.

SET RECORD FOR EXECUTIONS

Hong Kong, Apr. 23 (AP) — Reports from Red China said the communists set a record April 9 by executing 113 persons at one times at Wuchon. As far as was known here, the largest number of victims in any previous mass execution was 29. Those purged April 9 were mostly former nationalists and government employees suspected of being anti-communist agents.

Goal Difference In Three Games Between Teams

Sydney, N.S., April 23 (CP)—There has only been a goal difference between Sydney Millionaires and Valleyfield Braves in each of their three playoff games so far—which is proof enough that their best-of-seven Alexander Cup hockey series is still a toss-up.

All the three games have ended 3-2 and in the latest tilt Sydney came out on top to take a 2-1 lead. Valleyfield won the first game Wednesday night with a last-minute surge that netted them the winning goal.

Thursday night they almost won again when they scored two goals after Sydney was coasting on a 3-0 lead. However, the Maritime champions held on to tie the series.

The Millionaires, leading the series for the first time as a result of third game, are in the driver's seat as the scene shifts to Montreal for the remaining games. The fourth match was scheduled for tonight but George Slater, president of the Quebec senior league, announced last night it would be played tomorrow night instead.

Millionaires Saturday night built a 3-0 lead on goals by Bill Cipolo and Ron Matthews but Rosaire (Kitoute) Jeanette scored for Braves halfway through the second period and Andre Corriveau netted the equalizer early in the final frame.

Then Sydney turned the tables. The Quebec champs are known for their finishing power, but in the last few minutes of play Millionaires held them down long enough for Don (Whip) Whalen to beat goalie Paul Leclerc at 18.03 with the winner.

The fifth game will be played Thursday at Montreal, as will a the sixth, April 26 and the seventh, April 28.

DIES IN ELTCTRIC CHAIR

Bellefonte, Pa., April 23 (AP)—Edward L. Gibbs, 26, died in the electric chair at Rockview prison today for the slaying of a girl typist. Gibbs was convicted of murder for the killing of Marian Louise Baker, 21, who was beaten to death with a wrench. Gibbs admitted the slaying.

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A bridge convention is no mononaniac. It usually conveys more than one bit of unusual advice. Such is the case with an limmediate overcall in an opponent suit.

If your opponent bids a suit and you bid the same suit it is an overcall in opponent suit. Its primary purpose is to tell your partner you have a game of some kind in your hand.

But this is not all it says. Another thing it tells partner is that you will lose no tricks in that suit. It is a guarantee that opponents will not take any tricks in the suit they have bid.

Such an overcall needs no help from partner to make a game. But it does need help from partner in deciding the best trump suit for the game. And it may even make a slam if partner is no dud.

Therefore, partner dare not pass such a bid. He is required to show what values his hand may possess. Lacking any values he is still required to keep the bidding alive until game.

You have the west hand shown here:

♠ A K 8 5 3
♥ None
♦ K Q J 4
♣ A Q 9 6

Suppose south opens with a bid of one heart. Do not bid your spades or diamonds or clubs first. Say two hearts immediately.

It says: "Partner, we have a game in something which we can decide later and you may depend on it that the opponents will not take any tricks in their heart suit."

Such a hand is bound to be powerful with most of its strength in three suits or two suits. Because, with, no losers in opponent suit, it is either void or with a lone ace in their suit.

See the advantage of such a signal? Partner can confidently exchange advices until game is reached. He need have no worries in the opponent bid suit. He may even see a slam.

The more you know, the less you blow.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 23 (AP) — Are you a member of that sometimes-abused minority of left-handers? If so, you have a champion in Cary Grant.

This came up as I was watching Grant conduct a symphony orchestra for a scene in "The Dreatorius Story." The southpaw actor was wielding the baton with his right hand. I asked him about this when he came out of the scene.

"I spent hours learning how to lead with my right hand," he complained. "Why? Because movie fans would think something was strange about somebody leading an orchestra with his left hand. Now isn't that ridiculous?

"In 'The Bishop's Wife' I had to play the harp right-handed."

Lot of Problems

Grant, as all southpaws, must make adjustments in living in a right-handed world. School desks machines, automobiles, army supplies and athletic equipment are usually designed for right-hand convenience.

Except for learning such things as conducting and playing harps, Grant actually doesn't suffer too much as a southpaw. He can perform normal functions with either hand. He uses the left or right to sign his name, although he can throw a ball only with his left. This doesn't seem too serious. How much ball-throwing does he do in a normal week?

Many Broadway personalities make a popular pastime of scoffing at Hollywood acting. Helen Hayes has served notice that she will not join the game.

Miss Hayes is playing in "My Son John," her first film in 16 years. She emphasizes that she didn't desert the medium because of disrespect for the movies. She always said she would return to the films as a character actress.

New Appreciation

The actress said the experience of doing a picture again has renewed her appreciation of movie acting.

"I must say that I don't sympathize with those Broadway people who condemn all film acting," she remarked. "Film actors are faced with hard work and the difficulty of sustaining a performance over a period of time and of coping with a mechanical medium.

"If actors can do that and still provide acting jobs that move me, they've got to be good . . ."

Turn About

West-coast theatre men this week got a hint of what the television sessions of the Senate Crime Committee did to movie business in the east. This time the cause was the arrival in San Francisco of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, which was carried by all of California's 11 television stations.

One trade paper headlined "MacArthur Video KO's L. A. (B. O." (box office). The story reported slumps of 10 to 25 per cent in theatre business.

LEFT TWO - YEAR BAN

London, April 23 — (AP) — London police will lift a two-year ban against political processions, enabling London trade unionists to stage their first May Day parade since 1949. The ban was slapped on following disturbances earlier that year during a march by members of Sir Oswald Mosley's pro-fascist "Union Movement."

June 22 to July 22—(Cancer) Time rays for worthy tyre today. You have, to match wit, ability that remembers, but that should be no bother. Be direct, sincere and not overcreative. Smile it best way.

July 24 to August 22—(Leo) You are in a fortunate seat with today's aspects. Make good use of assets, don't upset day by rash or brusqueness. Don't forget tact, personal manners in order to succeed.

August 23 to September 22—(Virgo) Benefic rays emanate early before 2 p.m., so get your best "licks" early and you will have easier going. Progressive, confidential and money matters show good possibilities.

September 24 to October 23—(Libra)—Business and financial undertakings may expect harbor lights in early hours. Double your tact and counteract difficulties. Follow up substantial leads; there always a way.

October 24 to November 22—(Scorpio)—Industries, banking, military matters need full scale careful attention. Come issue talities. Help overcome subversive influences. Analyze thoughts; condemn careless speech.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Check your financial activities better; thoroughly investigate first to proceed with less risk in anything. Not an any day, perhaps but one that has interest, action, challenge.

January 22 to February 20—(Aquarius)—Personal possible attainment if you will not neglect the vital little matters, finer points. Be ambitious, calmly aspirate and there should be little else to desire for today's success.

You Born Today—are under Aries, indicating leadership aptitude, grit, high intelligence. At times aggressive, too quick in decisions and rather hard to convince you are wrong. Overcome these failings and you can do great things in the business, professional, domestic or any world. Hold yourself in check, be a good listener as well as good talker. Many famous people of Big Sign. Rightly educated, you make fine friends, likewise able businessman, artist, religious. The happy medium best. Birthdate of: Anthony Trollope, Eng. novelist.

Seventeen persons died violent deaths in Eastern Canada during the weekend. Two died in Ontario, four in New Brunswick and three in Nova Scotia.

Automobile accidents took the lives of seven persons, four were drowned, two died from falls, one was burned to death and a baby girl suffocated.

Mrs. George Cooper, of Gerson, Ont., Alfred Barton of Sudbury and Milton O'Brien, of Verner, Ont., are believed to have been drowned during a storm on the Nipissing early Sunday. Their overturned canoe was discovered by police Sunday night. Beside it was a cap identified as belonging to O'Brien.

The season's first fishing fatality at Hillsdale, Ont., was that of Gordon J. Anderson, 38, his boat overturned in Peter's Lake and he was drowned while on the first cast of shore.

Lloyd Parks, 12, drowned Sunday in an unsuccessful attempt to save his eight-year-old sister, Sandra, from the Miramichi river near Fort Lawrence, N.S., They were the only children of Mrs. and Mr. Parks, a widower.

Car accidents also took the lives of two Ontario children Saturday. Gordon Frost, 2, of Niagara Falls, died after being run over by a truck near his home, and seven-year-old Billy Baker, of Owen Sound, was killed when struck by a car while playing on the highway.

A truck driver, Lorenzo Lessard, 23, of Val Gagne burned to death during the crash of his transport truck which apparently left the road, turned over and caught fire near Timmins.

John Majarnic, 54, of Hamilton, died Saturday when his car turned over about a block from his home. He is believed to have had a heart seizure while driving.

In Kitchener, Jane Frances Lockenbauer, 12 months, was found dead in her bed Saturday. She apparently suffocated when she turned over on her face during the night.

Prime Minister Nehru Favors Birth Control

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

A strange paradox lies behind the whole-hearted support India's Prime Minister Nehru that his favors birth control to curb his country's growing population and help solve the food crisis.

India's population is 362,000,000 and it is increasing at the rate of 4,000,000 yearly. Nehru says that in the famine areas at least 25,000,000 are existing on food rations well below subsistence levels. The United States Congress now is considering the sending of some $95,000,000 worth of food to India to help meet this famine crisis.

The paradoxical aspect rests in the fact that, apart from the current famine areas, India always has had many millions of underprivileged people who literally never have known what it was to be without hunger. In order to remedy this deficiency a British Commonwealth program already is under way for vast improvement of agricultural resources.

Humanitarian Object

This program of course has the humanitarian object of reducing hunger and thus improving general health conditions. But such an improvement would be vastly to a higher birth rate and less infant mortality. Such an increase in population under current circumstances would always keep underconsumption at the lowest level.

That, I take it, must be the unusual circumstance back of Nehru's statement on birth control. Population and food facilities must balance.

But insurgration of birth control in India is perhaps easier proposed than carried out. Differences of opinion already have begin in Nehru's cabinet, Health Minister Rajkumari Amrit Kau leading those who don't like the idea.

The population of India is mainly Hindu, although there also are a good many Moslems. Both these religions forbid the use of contraceptives. However, perhaps the main opposition would lie in the question of how birth control is contrary to nature.

Sons Mean Wealth

In India the idea of having large families is all important. Sons mean wealth. This was one reason, through generations for child marriage—to get an early start in gaining a family.

The Health Minister, seeking a substitute for direct birth control, advocates raising the limit for marriage of girls. Under the present law a girl may be married at 14.

Theoretically such a raising of the age limit would reduce the birth rate. However, one would think that such a law would be highly unpopular in a country which for endless centuries has seen it's firrmaHRDLUSHRD seen its girls married young.

Still, India is on the march of progress, and her views will change to meet the times. Certainly she will have to solve the problem of balancing population and food resources.

CHINESE REDS

That was near parallel 38 on one of the main approaches to Seoul, rubbled South Korean capital liberated by U.N. forces.

Heavy fighting raged elsewhere on the western sector, on the central front and on the long-dormant eastern front.

One of the first red attacks smashed into allied lines northwest of the big Hwachon reservoir on the central front. The Chinese drove a wedge into the allied line at one point. Front dispatches said U.N. forces pushed back as much as several miles.

Over-run Position

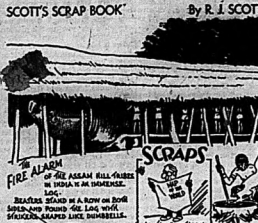
The Chinese power drive overran one key position north of Hwachon. The U.N. unit that had been attacking there Saturday was forced back and had to regroup.† By Monday morning it had retaken the position.

Correspondent Reuters said an estimated 2,025 red troops were killed Sunday.

Artillery piled up the enemy dead in a canyon south of Chorwon and elsewhere along the front.

U.N. forward elements east of the Hwachon dam were forced to withdraw.

Large enemy units rolled down the road from the east coast to Inje, on the east central front.



Two Chinese forces ground toward Yonchon from two directions on the western front. The reds were closing in from the north and west.

TRADE MINISTER

Speculation now centres on whether he will string along quietly as a party member or make a bid for leadership himself. Oswald Harris, his political agent in Ebbw Vale, the Welsh constituency Bevan represents, said today that Bevan "has no intention whatever of resigning from the Labor party."

Challenged Scale

In his letter of resignation to Attlee, Bevan challenged the scale of British rearmament and the budget's technique of reducing civilian consumption by tolerating rising prices.

He also alleged the budget was the beginning of the end of the Welfare State's social services. He specifically opposes a proposed charge for false teeth and glasses, hitherto free under the National Health scheme.

This charge will be discussed in the House of Commons tomorrow.

Conservatives were gleeful about Bevan's resignation. Some urged Winston Churchill to start packing for a move to 10 Downing Street.

If Bevan carries his opposition into the House vote on the budget, he may precipitate a government defeat and resignation. That would be followed by new general elections which the Conservatives say they would win.

Forecast Doom of Govt.

Conservative newspapers forecast the doom of the Attlee government.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express sounded a note of editorial delight. It said Bevan "has already succeeded in destroying the government," and added that where "even Mr. Churchill's contrary had failed to defeat the government, Mr. Bevin on his own has succeeded."

Bevan quit with a blast at "the scale of military expenditure." He said the Socialists should pay for any rearming by taxes on the rich program of taxes, and leave alone the free spectacles and false teeth for the needy, Bevan is now minister of health.

The new budget presented by the Labor government two weeks ago would require Britons to pay half the cost of false teeth and false dentures. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Hugh Gaitskell, said the cost would be about $56,000,000 to be cut in order to divert funds to rearmament.

Voiced Opposition

Bevan previously had voiced his opposition to the cuts in free medicine. But his reference to the military expenditure was a new note which Labor party moderates interpreted as an open appeal for support from the party left wing which he leads.

With Labor's Parliamentary majority in the House a slim five votes, Bevan would need only a handful of supporters to bring the government down if he carried his opposition to the extreme.

Attlee made no attempt to hide his annoyance in his quick letter accepting the resignation of the fiery, 57-year-old former Welsh coal miner. "The letters started 'Dear Clem' and end 'Nye,' but the prime minister acidly observed.

"I note that you have extended the area of disagreement with your colleagues a long way beyond the specific matter to which, as I understood, you have taken objection."

In No Shape to Fight

Attlee, still in hospital for treatment of duodenal ulcers, is in no condition now to fight an election campaign even if this were a politically strategic time for one. And the cold, wet winter which saw a shortage of coal, a shortage of meat and a continuing shortage of houses makes the time far from strategic for the Socialists.

But there were two schools of thought about Bevan's political plans. One said he would play the role of a Socialist hero and stick with the government in the crucial voting on budget items this week. The other line of thinking was that Bevan would push his opposition to the point of a Labor defeat, then seek to emerge as the moderates—the Attlee-Herbert Morrison faction—at some future general election.

Attlee's hold on the party already has been weakened by the death of former Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, his close associate and the most potent influence on Britain's rank-and-file laborers. Bevan had been generally rated as next to Bevin in influence with the workers.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

The insistence of Miss Major, the secretary of the firm of Jean Paul, for his address puzzled Tim Reese.

He looked at her sharply, then grinned: "Want to send me an invitation?"

"Yes, you might call it that."

"Could I be recognized at last?"

"The address—" Miss Major was stiffly persistent.

"Number Hospital, Cedarbrook, will get me for a while."

She gave him one of her characteristically skeptical looks.

"It's my country place."

She smiled. "I'm willing to believe anything." She wrote the address down. "Thank you very much." She came from behind the desk. She was very friendly.

"Miss Roland lives up on the fourth floor if you wish to see her."

"Is this building?"

"There's an elevator in the shop. She's probably still in bed but Martha, her maid, will be there."

"I guess it'll be all right if I go up, won't it?" He turned toward the door.

Miss Roland should be glad to see you, Mr. Reese."

Tim, unmindful of the cryptic note in Miss Major's speech, turned and went out. His walk was still awkward, difficult, but he moved less slowly than before.

Miss Major watched him go. Then she turned swiftly back to the desk, took up the paper with Tim's name and address on it, folded it carefully and put it back in her purse.

"Good morning, Mr. Panciera." Miss Major was completely at ease.

"Do you know if Miss Roland is upstairs?"

"I happen not to have seen Miss Roland this morning." He was tired, irritable. "Why?"

"Just curiosity." Miss Major rose from the desk, moved to a chest at one side.

He was annoyed. "A good secretary does not indulge in curiosity."

She put on her hat and coat. "I don't pretend to be a good secretary," she said.

"You are impertinent." He was more annoyed, "You are going out. —I gather my presence here is not important to you." So fired but hat before a mirror, did not speak.

"May I suggest that you do not come back? You will please me by considering yourself discharged."

She picked up her purse from the desk. Then, she went to the door, turned and faced him.

"You can't discharge me very well, Mr. Panciera. I was just leaving. It so happens I've been working for Mr. Cochet for years." She gave him her bland smile. "I enjoyed talking with Mr. Reese. He really has a wonderful talent."

"Cochet planted you here—!" The realization that his business competitor had planted a spy in his own establishment left him speechless.

"Goodby, Mr. Panciera." She went out, leaving the slightest tinkle of laughter behind her.

For once, Mr. Panciera was on the point of losing his poise.

Martha, the trim, colored maid, admitted Tim to the apartment on the fourth floor. He gave his name and assured her Miss Roland would be glad to see him. She made a step back into the apartment.

In a [illegible] the maid returned [illegible] and just woke up. It'll be [illegible] minutes before she can see you." Would you wait, please?"

There were many enchanting pictures of Jean Paul and there in the apartment and Tim's eye, as he sat and waited for her, went happily from one picture to another.

He was pleased to discover that in many of the pictures she was wearing costumes designed by him. His eye came to rest on one that held his attention especially, a sensitive camera study of Jean modeling a bridal dress. She was the perfect bride, ethereal and still alluring.

The bridal dress was not one of Tim's designs. He decided, as he mused over the picture, he would sketch one for her very soon.

The door of the apartment was opened and Mr. Panciera entered, admitting himself by key. He had divested himself of hat and overcoat. He was still distraught from his scene with Miss Major and it was a moment before he discovered Tim.

For an instant, Mr. Panciera was at a loss. But only for an instant.

"Good morning. A wretched day, isn't it?"

Once more that troubled feeling about Mr. Panciera returned to Tim Reese. The man had been momentarily brushed away by Tim's explanations the night before, but still he remained, like a fly on a white ceiling, a small, but definite irksome distraction.

And Mr. Panciera seemed to feel quite at home.

Tim Reese, coldly hostile, said nothing in reply to Mr. Panciera's greeting.

"I am Paul Panciera," the man went on easily. "And you, I'm sure, are Mr. Reese. Miss Roland has described you so often. It is almost as if I know you, Mr. Reese."

Tim stayed silent, antagonistic. Tim's antagonism toward Mr. Panciera was not because he disliked him or was it because Panciera had taken credit for designing the Dress of the Year. It was because Mr. Panciera kept intruding on Tim's dream. Now the man was in Jean's apartment, behaving as if he belonged there and with the key to the door in his hand.

Mr. Panciera went on:

"Jean—Miss Roland will be very glad to see you, I can assure you of that."

Mr. Panciera with the apartment key in his hand, knew the reason for Tim's hostil silence and knew he was facing a serious problem.

Now Jean, too, was nearing ruin. If she was found out, they both were lost. The firm of Jean Paul was lost.

To make things worse, the secret of the designer was out. Indeed about then Miss Major would be revealing it to Cochet. Cochet would offer this Tim Reese much richer rewards than Tim had ever dreamed of. And Tim would certainly not refuse to be designing for Cochet, especially if he found out about Jean.

Paul Panciera faced the problem audaciously.

"Miss Roland and I usually have our morning conference here over coffee. Privacy is practically unknown downstairs, as you can imagine." He held the apartment key up, smiled brightly. "Business permits me, an old friend and partner, the privilege."

Tim relaxed a little. "I saw you at the Empire last night, Mr. Panciera," he said. "You seem to have quite a time of it taking bows for my work."

"It was [illegible]ing, of course. Yours and Miss Roland's." Mr. Panciera was as spontaneous as he could be. "If I had known you were in town, I would have certainly had you on the platform to receive the award. Taking bows is one of my chores. I'm the front here, it is true, a cheap but apposite expression. I shall be very happy to take a chore over to you from now on."

"Thanks," Tim said flatly. "And if you can turn that little gold mannequin over to me, too, I'll appreciate it."

"Why, of course, Mr. Reese! It's yours, after all." Mr. Panciera was all graciousness. "I'll have it sent to you immediately, if you wish. Or, if you're going to stay in town, I'll fetch it to you."

"Fine," Tim said, flatly again. "I'm over at the Corona. You can send it to me there."

Mr. Panciera, a trifle ill at ease now, looked toward the passageway that led into the rear of the apartment. "Did Miss Roland know you were coming?"

He shook his head. "I thought I'd surprise her."

"But she knows you're here?" Mr. Panciera said quickly.

"The maid told her, I'm sure."

"She is probably preparing a beautiful entrance." He lowered his voice. "She is very fond of you, I suppose you know that. Indeed, she is very much in love with you."

Tim was immediately interested. "How do you know?"

"She told me so, and in no uncertain terms. Her positiveness surprised me, I must say."

Tim softened. "Why?"

"You know her, how lovely she is. Her loveliness makes her so sublimely self-sufficient, I could never picture her declaring her need for any man. It was hard for me to believe she had fallen in love." He smiled his admiration. "Those are the kind of girls great conquerors, Mr. Reese."

"I don't see what's happened, I guess," Tim said, vaguely remembering Midge's words.

"Don't underrate yourself, Mr. Reese." Mr. Panciera was comradely now. "You have genius, youth, good looks. I have always considered your and Miss Roland's meetings one of heaven's nicest inventions.

"She certainly is beautiful," Tim went on. "Last night when I saw her, I couldn't believe anyone could ever be so beautiful. I felt kind of reverent, I guess that's the word to put it."

"Other-worldly is the only way to describe her." Mr. Panciera, feeling his problems were being solved, was expansive. "Other-worldly."

"There's no way to describe her," Tim said.

"Perhaps he said. Perfectly said." Mr. Panciera now very much at ease decided it was time to get down to bread and butter. "By the way, Mr. Reese, I suppose you know that Miss Roland and I are very anxious to have you as a member of the firm. Indeed, since meeting you here, I've been entertaining the idea of a three-way partnership — you and Miss Roland and I."

Tim was amused. "I've been thinking of a firm of my own."

98 Including Seven Soldiers Killed in Fire

Blaze Sweeps Electric Train At Yokohama Rail Terminus

Yokohama, April 24—(Reuters)—Ninety-eight persons, including seven Japanese soldiers, were killed today and 200 injured when fire swept a six-coach electric train at Yokohama rail terminus.

The train, on the state-run Tokyo-Yokohama line, was pulling into the terminus when sparks from an overhead power cable set fire to the engineer's cabin.

Flames raged through the leading coach and partially destroyed the second as passengers struggled to escape.

Unconfirmed Japanese press reports said one foreign woman of unknown nationality was among the dead.

Panic - stricken passengers fought their way to the doors, but the flames had cut off the power needed to open them.

Some smashed windows and jumped, and others, unable to fail to their death on the sidewalk below the elevated track.

The fire, which licked through the coaches for 50 minutes, left the leading coach a grim skeleton of twisted steel piled with charred bodies.

Eight children were among the dead, more than half of whom were women.

Police said that only five persons in the first coach escaped.

P.E.I. Election Platforms Stress Varied Policies

Charlottetown, April 24 (CP) — Progressive Conservative and Liberal platforms for Prince Edward Island's provincial election Thursday have one thing in common—both stress in varying ways development of fishing and farming, the island's primary industries.

The Progressive Conservative platform has promised inauguration of a $1,000,000 fund to be administered by a commission headed by the Agriculture minister for assistance to farmers and fishermen.

Liberals have promised "to develop Agricultural policies" and give more development in dairying, more assistance in marketing and storage and other matters.

The CCF, running only five candidates, did not issue a formal platform, newspaper advertisements, however, they have said "a few CCF members elected in PEI would give Ottawa a real jolt." The party said western wheat farmers had received $60,000,000, "but nothing for the PEI potato growers."

Liberals and Progressive Conservatives are running full slates of 30 candidates in the Legislature, Liberals under Premier J. Walter Jones held 24 seats and the 3 Progressive Conservatives formed the six-man opposition. All 18 CCF candidates who ran in the last general contest in 1947 lost their deposits. The standing of Agrarians has remained unchanged since then, although there have been several by-elections.

Voting at the 246 polls Thursday will be from 9 a.m. EST to 4 p.m. because of the province's unique electoral system, under which each type of representatives—assemblyman and councillor—are elected, there is no accurate estimate of the number of eligible voters. There are varying qualifications for the 30 electors to vote for the two types of candidates.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 24 (CP) Synopsis: Skies were cloudy in Northern Ontario Monday and strong winds and snowflurries were general. In Southern Ontario warmer weather prevailed, and afternoon temperatures rose above 56.

Farmers Decide Land too Wet For Plowing

Toronto, April 24 — (CP) Most Ontario farmers agree that "the back 40" this week and decided the land still is "pretty wet" for sowing.

In its weekly crop report the Ontario Agriculture Department noted that wet weather has held up farming operations in Welland County while the ground "is drying up nicely" in Oxford.

York and Huron counties reported that wheat has come through the winter in reasonably good condition.

Ontario county reported that townships spraying for warble fly have finished their first spraying operation.

In Eastern Ontario cool wet weather, plus bad road conditions, have retarded spring operations in Carleton County and heavy weather also has delayed field work in Lanark.

In Northern Ontario the spring crop of lambs was described as "quite big" in the Kenora area in most districts. Lambs appeared to be doing particularly well in both Rainy River and in Temiskaming.

GOVT. SPOKESMAN RAPS OPPOSITION FOR CRITICISM

Budget Termed Tough but Realistic

Ottawa, April 24. (CP) The government's 1951-52 budget, tabled in the House of Commons was told yesterday, is going to serve as a constant reminder "that defence of freedom is not free."

That word came from a government spokesman, James Sinclair, parliamentary assistant to Finance Minister Abbott, as he stepped into the budget debate to rap opposition members for their continued criticism of the financial accounting.

Terming the budget "tough but realistic", he said the Progressive Conservative party has been practicing the Hitler technique of the "big lie" by "aimless charges of government extravagance" without indicating where economies could be made.

A dozen speakers entered the debate as it moved into the second week. The Chamber heard of proposals for new forms of taxation, suggestions for reducing others, a new plan for health insurance and criticism of the new home for prime ministers.

Mr. Sinclair, a Liberal member for the British Columbia riding of Coast-Capilano, criticized the C.C.F. caucus for suggesting the government is not "soaking" corporation enough. At present, the federal and provincial governments were taking 50.6 per cent of corporation profits by way of taxes.

Mayor and Chief of Police Of Orillia in Old-Fashioned Political Tussle Over Policy

Orillia, Ont., April 24—(CP)—Memories of old time knock-em-down, drag-em-out political battles are being revived in this central Ontario town of 12,000.

Main participants in the three-year-old fight are the chief of police and the mayor.

Present standing: Mayor Wilbur N. Cramp faces a charge of assaulting a police constable. He'll appear in court on the charge Friday, but meanwhile he wants a provincial government investigation of the administration of justice. He also wants to see Police Chief W. G. Carson fired.

An indication of the interest among Orillians in the dispute was the attendance at a council meeting called by the mayor last night to discuss police matters.

More than 1,000 persons—one-twelfth of the population—turned out. The overflow from the council chamber heard proceedings on a loud speaker in the market square outside.

Noticeably missing from the throng, however, were the other eight members of the council. They said they stayed away, not prompted by a wish to steer clear of discussing in public a matter that was for the courts to decide, as mayor."

Their absence didn't discourage Mayor Cramp, who delivered an hour-long address describing police administration as a reign of terror and demanding that Chief Carson should be "shorn of his uniform and ignominiously thrown from the door."

The assault charge arises from a scuffle in the police station April 17. The mayor is accused of grabbing a constable and swearing while protesting the arrest of an Orillia storekeeper on a charge of liquor in an improper place.

Mayor Cramp was reported to have accused the police at the time of pushing "the liquor issue," a reference to the previous election in which he was voted into office on a platform which brought Orillia a liquor store and brewers' warehouse.

At a public meeting Mayor Cramp criticized the other councillors for being "afraid to show up in their true colors before a meeting of citizens." He remarked that the "frivolous summons" prevented him from enlightening the public on the facts, and accused them of "wasting the taxpayers' money and time in a ruthless attempt to destroy me as mayor."

7,400 Homeless Due to Floods Of Mississippi

Chicago, April 24—(AP)—The Mississippi River's spring floods today piled new misery and new blows in the upper valley region.

Damage mounted into the millions of dollars. The Red Cross said 7,400 persons are homeless in Iowa, Illinois and Missouri, with another 24,000 threatened with evacuation by the flood waters.

It worked havoc in Iowa's corn fowa and illinois river towns. Rail lines were washed out.

Iowa communities—Davenport, Dubuque, Clinton, Muscatine, Burlington and Keokuk—battled fought the angry waters. The crest which hit Dubuque Sunday is moving downstream, with Clinton, Davenport and Muscatine the next major cities to face the onslaught.

The 800 residents of Sabula, 18 miles north of Clinton, are waging a grim fight against the flood. Six miles of protective dike water except for two raised highways. Sixty per cent of the town is reported below the level of the river.

Work on the two-mile long levees which protect Sabula on the north and south continued throughout the night. Schools were closed so youths could help.

The Milwaukee and Burlington Railroads is reported operating on the Iowa side of the river between Davenport and Clinton.

There were 135 city blocks inundated in Dubuque, but the waters were receding slowly Monday.

As the floods moved down stream, workmen in river towns in Wisconsin and Minnesota started the clean-up job. But at Prairie du Chien, Wis., and La Crosse, Wis., hundreds are not expected to return to their homes for several days.

CONDITION IMPROVED

Toronto, April 24—(CP)—Condition of Queen Elizabeth Douglas Roberts, 31, shot Saturday by a mental patient in her apartment, was described as "slightly improved," hospital attendants said today.

Husband Fell Against Knife Wife Declares

Toronto, April 24 (CP) —Mrs. Marie Lopess, 24, on trial for manslaughter, said today that her husband fell against a knife she was holding in their basement apartment in suburban New Toronto the night of March 2.

Mrs. Lopess, formerly of St. Catharines, originally was charged with murder in her husband's death. The charge was reduced to manslaughter after a preliminary trial started yesterday.

Testifying in her own behalf yesterday she told the jury mother testified that her husband had struck her and had threatened to beat her within an inch of her life. She said she held up a knife she had been using to open cans of beer and her husband "lunged or lurched forward" against it.

She added that shortly afterwards the landlord came to the apartment and told her:

"You've killed him."

Earlier, the couple had been drinking in a New Toronto tavern.

ROBBED OF $4,700

Toronto, April 24—(CP)—A beer store worker said he was robbed of $4,700 Monday by two men who accosted him while he was carrying the money in a brief case to a bank. Gordon Swift, 25, said he had almost reached the bank when he felt a revolver stuck in his back. Turning, he found himself facing two armed men.

St. Paul, Minn., April 24 (AP) — Northwest Airlines grounded 20 fleet of 20 Martin 202 airplanes last month because the pilots refused to fly them, a company spokesman said Monday. The grounding came after seven persons were killed in the fifth crash of a Martin. Ninety persons have been killed in crashes involving

ATTLEE'S FORCES AND LEFT-WINGERS MAKE BARGAIN

Will Try to Prevent Election at This Time

London, April 24 (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee's forces and rebellious Labor party left-wingers made a bargain today aimed at keeping the Labor government in power as long as possible and preventing a general election at this time.

The agreement, with both sides making concessions, came after a third government leader, John Freeman, resigned his position as the minister of supply, resigned in protest over the government's arms budget. He quit for broadly the same reasons as Labor Minister Aneurin Bevan and Board of Trade President Harold Wilson: Britain's financing of her rearmament at the expense of the nation's free medicine scheme.

The Labor government announced the appointment of Alfred Robens to succeed Freeman in his post, and of Sir Hartley Shawcross as president of the Board of Trade. Robens, 40, has been parliamentary secretary to the ministry of fuel, and Shawcross, 49, has been attorney-general.

Stormy Secret Meeting

The Labor members of parliament held a stormy two-hour secret emergency meeting. It resulted in an agreement in which the rebels, headed by Bevan and Wilson, pledged themselves to back party policy in the House of Commons above the policy split.

In return, Attlee's forces agreed to permit Bevan to abstain if there is a vote in the House of Commons tonight on the government bill to slap a 50-percent charge on false teeth and spectacles. Bevan's supporters in the Labor party must toe the line and support the bill.

Thus the party could expect to pull through should the opposition Conservatives attempt to exploit the Labor split by calling for a formal vote on a second reading of the bill to charge for specialties and false teeth. The opposition already has expressed support for the bill, up for a second reading. Ordinarily it is regarded as almost without a vote.

Can Hold Until Fall

Observers said it seemed likely the bill against a knife she had a big enough majority to keep the Labor government in power at least until autumn.

Bevan and Wilson protested the budget debate drags on to Hugh Gaitskell, Chancellor of the Exchequer. In his explanation to the commons tonight he said that the United States had dragged Britain into a rearmament race which was nibbling away at the Labor government's welfare state.

Mystery Craft Thought to Be Missing Bow-End of Oil Tanker

Halifax, April 24. (CP) — Navy and air force search for what is believed to be the bow section of a mysterious craft seen off the eastern extremity of Prince Edward Island Sunday was underway this morning.

The search for the mystery craft, reported "submarine sighting—Guy Saunders Harbour, Nfld." was ordered from East Point in the South Area of the island province.

Shortly after other return a naval spokesman issued the first official statement on the sighting: "The interpretation given by Capt. R. A. Featherston of Foundation Maritime seems quite plausible."

Capt. Featherston said yesterday that the object sighted was probably the bow of the tanker Esso Rochester which lost its bow when the tanker had broken in two in a terrific storm.

The salvage firm's tug Traverse was steaming in the area early today, hoping to locate the bow section of the tanker and retrieve it.

The Navy reported: "The sighting report was made Sunday at a Department of Transport lights' house keeper. He said he saw something that looked like a submarine. The object was also reported by a fisherman close by to wife and daughter. Later his son reported that he too had seen the object for about 20 minutes and then disappeared.

Yesterday several other residents of the area reported by telephone to Charlottetown that they had seen a sub. They described a conning tower, with periscope and about 30 feet of deck. No identifying marks were spotted.

Beginning in July, the Navy investigated several reports of submarine sightings off the Atlantic coast at times when no American nor British submarines

Battle May Well Prove Decisive Says Gen. Ridgway

South Korean Units Give Way Before Fury of Attack

Tokyo, April 24 — (AP) — Nearly 500,000 communist troops smashed a hole in the centre of the United Nations line today in their third invasion of South Korea.

Communist troops streamed through the gap and bent back the right flank of the Allied line.

They were striking savagely with the aim of breaking up the International Eighth Army into piecemeal units.

(Reuters News Agency reported that late Tuesday night there were scattered reports from the front line that communist pressure was decreasing.

Front-line forces were thrown into the breach on the central front late Tuesday night and were reported fighting the communists to a standstill, Reuters said.

(To the east, in the vicinity of the Hwachon Reservoir, Reuters added, some communist elements were reported moving back north of the 1950 battle line.)

Retreat Exposes Line

South Korean units manning the centre of the 100-mile line crumbled before the fury of the red spring offensive. Their retreat exposed other Allied divisions.

Front-line officers confirmed the situation as serious. But headquarters commanders were confident the rejuvenated Allied forces could stem the offensive.

Lt.-Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, the grenade-packing paratrooper who shored up the morale of the Allied forces before he succeeded Gen. MacArthur as supreme commander, visited the front.

Ridgway said the great battle "well may prove decisive." He called it the greatest red offensive yet launched but warned that the Allies probably have not yet met their full strength.

On the eastern flank red Koreans over-ran Inje. They struck with surprising strength. Defence of the town, four miles north of the border, collapsed.

South Koreans gave way before the Indian Chinese retrials in the centre. The Korean retreat exposed the flanks of other U.N. units.

Reds rammed through, deepening the wedge south of the 38th parallel. Censorship withheld the precise distance. Earlier in the day the Chinese had pushed four miles into South Korea. And they were still pressing forward over the rocky hills on foot and by horseback.

Suffer Heavy Casualties

An Eighth Army spokesman said red casualties were in three figures for every one. On the eastern front, an officer said red losses there were 20 times those of the allies.

Great columns of refugees clogged the highways south of the central and western front.

They walked threatened by a great red pincer movement.

Arms of the pincer were formed by Chinese pushing down the mountainous centre of the peninsula, and reinforced reds flowing across the Imjin River in the west.

Red losses Monday were estimated at roughly 12,000 from air and artillery, alone.

U.N. troops gave up territory for communist lines. Allies pulled back up to 15 miles in the first two days of the attack.

The central front dituation was grim.

Expected to Fan Out

Allied intelligence officers said the Chinese were "throwing everything they've got" into the hole ripped in the U.N. line.

The Chinese were expected to fan out east and west of the hole in an effort to cut the main allied supplies.

Clear, bright weather aided the defending forces. Dust kicked up by advancing columns betrayed their positions to allied planes.

The Fifth Air Force mounted 340 strikes Monday in close support of ground troops. The toll was high. Every 15-20s were rushed in night bomb attacks on the front lines. Flares and searchlights spotted the Reds.

Cliletti explained he no longer permits me to accept the salary for doing the work of a high-level job," he said in his letter of resignation.

Kinsmen Hear Students Tell Of Trip to N.Y.

Youthful reaction to a trip to the United Nations in New York was related to members of the local Kinsmen Club Monday evening by two students of Belleville Collegiate United Nations Club, who made the trip during the Easter holidays.

Peggy Campbell, as one of the eight girls from the local collegiate who made the trip, presented the feminine version of their trip, while Leo Marcus told of his reaction to the visit to the United Nations. Twenty-three students from the collegiate made the trip.

Miss Campbell told of the bus trip down through New York State and of their "grueling" experience during the height of the big city. The day following their arrival they had gone in a motorcoached bus trip about the city this helping them immensely in later finding their way about interesting spots which they wished to visit.

Planetarium Visited

To the mind of Miss Campbell one of the most interesting things she saw was during her visit to the Hayden Planetarium which she termed as "magnificent," and one of the most disappointing visits was to a television broadcast. "It seemed like a lot of work and there was nothing left when it was finished," she said.

They also saw a Broadway show "Kiss Me Kate" but were unable to get tickets for five other shows. Radio Music Hall was also visited, where they saw the Easter show.

On their way home the route was up the Hudson River with a stop at West Point, military college. There it attended church again—very few cadets were seen.

Summing up the trip in a very few words Miss Campbell stated "it was the most exciting experience of our lives."

Saw Council in Session

Leo Marcus spoke entirely on the students' visit to the United Nations. They saw the new Manhattan building which is still not completed, and also visited Lake Success when the Security Council was in progress.

Problems of the United Nations were international in scope, the chief aim being to keep peace. "There are many who take a pessimistic view of the United Nations but any accomplishment toward keeping the peace is worthwhile today," said the speaker.

The three phases of the work of the United Nations to date has been described to the students as being: 1. Cure for conflicts in Indonesia and in Palestine; 2. The commencement of the Korean war last June and 3. Entry of communist China into the Korean conflict.

"I am proud of the fact that I had the opportunity of visiting the United Nations and watch history in the making," Leo said. "Our trip to the United Nations has made us more aware of the importance of that organization."

Show Director Heard

George Zarfas, director of the Kinsmen show, Belleville Revels being staged at the Collegiate auditorium for three days starting Wednesday May 2nd, said rehearsals were coming along fine. One hundred and seventy three persons, all local talent, were taking part in the show.

He assured the public "would be the best thing ever seen in Belleville."

Two other Kinsmen members—Barney Parsons, district representative of Labatt's, and Alf Lehmen, manager of the local Woolworth store were installed by Kin Cleo Colling.

Club members paid silent tribute to two former Kinsmen, who died during last week. They were Ken-Pierce, of Montreal, national Kinsmen president, and Clarence Downey, formerly of Corbyville and member of the local club.

Bill Maass, Verdun, dept. dist. Kinsmen Governor, paid an official visit to the club. Carthy was addressed the members on the duties and responsibilities of the district organization and, on the question of communistic activity confronting Kinsmen Clubs. President Murray Davis was in the chair.

Male Choir, Ladies Choral Group Give Splendid Concert at Collegiate

A superbly-rendered, wide-ranging repertoire offered at the Collegiate auditorium Monday night by the Kingston Symphony Male Choir and Ladies' Choral Group, with assisting artists, was given an enthusiastic reception by an audience that could have been much larger.

The Temple Choir, under the direction of Mr. H. W. Hartshorn and the Ladies' Choral Group, directed by Dr. H. Angrove, with Alphonse McCue, baritone and Miss Margaret Alexander, soprano were brought here under the auspices of Branch 99 Canadian Legion. It was regrettable that such an outstanding musical treat was missed by many music lovers of the city.

Miss Leonore Black, whose outstanding artistry as an accompanist was one of the features of the concert, presided at the piano.

The well-arranged program that brought out the musical versatility of the choirs, ranged from the classics to folk-songs, spirituals and religious and standard airs.

Closed With Lord's Prayer

The concert ended with the majestic crescendoing thunder of the now famous "Lord's Prayer" as offered by the groups in ensemble. It was a tuneful climax to one of the best attended concerts the city has heard in a long time.

The Temple Choir's early group yielded evidence of why they have won many prizes at music festivals. It is a well-balanced organization with plenty of volume, yet can practically whisper in harmony that is a delight to the ear. Mr. Hartshorn's direction was keen. He brought out to the full the melodic interpretation of such tuneful if old numbers as "Moonlight Bay," "Kentucky Babe" and "Old Black Joe."

Spirituals Well Done

The spirituals were exceptionally well done with "Dry Bones" and "Deep River" definitely standing out. The humorous number "Catastrophe" a song story of a boy, a tack and a teacher was another evidence of the brilliancy of the choir.

Shaked perhaps by the balance of their male counterparts, the Ladies Choral Group also showed results of superb coaching and direction by Dr. Angrove. From the "Kiss" by Bach and Schubert's "Ave Maria" down to the old choral beauty, they ranged to a French folk song and the popular "Road to the Isles" with its pipes background.

Turning again to a different phase of choral work they offered the Scottish folk song "Wee Cooper O'Fyfe" and by way of versatility sang the tuneful square dance melody "Skip to My Loo." Dr. Angrove injected some delightful comedy into this number with pantomimic effects of square dancing.

The group's spirituals were done with a depth of feeling and finished. "Walk Jesus All Soul" and Heav'n, Heav'n." The group joined in ensemble in the fine work with the choir in "Me and My Little Banjo"; "Into the Night" and "The Lord's Prayer."

In Splendid Voice

Mr. McCue well-known Kingston baritone, was in splendid voice and responded to a number of encores. His stage bass and low register resonance was evident in his various offerings. He sang Frank's "Panis Angelicus," adding Beethoven's "In Questa Tomba Scura." Turning to lighter music he offered "Some Enchanted Evening" and "The Blind Ploughman" in the first half of the program. Later he sang "Rio Rita" in humorous vein.

Song of the Flea." He received a splendid ovation at the end of each number.

Miss Margaret Alexander's soprano voice offered an enjoyable musical departure for the choral work. Her voice matched an outstanding stage personality and she was called back after offering "The Valley of Laughter" and "I Know Where I'm Going." Her encore was "When April Sings."

Says Bad Coffee Drives Business Away

Fort Erie, April 24. (CP)—Bad coffee drives away good business.

That's what Thomas C. McCall, Ontario Deputy Minister of Travel and Publicity, last night told the Fort Erie Chamber of Commerce.

This town is the first Canadian community tourists reach when they cross the Peace Bridge from Buffalo, N.Y. Mr. McCall said 34,000 United States visitors passed through here last year, making Fort Erie second only to Windsor as a port of entry to Canada.

Mindful of this flow of visitors and of their tastes, he tipped tourist-conscious Fort Erie restaurant operators:

"American tourists don't like weak coffee and skimmed milk."

RCSA Decides To Enter Team In Soccer Loop

Picton — Picton RCSA has decided to enter a team in Quinte District Soccer League. This decision was arrived at following a meeting held at the RCSA Station.

Les Digby, president of the Bay of Quinte League and the Eastern Ontario League, told of plans for the season. The Garrison has some extra good talent available for an entry, and a number of county players are also available.

During the season it is hoped to have an exhibition game between Toronto and Bay of Quinte teams.

Other league meetings of different age groups, will have an opportunity to play soccer. Two trophies have been offered as an added inducement.

Different Version Of Accident Given

The report in Saturday's paper concerning injuries received by Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Harris, Park Street, South, by collision with a car while they were walking on a Grove Street sidewalk Friday was given a somewhat different version today by Harris.

Mr. Harris denied that, as was stated in the report, he and Mrs. Harris had walked into the side of the automobile as it swung into a driveway in front of them. He claimed that the car had run into them, striking them with the bumper and fender.

The police report stated that the driver of the car sounded his horn as he approached the driveway, but the pedestrians, apparently did not hear and stepped into the side of the car as it passed in front of them.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 24 — (CP) — Prices tended slightly lower in narrow, quiet trading as the session progressed on the stock market today.

Industrials and papers, which gave the section most of its strength yesterday, were lower. Steels, utilities, constructions and liquors showed a majority of losses. Banks, refining oils and retail stores were higher and agriculturles, foods, textiles and manufacturing companies were about evenly mixed. Price changes were in fractions and many issues were unchanged.

In base metals Quemont stood out with a $1 drop. Steep Rock-Falconbridge, Consolidated Smelters, Noranda and International Nickel dipped fractions.

Western oils were weak.

Senior golds were mixed with little trend. Junior producers eased pennies.

1,298 Crippled Children Have Been Assisted in 28 Years by Rotary

The Rotary Club of the city has assisted a total of 1,298 crippled children cases since the adoption of the community service 28 years ago, $50 of these were individual cases and 448 were cases carried over from other years.

This was revealed in the annual Crippled Children's committee report submitted to the club yesterday by Crippled Children's committee chairman Ernie Gurnett.

Of the total number of cases 657 were orthopedic and 691 non-orthopedic. The yearly average from 1931 to 1950 is slightly over 32. In 1947, 78 cases were taken care of.

The number dropped to six in 1949 but increased last year to 20. This year, it is estimated the number will be 50 by the end of June.

Costs Increasing

The report stated that when the committee submitted its estimate of proposed expenditure this year for assisting crippled children, the figure was placed at $2,500. Up to December 31st that is for further expenditure of $849 was made. The expenditures are definitely at an increasing rate, but assuming the same rate for the remaining three months, the total expenditure in aid of crippled children will be approximately $3,000.

The report noted that hospitalization accounts for approximately 47 per cent expenditure; orthopedic equipment, 42 per cent and transportation and other expenses the balance.

Chairman Gurnett described in detail the various means by which children needing treatment or other assistance are brought to the attention of the committee. He pointed out that special rates are received from the halfway in regard to transportation, adding that the Belleville General Hospital co-operates in the matter of reduced rates.

Main Charges Paid

In cases that call for corrective measures, the consent of the parents or guardians is obtained. Arrangements are then made for the admission of the child to the Hospital for Sick Children for observation investigation and if necessary, surgical or other treatment. In such cases there is no charge to the club for medical or surgical fees, but it does pay for hospital maintenance, drugs, incidentals and orthopedic equipment.

Chairman Gurnett pointed out that many letters are received from grateful parents. He quoted some that have been received, all of them expressing heartfelt gratitude.

Individual cases were outlined by members of the committee including Rotarians Fred Adsett, Jack Marshall, and Van Blaiklee.

Rotarian Dr. Blaiklee paid special tribute to the late Rotarian Charles Symons, who was chairman when the Crippled Children Committee from its inception for 25 years. Over 800 cases were taken care of through the late chairman, the most of them cured.

Gave Freely of Time

"He gave of his time and money and no one knows what else he did for these children," Rotarian Blaiklee said.

Rotarian Ernie Club should honor his memory. A picture of him could be placed on a wall here."

President Ken Griffiths said "no words of mine can adequately describe the splendid work, being done by the Crippled Children's Committee, Rotary International, when they receive this report will be most favorably impressed."

City Symphony Winds up Season With Concert

The Belleville Symphony presented its second and final concert of the present season last evening in the auditorium of Prince Charles School. The orchestra was assisted by three other vocal and instrumental groups, the latter being picked from the personnel of the orchestra itself. The Belleville Woodwind Quintet consisting of Ralph Clapp (clarinet), Larry Brown (bassoon), Chris Lockyer (French horn), Johannes Holmboe (flute), and Lewis Lambert (oboe) performed two classical Gavottes arranged for this combination of wind instruments.

The Belleville String Quartet, made up of Donald LaFrance, Dr. A. C. Locke, Leslie Lennox (violins) and Elliott Lawrence (viola) also played two numbers of classical vintage. Belleville's premier Barber Shop Quartet, the Quintones (Alf. Evans, John Grant, Dalton Kaye, and Dick Brettingham) lent a decided note of variety to the concert as they broke forth into songs of the early nineteen century.

The orchestra itself again demonstrated its capabilities and qualities in a most efficient way as its members delved into six numbers of the staple concert repertoire that were known to the audience as familiar favorites.

The orchestra management are to be congratulated for the untiring efforts they have given to the cause of good music, and their founder and conductor, E. Reg. Hinchey, deserves special praise for the fine work that he has done with this group in so short a time.

The numbers performed were introduced as well as their soloists and a short description of each work given by the commentator for the concert, Eugene Lang. Mr. Harry Moorman, pro-tem manager of the orchestra, thanked them all for the work that they have done and looked forward for their future full and winter series.

Mr. Edgar Bateman, principal of Prince Charles School, was responsible for seeing that this musical evening was so successfully planned and carried through.

KEEPING THE RECORD STRAIGHT

On another section of today's page we print a letter from a correspondent commenting on an editorial which appeared in this column last week. While his comment is based on a misunderstanding of what we feel should be further discussed before the issue is brought to an end.

The writer of the letter quotes the fourth paragraph of the editorial, in which we stated that margarine was being smuggled into the area from across the border at Quebec and sold at a price advance of from fifteen to seventeen cents per pound. Therefore, if as our correspondent suggests, it is reasonable to assume that the margarine is being purchased at the wholesale price of forty cents, the smuggler was selling his commodity in a price range of from five to fifty-seven cents. Butter, at that time, was wholesaling in Belleville, according to the letter, at sixty cents per pound. Even though transportation costs have to be paid to get the butter to northern Quebec, the cost of that commodity would approximate sixty to sixty-five cents. Our correspondent asks "Why should people go a mile for margarine as for butter?"

There is only answer to that is that, generally speaking, they do not.

Further, our correspondent says that there was no scarcity of butter in northern Quebec at the time the editorial was written, unless it was caused by lack of transportation. He then assumes that if butter sales were restricted by that lack, margarine would also be affected. But that may not be the case, for it is reasonable to assume that it was, for a larger profit by transporting the margarine than they can the butter, the former will fetch the market, and the latter will not. From a purely economic standpoint, then, the argument that blanket-scarcity would be affected does not fly well.

We cannot state definitely that there was a scarcity of butter in northern Quebec at that time. What we do know is that the information we used as the basis for the editorial was received in a news service which we consider to be factual in almost every case. Since no service is perfect, it may be that the whole picture was not accurate. If it was, then the whole argument was based on error, and our writing to admit that that may be the case, but if so, it is a departure from the ordinary for this particular service.

We do not understand the use of the word "pseudo" in our correspondent's material. Our dictionary gives the definition of "pseudo" as being "false, counterfeit, pretended, spurious." If our correspondent is intimating that margarine is advertised as "false butter," then that is his privilege. We did not know that was the case.

It is true that we did not argue the point as to whether we should or should not have margarine," and had no intention of so doing. It was merely an attempt to point out, as we said before, the obvious results of a discriminatory tax. But our correspondent does raise the point of whether we should or should not have margarine at all, saying "Nothing like patronizing home industry." Our answer to that, of course, lies in the inherent rights of people living in a democratic state — the choice of patronizing home industry or not. That is the true test, and we will not belabor the point.

Despite the fact that we do not in essence agree with our correspondent on the points, we are glad — indeed, we consider it a privilege — to print his letter. This page is open to the opinions of all, and if it should become a forum for public opinion, so much the better.

THE TRUTH WILL OUT

Men in the audience can sit up a little straighter, throw out their chests a little farther, and conjure up a slight sneer, all on the basis of a Swedish experiment. Proof of this campaigning by the female sex to have sexual rights on a basis of equal strength, or because women are in reality the stronger sex, has been knocked into a cocked hat.

More than two hundred Swedish students wore themselves to a collective frazzle on a treadmill to prove that women have the lowest endurance. Two of the women went the treadmill, and the women in the test dropped off one by one. Finally, no representatives were left on the female side of the platform, and it was proved conclusively that an adult woman's endurance capacity was thirty per cent lower than a man's. The women with the highest capacity just reached the level of the men with the lowest.

Women the world over may shriek that they have been betrayed. Men will chortle and rest easier in the knowledge that their supremacy has been re-established. The boys in that man have-been for centuries, but which had slipped over one ear in the past few years, is in no danger now. It has been straightened in one delicate, yet powerful, blow.

AN ENGLISHMAN PASSES

Twas in New York he passed me by,
An Englishman beyond a doubt.
His spats and tweed suit caught my eye;
His boots (which I call shoes)
In England was his "bowler" bought.
Quite positive of that I am
And as I looked at him I thought
Perhaps he came from Birmingham.

The skies were fair and yet he bore
A closed umbrella in his hand.
My father did that years
He must have "bracers" on, thought I.
"Tis as suppositions we know them.
I wondered as he passed me by
If he had come from "Brummagem"?

We didn't meet; we never may.
He never turned an eye on me,
But as he hurried on his way
I'm sure an Englishman was he.
I knew he called the bus a "tram."
And as I wondered all that more
If he had come from Birmingham,
He never

"Wow — — that was some party last night! — — Here, Joe — — I think this is your hat."

Resignation May Mean Downfall Of Attlee Govt.

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The resignation of Aneurin Bevan, British Labor party leader and Minister of Labor, has precipitated a political crisis which may have far-reaching consequences.

This move might easily result in the downfall of Prime Minister Attlee's Socialist government and the return of the Conservative party to power under Winston Churchill.

However, I believe Bevan's projject puts a deeper issue than that.

Bevan's long - range aim would seem to be to capture control of the Labor party which, under the contents leadership of Attlee, has represented rather a Conservative type of Socialism. Bevan would swing the party further left.

Communism Not Issue

Here it should be emphasized that in speaking of a swing to the left one refers to a more extreme socialism. Communism is not an issue in Britain.

To us the question rather is how much "socialism" the country will stand. The party in Britain is pledged to a welfare state of some sort. Bevan is regarded as being an orthodoxist in the party constitutional basis.

Bevan said he quit because Britain has been "dragged too far behind the wheels of American dipplomacy." He referred to Britain's huge rearmament plans and has protested the arms expenditure in Britain's new budget — because it "cannot be achieved without irreparable damage to the economy of Great Britain and the world."

Big Question

The big question is how much following Bevan had. Political experts figure that he might have 30 members of the 625 - member House of Commons with him—not a big following.

However, it was foreseen that he might be able to split the party in two. In that event Attlee would be expected to resign as Prime Minister, since he would have a majority over the rest of Commons.

The big showdown may mark the beginning of the end of the Attlee government. It certainly may be expected to give a better idea of how far Socialism is to go in England. In that sense, it will be watched by other many political atmosphere.

Churchill Will Make Trip West

London, April 24 — (AP) Winston Churchill's office said today that it knows of no decision by the Conservative leader to cancel his scheduled visit to the United States next month because of the British political situation.

The Daily Telegraph reported this morning that Churchill might not make the trip to speak May 8 in Philadelphia.

"If there is any firm decision, it will be announced immediately," said Churchill's secretary.

A spokesman at the Conservative party's central office said barring a sudden general election, there is no reason why Churchill

Letter to the Editor

Makes Comment on Margarine Editorial

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Naturally you would expect the writer of this note to read the editorial in your issue of April nineteenth entitled "Smuggling Margarine."

Knowing how fair minded you are, Mr. Editor, and how anxious you are to have this correct, there are just one or two things we would like to say about this editorial.

In the fourth paragraph, you spoke of these pseudo products being taken into Quebec and sold to housewives at an advanced price of fifteen to seventeen cents per pound. Quebec butter, margarine was wholesaling approximately at forty cents. It is right to assume that the bootlegger would need to pay the wholesale price for Bootleggers don't have transportation charges, fifteen to seventeen cents added to the forty cents wholesale price, plus transportation charges, which would place the cost of margarine in the hands of the grocer or person who purchased from the bootlegger, around sixty cents per pound.

On the same date, April the nineteenth, butter was wholesaling at sixty cents a pound and retailing in Belleville at seventy-five to sixty-four cents; therefore, why should people pay as much for margarine as for butter?

In the fifth paragraph of your editorial, you say, "Butter is scarce in Northern Quebec or any other place in Canada, unless it was purchased in the wholesale quantity as caused by lack of transportation facilities." Consequently, you would affect the pseudo product as well as butter and other products.

True, we know your editorial was not arguing at the point as to whether we should or should not have margarine but we think it should carry the information that if you have it, namely, have joint or colour. Your own expression on differentiation is worth just as much as the imposing explanation—the emblem of the most eminent quack in the business. Please remember, you poor good, that I make this statement with fair knowledge of the elaborate theories spun by the leading medical authorities who gain their fame and their bread and butter principally from writing textbooks or pandering tomes for the libraries of ordinary doctors.

So far as it may apply to the joint trouble known as rheumatism the very term arthritis is a misnomer, for, as already indicated, it means joint inflammation and in this condition there is no inflammation or practically none, and therefore the doctor who "diagnoses" your rheumatis as "chronic arthritis" either takes you for a gullible geek or just shows his own ignorance.

The change that occurs in the affected joint or joints in the condition known as rheumatis is degeneration, and without attempting to define it here (see Dorland's medical definition) I merely reiterate that it is in no particular the same as inflammation.

Come, come, sooner or later we must all face it—indeed, I have been dying now for about half of my lifetime although I like to think I'm still not dying as fast as a lot of you old geezers of 40 who are rushing to the Seven Keys to Vile and use 'em in my daily life—for the booklet by this name send a dime and a good self-addressed envelope. Each and every day we are adding to your span of life will tend to retard degeneration.

There is one question in my mind but that the degeneration process is actually reversible—into regeneration—by a certain point. Indeed this is the only treatment that I know of for recovery in any case of rheumatis.

Not everyone knows, especially my medical acquaintances, for I haven't seen it in any authority on joint disease or anything else, but, nevertheless I give you my opinion or theory for what it is and you may take it or leave it.

I have a good deal more to say it talks to follow—that is, if available space permits.

CANDIDATES TRAINING FOR THE RHEUMATIS

You need not be concerned about the rheumatis if you consume daily at least 1 1-2 pints or milk or the equivalent in milk products, especially if you avail yourself of every opportunity to expose your skin to sunlight or daylight.

Forty years ago doctors called it acute inflammatory rheumatism; today doctors call it rheumatic fever. Sometimes the same illness is called acute infectious arthritis—infectious signifying that the condition is due to invasion of the joint linings by germs, not that it is contagious or communicable.

Whatever we call it, the feature that distinguishes this illness of young persons from the rheumatis of older persons is inflammation (calor, dolor, rubor, tumor—heat, pain, redness, swelling) of the joints. Sometimes the victim of inflammatory rheumatism knows quite well that he is ill all right, even if the illness is not complicated with jumpy toothache (as Bootles said to M. Twain).

In ordinary rheumatis there is no inflammation, no heat, no pain (that is, no sharp pain, rather the dull pain of soreness or rediness, no noticeable swelling as a rule. In fact the only feature common to the inflammatory rheumatism and ordinary chronic rheumatis is that both are afflicted in both diseases.

Now let's try to rid our almost mixed up medical nomenclature terminatis means anything else than joint (arthro) trouble. Inflammation (itis). We have all let's not be ninnyhammers about it—we are if we waste our good time or money on doctor, specialist, yogi, magician, quack, charlatan, osteopathy, chiropathy, bath, diet, Indian, (Asiatic or otherwise), "new" treatment, "old" new treatment that purports to be good for arthritis. I tell you without fear of successful contradiction, no matter who may apply the term to any joint trouble or diagnosis, chronic arthritis doesn't mean a thing other than what you know instinctively if you have it, namely, lame joint or joints. Your own expression on differentiation is worth just as much as the imposing explanation—the emblem of the most eminent quack in the business. Please remember, you poor good, that I make this statement with fair knowledge of the elaborate theories spun by the leading medical authorities who gain their

REAL SERVICE IS UNCONSCIOUS SERVICE

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Thus did Jesus, put His finger on the crux of the whole question regarding Christian service. The opportunities are round about you every day you said. There are many people to be fed, not only with food but with all that nourishes the mind and spirit and that will turn their hearts from discouragement into joy. The world is full of lonely people; take the stranger to your heart and bless him with a warm fellowship. Be kind and not to be clothed; not only those who actually shiver in the famine-stricken countries, but those who need covering and protection from the inclemencies of the world in which we all live. The sick both of heart and body are to be visited and healed. The prisoners, not only those who languish behind the bars of steel and stone, but those held in the bondage of weakness and appetite cry out for the visitation of your counsel and help.

Don't lose an opportunity to do good, was our Lord's dictum. On the last day (God will love those humble men and women who serve Him amid those gorgeous surroundings of the throne of their feet, and as they served were so unconscious of their kindliness to others that the Lord commended them, they cried out in astonishment, "When Lord, did we serve Thee in such wonderful ways?"

Child Knocked From Wagon But Uninjured

Campbellford — Bernard McCrory, age 6, of Campbellford escaped almost uninjured on Saturday night, after he was knocked from his wagon while attempting to cross Front Street.

The lad, together with his older brother, Denton, was just leaving the curb on his wagon to cross Front Street in the north end of town, when he was struck by a car backing into a parking space. Bernard was knocked from the wagon and received a slight head injury when he hit the pavement. The wagon was smashed, the tires being torn from two of the wheels. The driver, Cecil Thorne, of 50 Ashburnam Road, Toronto, who was moving very slowly at the time, drove the lad to his home and summoned Dr. F. K. Anderson. He then drove to the police station where he reported the accident to Chief George H. Hardy. He said he did not see the lad as the wagon "was backing up. He was cleared of blame. The boy received only minor injuries and is none the worse for his ordeal.

PICTON

Agricultural Groups Must Be Organized Speaker Tells Club

Picton—The need of organization of agricultural groups to put them on a par with other organized groups was stressed by Kingsley Brown, editor of the Rural Co-operator, Toronto, in an address at Prince Edward County Holstein Breeders' Club annual banquet.

Two hundred persons heard the speaker declare that those engaged in Agriculture must form a pressure group and must do an economic job, securing the same rights, the same control over production, marketing and cost of goods needed as other organized industries enjoy.

"We are living in a world of change and we must change our thinking if we are to survive," said Mr. Brown.

Facing Many Problems

"The world today faces many problems but they are not peculiar to this age. Other generations met and overcame similar problems. In order to overcome these problems it is necessary to have a clear conception of what is going on in the world," said Mr. Brown.

"The world of matter has been most noted where people adapt themselves most readily to change."

Traces Organization

The speaker traced the organization of industry. In early years each town had its own small industries. Then they were specialized and there has been built up a class of workers who differ from rural people, in that they do not own land, and their chief thought is self. During the last 20 years, industrial unions have have been formed, this being the only method by which they could protect themselves. In the war time they secured the right to collective bargaining and the closed shop. Through these unions, a tremendous force has been built up to secure their demands.

Earlier, the manufacturers had formed into an association whose chief job was to protect Canadian industry against foreign competition.

Manufacturers have had tremendous pressure on the governments. A year ago, Japanese shirts were brought in to sell at $1.19 and were sold in Canada made shirts selling from $3.50 to $5. If that kind of competition was allowed, it would ruin the Canadian industry. The pressure by the C.M.A. resulted in an embargo being placed on such imports.

The Canadian Bankers Association has considerable influence on the governments.

Then something new developed —the power of labor. Through monthly dues, unions have built up a great fund to be used in hiring high-priced lawyers, for advertising, lobbying, etc. Nearly all legislation asked by U.S. labor has been granted. Forty million dollar budgets enable these groups to buy their way.

Generally Recognized

While open lobbying may not be considered ethical or democratic, that position has developed and is generally recognized.

It was formally the policy of the governments to secure the feeling of the people by having members visit their ridings. Now, when a crisis develops, pressure groups are on the doorsteps of the government at once. And other policies are formulated.

Labor and business are organized to bring pressure on the government. Agriculture has lagged. It is still not organized to permit farmers the same economic control over their own affairs as others have.

Sold on Open Market

Products the farmer has to sell are sold on the open market, dependent largely on supply and demand. The matter of supply and demand affects labor little. There is little effective price competition among industries. Most cigarettes, soaps and many other articles are the same price for different brands. This does not mean that there are combines, but friendly understandings among those concerned. There is no really effective competition in business today," said Mr. Brown.

Farming Is Business

The farmer is a business manager, a plant manager and owner of a factory. For some strange reason the farmer buys at retail and sells at wholesale. This is due largely to the farmers long individualistic. But the day may be here when independence will become a handicap.

Farmers have not the funds to tell their story to the consumers or combat the innuendos that farmers are exploiting them. The speaker stressed that the increased earnings of workers today account for makes food cheaper that it was when wage levels were low. The Bureau of Statistics figures indicate that in 1900, a laborer worked 21 minutes to buy a pound of butter; today he would work 13 minutes. It is the labor hour factor that counts, not the dollars and cents.

Cheap Food Policy

A cheap food policy has been carried on because farmers lack organization.

Certain people in the cities complain loudly of food prices, the speaker asserted how they afford so many luxuries. In Toronto — Hamilton area, in the first four months, 3,800 television sets, costing $1,350,000, were sold by consumers in that area alone baked at milk prices.

Certain elements are glad to call a cripple a boy. The farmer will remain the scapegoat until he builds up an organization equal to that of other industries.

Organization Needed

A dual organization is needed to meet the problem of goods and equipment that deal with farm prices which have not increased in the same degree as the cost of products.

Co-operative purchasing may help solve the problem of controlling costs of products farmers need. Co-operatives do not need to control any great percentage of business in order to keep prices on a fair level. Co-operatives offer a means of exerting a healthy competitive influence on price structures. For practical purposes, if 10 to 15 percent co-operative buying was done, it would hold down the price level.

Most Develop Control

Farmers must develop some control over the things he sells. It is one of the few groups which has nothing to say as to the price to be paid for the goods it sells.

Referring to the recent marketing legislation passed by the Ontario government, Mr. Brown said it is up to the farmers to decide if they want such schemes. It would give them control equal to collective bargaining and the closed shop.

In countries such as Holland, Denmark, Sweden, as well as in British Columbia controlled marketing has resulted in finer quality and lower prices for the consumer. Central marketing has meant greater efficiency and savings which are passed on.

Much work will need to be done to put this legislation into effect, a two-thirds vote is essential. The Federation of Agriculture is taking the lead.

"We are in sight of marketing organization for all farm products, but they cannot come until the farmers are convinced they want them," said Mr. Brown.

"There is only one road to survival—that is through organization," concluded the speaker.

Mr. Brown was ably introduced by F. J. Webster, BSA, and thanked by William Nightingale.

Fine Program

The program was an exceptionally enjoyable one. President D. O. Reynolds was chairman and announced twilight barn meetings are planned. Community singing was led by Phil Dodds with Mrs. James Inrig at the piano.

Warden James Clemmison extended a hearty welcome, remarking that Holsteins had done much to advertise this county.

Agricultural representative Donald Taylor introduced the head table guests.

Roy Ormiston, district field-man of the Holstein - Friesian Association, presented a certificate of Superior Production to Far Land Farms. The animal, Rosemath Supreme Molly, V. G., had a record at three years of age, in 305 days, on twice-a-day milking of 19,217 pounds milk, 629 lbs. fat, 3.15 test. This was accepted by farm manager Brian Dodds.

Tommy May accepted the Picton Fair Trophy given by R. J. Morland for the champion female at Picton Fair, presented by Brian Dodds. Won three years by John May and son, the trophy is now their permanent possession. The cow's last record was 19,000 lbs. milk with 4.3 test.

Lewis Wright, president, County Junior Farmers, thanked the Ladies Guild for the fine meal, and the entertainment. Mr. McFarland and others. He announced the calf draw would be held in May.

Fine Artists

Heading the group of artists, who appeared through the generosity of Mayor H. J. McFarland, was Jimmie Shields, whose tenor voice was heard to advantage in two groups of numbers. These included "Danny Boy", "Because", "Dear Little Girl", "Father's Shillalagh', 'Wilbout a Song' and 'The Donkey's Serenade', with "Bless this House', as an encore. As a novelty, Mr. Shields, with Bill Purtelle and Brian Dodds harmonized in 'Home on the Range'.

Rex Slocum, magician, entertained with cards, hoops, rope cutting, lighted cigarets, and a skeleton. Rex Todd with guitar, sang popular songs and novelties. Accompanist Marjorie Davies was a brilliant soloist as well. The artists were introduced by F. L. Ward, K.C., representing Mayor McFarland.

Mrs. Page closed the meeting after which games and contests were enjoyed.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and a social time enjoyed.

The April meeting of Centenary W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. G. Woods with a good attendance. The meeting opened in the usual way.

Mrs. S. Hubble and Mrs. J. Ray contributed to the birthday box. Several letters were read from members who received flowers or cards. It was decided to have a cookie sale later in the season for the flower fund.

Plans were discussed for the catering at Scott's Sales on May 22. A committee was formed to look after same. Mrs. B. Roblin and Mrs. R. Thrasher were nominated as captains for the copper contest. The offering amounted to five dollars.

It is for us all to pray and hope that when making this decision they may seek and choose God's will.

"Such a choice will lead them to many opportunities through which they may be of service to God and to their country and the world. For some, it will lead them into church work. Let us do all in our power to help the young people in our homes and congregations to find God's will in their choice of a life work".

NO LONGER FORCE

St. Louis, April 24 — (AP) — Communism no longer is an effective force in Italy, Mayor Ferdinando Baldelli of Rome said yesterday. Monsegnor Baldelli, president of the Italian Relief Commission, said the great majority of Italian communists joined the party because they were hungry and unemployed. These people have regained confidence in their leaders, he said.

DISCOVER ANCIENT PALACE

New Haven, Conn., April 24 — (AP) — The discovery of the ruins of an ancient palace in Palestine in an Arab farmer's tomato patch was announced here yesterday. Professor James B. Pritchard, of the Yale University faculty, Chester, Pa., placed the scene of the find near old Jericho in the Hashemite Kingdom of Palestine.

Pritchard said the palace, which consisted of 36 rooms around a colonnaded court, dated from the time of Christ and may have been built by King Herod.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Maybe this girl's behavior needs revision

Dear Miss Fairfax:

You may think this is a strange letter, but I have no one else with whom to discuss my problem.

I am 26 years old and very unhappy. I work in an office whose staff is composed mostly of men. They're a fine lot and very good to me. I have lots of energy and laugh and talk a lot. Unfortunately, I have no girl friends, so travel alone most of the time. I have met girls and they like me until we go out with fellows. Then they fight with me or insult me and that ends our friendship. Even the fellows always drop me after a few dates. Do you think a girl who is the life of the party is wrong?

I don't have one friend. Of course I would like to meet a nice fellow who would like to marry me, but I want to know why people in general don't seem to like me.

Carol

Dear Carol:

I'm not sure I can give a very good guess as to why people don't like you, particularly if, as you suggest, you are always the "life of the party". Usually a girl who is friendly and vivacious is popular with men and girls alike. Since you work mostly with men you should by this time have learned how to behave with them so that they like and respect you.

Are you sure that you don't try to be over-friendly with men and give them the impression that you're out to get someone to marry? There's no quicker way to lose men friends than to let them think you're chasing them. If, without knowing it, you have acquired a reputation of this kind, it would explain why you so quickly lose both men and girl friends. Girls don't like man-chasers either.

A sensible thing for you to do would be to find out where there is some club or similar organization you could join where you will have the chance to meet people and have good times with them. I suggest you visit the YWCA in the big city near you and find out what they have to offer. Some sort of hobby club would be a good place for you to start, and most of the "Y" has a variety of such. Once you get interested in some activity it usually opens the way of making all the friends you want. But be sure to revise your behavior if it needs it, so that you'll keep the new friends you make.

Certainly men in the armed forces can marry

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Can a man now in the armed forces be married?

A friend of mine and I wish to marry our boy friends before they are shipped overseas. Both of them are in the Marine Corps.

T. W. F.

Dear T. W. F.:

I have never heard of there being any rule against servicemen getting married. In fact, they get married every day in girls who, like yourselves, want to marry their boy friends before they go away for a long time.

I just want to say, however, that you'd be wise not to do this unless you are perfectly certain that your love for these men will survive a long separation. Too many girls these days are getting married impulsively to boys who are going away, and then they find that after awhile they don't feel the same affection for them. So think it all over very carefully before you take any decisive steps.

Women's Activities

RIVER VALLEY W.M.S.

Rawdon — The president, Mrs. Ralph Utman, entertained River Valley Woman's Missionary Society in Sidney Township for their April meeting. There were 11 members and five visitors in attendance.

Many Calls Made

During the month the members made 18 home calls, eight hospital calls and sent out six cards. Various items of correspondence were read. Each members is asked for a diaper or knitted article suitable for a layette. These to be brought to the May meeting when a parcel for overseas relief will be packed. An invitation to the Mission Band Rally on April 25th., was also read.

Mrs. Alex. Bush prepared the program and presided. She opened with an appropriate poem. Mrs. Ross Bush read the Bible lesson.

The theme, "Recruiting for Full-time Service in the Church," brought out the facts that the United Church has set before its members four great objectives for the first five years in the second quarter century of the W. M. S. history — "Evangelism", "Stewardship"; "Extension" and "Enlistment."

Ministry Candidates

This year there are 530 candidates for the ministry in United Church colleges, the largest number since Union. The future of the church depends on this recruiting of young men and women for full time service and more workers are needed in all parts of Canada and in overseas fields.

Mrs. Ernest Carr read "Prayer is the Soul's Sincere Desire," and a poem entitled "A Mother to Her Son."

Mrs. George Heasman sang "He's the Lily of the Valley."

Mrs. Alex. Bush outlined the study on Japan. Miss Cheryl Utman sang a nice selection and the service closed with a missionary hymn.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Mrs. Don Donohoe extended thanks for hospitality.

COLONIAL SCHOOL

One of the oldest schools in the Commonwealth outside Britain is Harrison College at Barbadoos, founded in 1733.

MARIO ... in his distinctive feature

FOOD ... What's Cooking?

New England hogs weren't afraid of the big bad wolf.

The wild swine which Colonial settlers caught were a fair match for the wolf which had prowled through the forest. The lean speedy hogs were muscular, fearless and tough.

A roast loin of wild swine was rough on a carving knife too. Any roast loin of pork today is easily made tender by either dry roasting or braising.

The loin is unusually tender and tasty when marinaded in a pickling solution before cooking. This is the method used for making sauerbraten. The vinegar, spices and vegetables give a tart flavor to the rich meat. Be sure the meat is thoroughly browned before placing it in the braising pot, since browning develops a rich aroma and flavor.

Pork Pot Roast—Serves 6.

3 lbs. loin of pork
1 cup vinegar
1 cup water
1 piece of celery
1 medium size onion cut in half
2 cloves garlic smashed
2 teaspoons salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
1-2 teaspoon crushed whole sage
1-2 cup brown sugar
Flour
Fat

Have the butcher remove chine bone from pork loin.

Put the meat in a large stone jar or mixing bowl with the vinegar, water, celery, onion, garlic, salt, pepper, sage and brown sugar.

Let the meat remain in the marinade one or two days. Longer marinating will give the meat a more tart flavor.

Remove meat from the marinade. Wipe dry. Rub the meat with flour.

Melt fat to a depth of 1-4 inch in a large frying pan. Brown meat thoroughly on all sides. Transfer the meat to a heavy saucepot fitted with a lid or a Dutch oven.

Strain 1 cup of the marinade and pour over meat. Cook meat, covered, over a slow flame until tender, about 1 1-2 to 2 hours. Add more liquid, if necessary, during cooking. Thicken gravy if desired.

Insulating Lining

By PRUNELLA WOOD

FAIR weather or foul, even right cold weather, will be all in the day's work and well handled by this wool gabardine coat, which is both waterproofed, and made with an insulating lining. The fashion world abounds with miracle yarns, concoctions and processing; the one which insulates this coat is called milium.

With it, the coat fends off chill and keeps body heat hovering close whence it came; contrariwise, when the sun shines hot, milium deflects the sun rays and keeps the body cool. Colors are beige with neutral color lining, or a red lining in either navy or black coat.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Today's toasts are usually short, simple, snappy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) My husband is to be best man at a wedding soon, and he would be so grateful if you would please give him some suggestions for an appropriate toast to give at the wedding breakfast. (2) Is it the custom for the best man to propose a toast at the groom's bachelor dinner? If so, would you also please suggest a fitting toast for this?

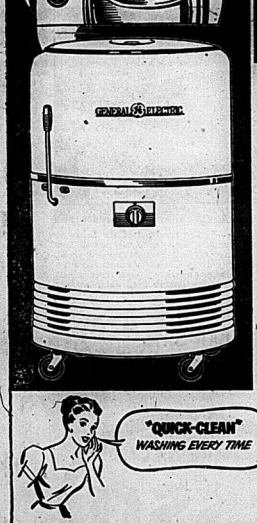
B.

(1) If your husband has any qualms about proposing a toast (as I judge he has), please reassure him by telling him that today practically all toasts are extremely simple. In fact, the proposer-of-the-toast has only to say "To . . . (and then indicate the one to whom the toast is being proposed)." For example, usually it is the best man who proposes the first toast at the wedding reception, the toast to the bride and groom . . . lifting his glass he says, with graciousness and courtly enthusiasm, "To the bride and groom!" Or, "A standing toast, please, . . . to the bride and groom, Helena and Tom, and to their happiness, always." Or, if he's a bit braver, "I want to propose a toast to Helena and Tom, out beautiful bride and handsome groom . . . may they always walk very close with happiness And may we all be with them to celebrate their Golden Wedding!". (2) At the bachelor dinner it is the groom who proposes the first and most important toast . . . "To my future wife!" (The tradition is that, after this toast has been drunk, the glasses are broken, in the fireplace if there is one, or on the floor. . . so that no other toast will ever be drunk from those glasses.) At any time after this ceremonial the best man may propose a toast, "To Helena, now's lovely bride, Tom's Helena, and to tomorrow's bridegroom, our good friend Tom. Here's to their good health, good fortune, their happiness always!"

The question of serving lunch after a funeral

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To me a funeral isn't it taken for granted that a person who has attended the funeral should be invited back to the home of the deceased for lunch os other refreshment. Isn't this the custom?



J. M.

This depends on the circumstances and the family's convenience. For example when some of the relatives and intimate friends of the family must travel a considerable distance to and from, luncheon or tea is usually served, or perhaps dinner, midday or evening, or a simple supper. If, as is usual, these days there is a question of little or no service in the household as well as the sad and difficult hours directly after the funeral service only a simple lunch should be served, and certainly no meal should be expected.

Imperial Oil Proudly Announces the Arrival in Ontario of the First Alberta Crude Oil!

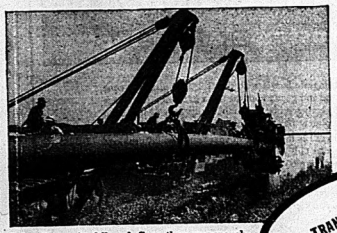
1919: THE SEARCH

Imperial began searching for oil in the Prairies in 1919. Through the 20's, the 30's, the 40's, the search went on from one disappointing location to the next, encouragement being found only at Turner Valley and Fort Norman, N.W.T. Altogether 133 exploratory wells were drilled—all of them dry.

1947: THE DISCOVERY

Then on a cold February day in 1947 a drilling crew found oil and mud spitting out of the hole of the 134th well. The pent-up pressures of an oil field a mile below roared upward. This was the discovery well of the famous Leduc field, near Edmonton—the turning point in Canada's petroleum development.

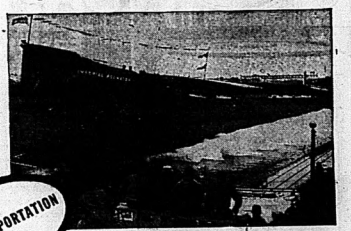
1951: THE ACHIEVEMENT



When the "Imperial Leduc" steamed into Sarnia this week she made important news for all Canadians.

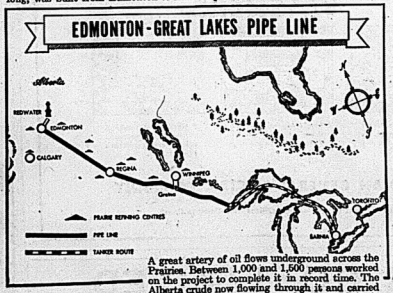
The ship herself was news—the world's largest lake tanker on her maiden voyage. Even greater news was her cargo—the first shipment of Alberta oil into the Ontario market, oil which will soon be made into Imperial ESSO products.

This new market for western crude will increase Canada's oil production by almost a half. It means a further saving in foreign exchange of 40 million dollars. It gives the Prairies a bigger market in the east for crude oil. It helps create a bigger market in the Prairies for what the rest of Canada has to sell. Above all, it makes Canada surer of oil supplies in peace or war.



Before the "Imperial Leduc" discharged her first gallon of oil, over a half a billion dollars had been spent in finding and developing western oil fields, in building the pipeline and the tankers. That spending has fostered new industries, expanded plants, created new jobs across Canada.

The arrival of the "Imperial Leduc" at Sarnia means the beginning of a new chapter in the story of Canada's economic development—a nation more prosperous and more secure.



1950: TRANSPORTATION

Other discoveries followed. Soon there was enough oil for Alberta's needs; then for the rest of the Prairies. To move the oil to larger markets, low-cost transportation was required. In one of the greatest projects of its kind ever undertaken, a pipeline, 1,126 miles long, was built from Edmonton to Lake Superior.

To help carry the oil from the head of the Lakes to Imperial's Sarnia refinery, the keels of two new tankers were laid at Collingwood and Port Arthur shipyards. The ships, built entirely by Canadian labour and from 95 per cent Canadian materials, each cost about $4,000,000. They are the largest fresh-water tankers in the world.

A great artery of oil flows underground across the Prairies. Between 1,000 and 1,500 persons worked on the project to complete it in record time. The Alberta crude now flowing through it and carried by tanker to Sarnia means that soon Ontario consumers will be able to buy Imperial ESSO products made from Canadian crude oil.

HOME FOR STRAYS

The owner of a large brown-ish dog, wearing a collar with the name "Pickey" on it, wishes to have same returned, which is almost too much to hope. I urge him to communicate with this department immediately. Never mind the reward just put "Pickey" back where, if here, that's all the reward I want.

This odd animal is the latest in a long series of misfit hounds who have followed my daughter into this school. Not being a dog lover, I do not know what it is about fido that dogs find so irresistible. There is some mystic attraction.

Any lost canine within a radius of 500 miles can be counted upon to cross paths with the girl and fall into step. A dog looks at Judy and says to itself, "Here is a kid who will understand me. I like this old nut, I happier sort of dog." So fido in turn, for a limitless capacity of affection for any stray, it is an awful combination.

Most pets, I like dogs. In spite of everything, I like dogs. If any reasonably alert and intelligent animal were to come a wounded lion and I noticed that paws were beginning to peer out from nearby bushes.

I fired one shot across Dickey's bows as a warning but the mad dog simply bounded after the shot, lifted in his mouth, trotted proudly back and put the stone at my feet.

We walked slowly back to the house. "Dickey" took up the position pointed face that wears a look of perpetual pleading.

Any tracing of his family lineage would clearly be impossible. There seems to be squatter's rights on the chesterfield, I retired to my room with the volume of the Encyclopedia Britannica containing the chapters on lethal poisons and that is the situation at this moment.

Along I would be willing to offer my hospitality and perhaps even a cursory pat on the head.

But my daughter's Pied Piper spell somehow does not seem to affect normal dogs. It works only with lunatic dogs.

"Dickey" is not the craziest by any means, although, he himself, is crazier than a hundred head of sheep.

She once brought home a strange creature, name of "Maggie," with the appearance of a hyena, which sits cement. I had several bags of cement in the garage for a patio I was constructing and this dog kept going out there and licking the cement. Couldn't get enough of it! Had to have cement!

I must say I encouraged this even opening a bag and putting a little in a pan, with the wild hope that it would turn to concrete inside, as diabolic a plan for getting rid of a dog as I ever heard.

But "Maggie" thrived on the stuff and while her pups were the exact shade of my patio she never once showed signs of hardening.

He Won't Go

I have made the customary futile attempts to get rid of "Dickey." On the morning after his arrival I banished the rest of the family by indicating a sudden vast affection for their heart, pulling it on the mane and romping heavily with it in the back yard.

The Case of the Divided Household

ONLY A SHORT TIME AGO Mary had been working in this home . . . Mary, so efficient and capable. But then came the illness that took her away. And, afterwards, the bills to pay for that tragic event. The bills Jim was only partly able to meet. Worse still, now, his earnings did not allow for a housekeeper to care for the home and the children.

So Jim had tried to look after both jobs himself. But day by day it had become more plain that it wouldn't work. Now, at last, he was forced to make the bitter decision. He must give up their rented home and send the children away to relatives. The once happy family would now be completely divided.

If only Mary and he had taken the precaution of insuring Mary's life. The children and he could have kept on living together while he worked out a happier solution. Instead, they now faced a cruel separation which could have been prevented.

Think! Could this happen to your family?

Quebec Citadelles Out of Further Memorial Cup Play

Management Refuses to Play Seventh Game in Barrie If Series Went That Far

Quebec, April 24 — (CP) — A Canadian Amateur Hockey Association official took the owner of the Quebec Citadelles at his word early today and washed the Citadelles out of further Memorial Cup competition.

The move gave Barrie Flyers the eastern Canada junior hockey championship.

Thus Quebec Citadelles and their rave-winning centre, Jean Beliveau, are on the sidelines. Only last week they deadlocked the best-of-seven series at two games apiece, recovering from two earlier defeats.

W. B. George, C. A. H. A. first vice-president, declared Barrie the winner in a telephoned statement from his home in Kemptville, Ont.

"The Quebec Citadelles have elected to drop out of further Memorial Cup competition," George said. "Barrie Flyers are declared the eastern winners and will proceed into Memorial Cup finals.

"This decision har been due to the arrangement made to play the seventh and deciding game if necessary on the Barrie club ice. This would have, in effect, made the locale of the games of the series: one game in Toronto, three games in Barrie and three games in Quebec City."

Decision Irrevocable

An hour earlier, Frank Byrne, Citadelles' owner, had said his decision not to play the seventh game in Barrie was "irrevocable." He said the Cits would drop out of the series if Barrie remained the venue.

The only concession Byrne was willing to make was that he might consider having the game played in Montreal.

George said the decision to award the eastern junior hockey championship to Barrie was agreed to after consultation with C. A. H. A. president Doug Grimston of New Westminster, B. C.

George said the dates and venues for the Memorial Cup final will be decided as soon as a winner is declared in the Winnipeg Monarchs-Regina Pats series.

Byrne said the Barrie rink did not come up to the regulation standards in the matter of dimensions.

Before George's decision was announced, Byrne said he would hold the C. A. H. A. responsible for any loss the Quebec club might suffer by dropping out of the final.

First and Second All-Star Teams To be Opponents

Toronto, April 24 (CP) —The National Hockey League's next all-star game will put the first all-star team against the second for the first time, Conny Smythe announced Monday.

The game, a benefit for the league's player pension fund, will be played in Toronto because the Maple Leafs won the Stanley Cup this season, the Toronto manager told a press conference.

Players from the two Canadian teams in the NHL would be used to bolster one of the all-star clubs and the other would get its extra players from the four United States teams. The coaches will be selected after announcement of the makeup of the two all-star teams. In previous all-star games, the all-star teams played the Stanley Cup champions.

In keeping with Toronto tradition, the team which won the Stanley Cup championship won't be broken up for the next season although Smythe said he'd like to get a good checking centre and a high-scoring right wing.

"I don't think Joe will quit," he said of reports that coach Joe Primeau might retire after guiding the Leafs to the cup and bringing them home second in the league race in his first year as a professional coach.

Smythe thought his club had two all-time greats. Kennedy was the greatest playoff centre and centre Max Bentley the greatest point man—key spot on the power play the Leafs used when they had the opposition short-handed.

Development of the ganging attack—coupled with penalty-killing play— had been one of Primeau's main assignments. The playoff record indicated his success. The Leafs tallied five goals with the oppositon short-handed and had been scored on once when they had penalties.

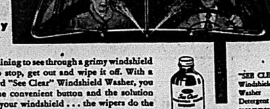
Broda was the first man signed for next season although the veteran goalie—who will be 37 next month—would be carried as a utility man with Rollins the regular netminder. The club planned a Broda night to honor the fabulous fat man who would probably start in that game.

Referee Calls Bout a Draw, Cantor Injured

Toronto, April 24 — (CP) — Referee Sammy Luftspring stopped a scheduled 10-round main bout of a boxing card in the eighth Monday night and called at a draw between Dave Shade, 134, Charleston, W. Va., and Solly Castor, 136, Toronto. The referee said Cantor was far ahead on points when the two fighters butted their heads and opened an old cut over the Toronto man's eye.

In the semi-final, George Sinclair, 124, Toronto, scored a unanimous six-round decision over Tommy Corrick, 127, Toronto.

Results:



Bryne Kelly, 139, Niagara Falls, Ont., six-round decision over Don Ward, 129¾, Gary, Ind.

Davey Mitchell, 131¾, Toronto, and Frankie Betts, 138½, Albany, N.Y., draw. (Referee stopped bout in second when Mitchell suffered head cuts.)

Gord Wallace, 160, Brantford, scored a technical knockout over Boble Dary, 159¾, Detroit, at 2.20 of second round.

Minor hockey will ring down the curtain in a blaze of en ertainment glory in Memorial Arena tomorrow night when the junior, juvenile, midget and bantam young bloods will be the guests of the Belleville Hockey Association at a get - together.

Gus Bodnar, former Toronto Maple Leaf and now of the Chicago Black Hawks will be the guest speaker and along with Gus will come Chief Eastern Scout of the Chihawks, Bob Wilson.

According to BHA prexy Ken McNaught, the boys are in for an evening's fun and will be shown motion pictures of famous hockey games and other entertainment besides eats.

McNaught said yesterday that the function will be thrown open to the public especially parents of the youthful puckists, but he wants it distinctly understood that other youngsters must be accompanied by their parents. It will be an excellent opportunity to see the organization machinery of the BHA in action, and parents and other adults should not miss what should be quite a party.

Our "feudin' pal" Michael J. Rodden of Kingston strides to the columnar plate with a blazing criticism of the "lack of balance" in the hockey situation last season. Amateur, that is. Says Michael with respect to the Senior "B" set-up:

"Amid the confusion that has existed since the launching of the campaigns last autumn Peterborough experts had it that the Markham Millionaires were very potent but, sad to relate, that bubble was smashed when the Markhams, after eliminating Nylons in six games, tangled with the Brantford Burtols and in two tests were crushed by 11 to 2 and 11 to 1. Where those Burtols have been hiding, no one seems to know but they must be considerably stronger than senior 'B' rating would suggest."

Don Migual also lashes out at the Junior "B" set-up with these remarks:—

"A similar lack of balance has been exposed in the OHA junior "B" with power being wielded by too few. The Westons, a Toronto Maple Leaf farm team, indicated recently while demolishing the Kingston Vics that they are stronger than their official rating suggests. Many lighter and vastly weaker machines have operated in the junior "A" races down the years.

"Owners of professional clubs who operate clubs in the co-called amateur fold can and will cause plenty of trouble by packing teams and making a joke of keen competition. History shows that they gained independent command of the junior 'A' series and made it imperative that the less fortunate 'simon-pure' organizations must retreat to the 'B' series. But now the 'B' series is getting the same treatment and clubs caught in the backwash will no doubt eventually elect to drop to "C" depths.

* * *

"School teams composed of bona-fide students formerly operated in what is now designated as the junior 'A' series and some of them, notably University of Toronto Schools St. Michael's College, Upper Canada College, St. Andrew's College, De La Salle Collegiate Institute, scaled championship heights. But now all those institutions have fallen to 'B' rating and only St. Michael's also ices junior 'A' teams.

"In the smaller centres clubs operate under a terrific and unfair handicap in that they have no control over futurities as they affect players. When a rose blooms it is quickly plucked and carried away in triumph by one of the numerous scouts who are not imbued with civic pride. It is a circle not lacking in viciousness or personal greed.

Getting to the root of the matter, it would seem that a gent dubbed "Mammon" is at the bottom of the business. We know a junior "A" player who sought the faraway long-green pastures and collected over $80 a week. Operators in the smaller centres cannot begin to compete with the mazuma - lined gentry of the larger communities who have plenty of money or are blessed with "sugar - daddies" whose only demand is "get the best you can", and then go out and get better.

It is perfectly obvious that even the minor lads are getting itchy palms. It has been said that Canadian kids are born with a hockey stick in their hands. In the near future you might see your newly-born hockey hopeful reaching out for the traditional stick with one chubby fist—and a five-dollar bill with the other.

Heard yesterday through Wally Bent that Bob Shaughnessy, a third baseman, out of Oshawa is in this district in connection with the RCAF. Shaughnessy, it appears, played with the Oshawa seniors in the Viaduct League and the year previous with a team in the Quebec Professional Outlaw Loop. Says he would like to play here.

DATES FOR GAMES

Montreal, April 24 — (CP) — Dates for further games in the Valleyfield - Sydney Eastern Canada Alexander Cup final were announced Monday by Wilfrid Duranceau, president of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association and representative of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The teams will meet at Montreal Forum tonight, Thursday night and Sunday night. Previous consideration of an afternoon game for Sunday was discarded.

If a seventh game in the best-of-seven series is necessary, the date will be fixed later.

Sydney leads the series 2-1.

Western Canada Junior Final To Seventh Game

Winnipeg, April 24 — (CP) — Regina Pats, on the brink of elimination, last night came back to down Winnipeg Monarchs 2-1 and force at least a seventh game in their western Canada junior hockey final.

Gordie Cowan's third-period goal—his second of the night—broke a 1-1 deadlock and left the defending western champions with still another chance to retain their title. Monarchs still lead the best-of-seven series three games to two, with one game tied. Seventh game is scheduled here Wednesday.

It was the first victory for Pats on Winnipeg ice after breaking even in three games at home. Pats won the opener 3-1. The second was tied 5-5 in overtime, and the Monarchs took the third 2-1. Winnipeg then won the next two at home. 2-0 and 5-2.

Pats beat Monarchs at their own game—skating hard both ways—and outshot the homesters 29-20. Goalie Bob Tyler turned in a standout performance, especially in the final frame, against Monarchs. Defenceman Don Johnson scored Winnipeg's lone counter in the first period—24 seconds after Cowan had given Regina a 1-0 lead at 14:00.

Al King and Bernie Grebinsky turned in a solid chore on the Regina defence, while Brian McDonald, Bun Smith, Eddie Litzenburger and Billy Papp skated hard on the attack and defensively.

Johnny Novak, Laurie Mitchell, Bruce Bell and Don Johnston, along with goalkeeper Don Collins were the pick of the Monarchs.

Out in Front

Cowan's two goals put him in front of the scoring during the series. He has potted five goals, followed by four each by Monarchs' Zarie and Laurie Mitchell.

Cowan's winning counter came at 1:36 in the third period while Johnston was off for holding. Pats put on a power play, with Litzenburger passing to Tony Schneider, who relayed to Cowan. The shifty first-string centre made no mistake with his eight-foot backhand shot to the top left corner.

Play was ragged in the remainder of the third period, with Monarchs drawing the better of the scoring chances, although outshot 13-8. Elliott Chorley raised the 5,000 fans' hopes when he sent the puck into the net around the three-quarter mark of the last period, but the officials ruled he had kicked the puck into the net. Tyler was at his mercy when the puck went in. Pats played it close after that and checked Monarchs into the ice until the final whistle.

Monarchs drew six of the nine penalties called during the game.

CANADIAN SPORTS PARADE

FOR Canada, television is just around the corner. Already a faint frenzy of preparation is noticeable in many quarters this side of the border but so far we haven't heard any great predictions as to the future of televised sport in the Dominion. As Canada (per capita) is recognized as the world's greatest sporting nation, it is unlikely that sport on television will be ignored very long. Now that the greatest spectator medium in history is almost here, with its golden opportunity for "selling" Canadianism through sport, let us run through our Canadian sporting activities and consider their possibilities as TV sports events.

Keep Hockey Canadian

Foremost on Canadian television, of course, should be hockey. Hockey offers us the greatest national sport "platform" in the coming international struggle for televiewers on both sides of the border. As in radio, many Canadians will constantly be sampling the sport products from across the line, while the Americans themselves will be more than ever curious about our sporting activities. Television offers us, as a nation, a truly tremendous opportunity.

Ice hockey is Canadian, created and played by Canadians. Gradually the NHL should supplant its American franchises (Boston-New York-Chicago-Detroit) and transfer these teams to Canadian cities say, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Regina and Vancouver. The cost of maintaining the teams will indirectly be shared by the advertisers anyway, so there is no problem there.

International Hockey

With adequate salaries and opportunities here at home, most of our youngsters could play for Canadian teams, thereby creating a national spirit of competition. The American cities which have encouraged hockey (and where the game is reported slipping) would be obliged to gradually train and develop their own hockey players, thereby creating an international spirit of competition. That, for hockey, would be all to the good.

Eventually, then, as millions of us (on both sides of the border) watch the Stanley Cup final, we shall see Canadians playing for Canada against Americans playing for the United States (NHL US-Division) in the greatest hockey play-off of all time. We think we're right in saying our American cousins would prefer it that way. There would be no lack of interest then. All that is needed is for us to televise hockey at its best and the American nation will soon go for it. Anyone who has had experience of international competition understands the difference between playing for a team and playing for your country. If seen by enough American televiewers, hockey might easily catapult past baseball and football as a popular attraction.

Football—Lacrosse—Wrestling

Our game of football should endeavour to retain what is left of its individuality for the era of television, but as the Americans originally adopted their football from ours, there seems to be little profit in trying to sell them our fairly similar Canadian game.

With television to popularize lacrosse, the ancient Indian game may very well become once again a top sporting attraction. And the mourners for Canadian track and field sports will be throwing a party instead, if they play their cards correctly with the powers-that-be in television.

Wrestling has become a stand-out attraction on the American TV networks, so its success in Canada is assured. Our only suggestion is that Frank Tunney and the other Canadian wrestling promoters follow the national trend. Tunney could come up with a whole galaxy of Canadian wrestlers suitably titled. Imagine such drawing cards as the "Brampton Benumber", the "Terrible Torontonian", the "Ottawa Ostrich" and perhaps the 'Kitchener Kook'.

All in all, the possibilities of Canadian sport in television are unlimited. It's a golden opportunity Canada, as a nation, simply cannot afford to miss.

Stellar Relief Pitching Gives Dodgers Head Start In National League Race

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Ralph Kiner, Pafko, Branca and Newcombe—not a Brooklyn law firm but the Dodgers' answer to Jim Konstanty.

As brilliant as Konstanty was last year when he helped Philadelphia to the pennant and won the National League's most valuable player award his rescue work never matched the sensational relief pitching of this quartet.

The season is only a week old, but the four already have been credited with three relief victories! Better yet, they have pitched 13 innings all told (excluding Don Newcombe's route-going effort against the New York Giants), without surrendering a run. Only three hits have been made off them.

Dodger manager Chuck Dressen is chortling with glee as his charges sit comfortably on top of the National League standings with five victories in six starts.

Ex-Pafko and winner Clyde King hurled 4 2-3 innings of excellent relief ball yesterday as the Dodgers outlasted Boston Braves 9-1 in a 16-inning marathon. Carl Furillo singled home the winning run. Warren Spahn went all the way to lose a 10-hit heart-breaker.

The triumph maintained the Dodgers' half-game lead over Chicago Cubs, who nipped Pittsburgh 3-1 on a ninth-inning double by Andy Pafko that scored Phil Cavarretta.

Phils Beat Giants

The Phils handed the Giants their fifth successive defeat with an 8-4 victory under the Philadelphia lights to gain their first triumph over Jim Hearn since he came up to the majors in 1947. The righthander had whipped the Phils nine times. Rookie Jocko Thompson held the Giants to six hits.

Vic Raschi pitched New York Yankees to a 3-1 victory over Philadelphia for his second success of the American League season and his 17th lifetime victory in 18 decisions with the Athletics.

Vic Wertz' ninth-inning home run with two males aboard gave Detroit Tigers a 7-4 triumph over St. Louis Browns in the only other American League game. The other clubs were not scheduled.

Cards Shade Reds

In another after-dark National League clash, the Cardinals shaded Cincinnati Reds 4-3 in St. Louis. Veteran Harry Brecheen scattered eight hits to beat Ken Raffensberger. Stanley Musial accounted for both St. Louis runs with a single and triple.

The flawless Firemen roles of Phillie and King for Brooklyn followed on the heels of a hitless and scoreless three-inning stint by Newcombe and a shorter one of 1 1-3 innings by Palica Sunday. Ralph Branca duplicated Newcombe's performance, also at the expense of the Giants Saturday. In last Tuesday's opener against the Phils, it was King who came through with a two-inning effort in which he allowed no runs and only one hit in a losing cause.

Players Choose Same Executive As Last Season

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton's lacrosse schemozzle has been straightened out.

With two factions attempting to get control of the franchise for the Hamilton team, the players settled the matter at a weekend meeting when they chose last year's executive.

The meeting was called by the old executive and nine players from last year's senior Hamilton Tigers signed contracts.

The lacrosse tangle started about a month ago when it was rumored that last year's executives wouldn't apply for renewal of the franchise. A new executive was formed and was reported to have the backing of the players—until the weekend meeting.

Two American-owned horses have been named as definite starters for the 2,000 guineas, first of the English classic races, to be run over the straight mile at Newmarket May 2.

They are William Woodward's Turco II and Mrs. J. F. C. Hyde's North Carolina, both three-year-old bay colts.

Professional Golfer Association champions of Canada, Mexico and Argentina may be invited to play in the $45,000 Professional Golfers Association tournament at Oakmont June 27-July 3.

Joseph Smith of Detroit, secretary of the PGA said the step is under consideration to cement international fairway relations injured somewhat by the fining of several American pros for playing in the Mexican Open.

At Richmond, Calif., long-hitting Babe Didrickson Zaharias, Women's National Open champion, led the field again Monday in her latest tournament. She won the $5,000 Richmond Open with a 54-hole total of 224.

Mrs. Zaharias toured the Richmond course in 38-37—75, women's par. She had previous rounds of 78-72, being tied for second place after the first day and tied for the lead yesterday.

The Tampa, Fla., professional won $750 for the performance and increased her total earnings for the winter country-wide tour to $3,750.

At Capetown, Bobby Locke, crack South African professional said Monday he will play in the United States Open Golf championship tournament at Birmingham, Mich., June 14-16. He plans to leave for England today.

From Detroit he returns to England to defend the British Open crown.

Charles Venable, Newark lightweight boxer, suffered a possible brain concussion Moday night when he was felled by a roundhouse right in the last round of a preliminary four-rounder.

Dr. Max Stern of the State Athletic Commission made the diagnosis after Venable regained consciousness in his dressing room.

At hospital, a doctor said "he's all right. There's nothing wrong with him." He confirmed the possible concussion diagnosis and said Venable would be kept at the hospital over night for observation.

Boxer Hits Head On Ring Floor But Comes Around

Newark, N.J., April 24 (AP) — Lightweight Charles Venable who lost consciousness for 15 minutes last night after being kayoed at Laurel Garden, was reported in fair condition today.

The 137 - pound Newark Negro was carried from the ring on a stretcher and taken to hospital for observation shortly after Jack (The Bat) Nicholson floored him with a wild roundhouse right.

Dr. Max Stern of the New Jersey State Athletic Competition, who was at the ringside, said Venable suffered a possible brain concussion.

A city hospital official confirmed the diagnosis but said Venable was "all right." "There's nothing wrong with him," he added.

Thousands of fight fans in the New York - Metropolitan area saw the bout on television.

Nicholson, 140, scored with his right at 2:25 of the last round of a scheduled four-round prelim. Venable dropped to the canvas, hitting his head as he fell.

Dr. Stern treated Venable in the ring and then ordered him removed to the dressing room where he regained consciousness 15 minutes later. Stern said Venable was able to answer questions and appeared lucid.

Syracuse Chiefs And Baltimore Tied for Lead

(By The Associated Press)

Jake Schmitt, 25-year-old lefthander who burned up the three-eye league in 1950, is off to a brilliant start in the triple-A International League.

Schmitt made an impressive debut for Baltimore Orioles last night, beating Ottawa Giants 7-0 in the second game of a double-header. The Orioles also won the opener 3-2 in extra innings.

Schmitt stopped the Giants on seven hits, walked three and fanned 10. Last year he won 21 and lost 5 for Terre Haute. He hurled 23 complete games, fanned 202 and walked only 83 in 238 innings.

The Orioles clubbed Charley Bishop and Alex Konikowski for 11 hits. Buddy Hicks led the way, driving in four runs on a homer and single.

Lou Fosschi limited the Giants to three safeties in the eight-inning opener. Home runs by Stan Jok and Bill Metzig accounted for both Giant runs. The Orioles won with two runs in the eighth. Marv Rickert homered for the tying run.

The double triumph enabled Baltimore to tie Syracuse Chiefs for first place. The Chiefs laced Toronto Maple Leafs 9-2. Art Hartley limited the Leafs to five blows while his mates accumulated 11 of four Toronto pitchers.

Rudy Minarcin, rookie righthander, pitched Buffalo Bisons to a three-hit 10-0 victory over Springfield Cubs. The Bisons belted a trio of Springfield pitchers for 13 hits. Minarcin also collected three hits and drove in three runs. Montreal and Rochester were idle.

Uncle Miltie Will Not Start In the Derby

New York, April 24 (AP) — The vanguard of Kentucky Derby hopefuls winged southward today, but not Uncle Miltie, the unpredictable colt whose name was on everybody's lips two weeks ago.

Owner Joseph J. Colando said so definitely late last night, ending 12 hours of confusion over the status of the former Derby favorite.

"We've got to rest him and freshen him up a bit," said Colando in announcing that Uncle Miltie wouldn't answer the bugle call at Louisville's Churchill Downs May 5.

At first yesterday Colando's son and horse trainer, Dr. Andrew C. Colando, said Miltie wouldn't run. Then owner Colando said that wasn't so—Miltie might. They'd wait a few days.

Then, with everybody thoroughly confused, the elder Colando finally made it unanimous—no Derby for Uncle Miltie.

"We've run and worked him too much," he said. "He's lost weight. But he'll be ready for the Preakness May 12. We won't run him until then."

The trim-flanked colt named for comedian Milton Berle had the misfortune of reaching his peak too quickly.

He looked so good in running off and leaving Battlefield and Big Stretch in his eastern three-year-old debut at Jamaica April 9 that he was listed 10 days ago as a 5-2 Derby favorite.

But, backed down to short odds he finished eighth in the Experimental Handicap No. 2 April 14 and wound up in the same position in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica Saturday.

Meanwhile, two leading principals in the wide-open Derby field— Repetoire and Sonic — caught a plane today for the Blue Grass country. Battle Morn departs tomorrow.

Count Turf was supposed to take off today also but turned up with a scratched tendon. Trainer Sol Rutchick said he won't take him south unless the horse is fully well. He should know in 48 hours, he said.

San Jr. Mateo, Tom Markel and Brookfield Farms' Intent already have been pulled out of the big race.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

I like Elva Tyme and her questions. For my doubt she asks all the best ones. An expert, with ego implanted, infers and takes too much for granted.

Less skillful bridge players are not quickly convinced of the unusual conventions. So, much time and space was spent on overcall in opponent suit. After today I switch to other defence bids.

An immediate overcall in an opponent suit makes two promises. First, it says it can make game in something. Second, it says it will lose no tricks in the suit opponents has mentioned.

If you can make a game, it makes no difference how or in which other tricks you lose. If so, why is it necessary to tell partner no tricks will be lost in the opponent bid suit.

The reason is this: A powerful game hand is not concerned solely with making games. Lurking therein are slam possibilities. Making a slam may depend on what partner knows.

So far as partner knows, opponent who bid the suit may have a couple of tricks in it. In that case, slam is as good as dead in a hurry. Even if all other suits are impregnable.

But suppose partner has what it takes to make slam in another suit. He must be told there is no fear in opponent bid. He can then invite slam with confidence if the other suits are safe.

Act 84 if you had the west hand shown here:

♠ A K Q 9
♥ A K 6 3
♦ Q 7 6 4 3
♣ None

South starts the bidding in this deal with one club. It is not yet advisable for you to bid one of your suits. First say two clubs.

This overcall in opponent suit tells partner no tricks will be lost in clubs. It says you can make game if trumps are in one of the other suits. He has heard you say so.

Rules that make good sense give you confidence.

AT THE CAPITOL — Chico Marx does some improvising in "Duck Soup", showing today and Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre. Harpo and Groucho, of course, are very much present. On the same program, Paramount's thundering romance of winning the West, "Wells Fargo," stars Joel McCrea, Robert Cummings and Frances Dee.

AT THE BELLE — Ricardo Montalban and Jane Powell share the romantic spotlight in "Two Weeks With Love," M.G.M.'s terrific heart-warming Technicolor musical. Louis Calhern and Ann Harding are also starred in the new offering, continuing today and Wednesday. "The M.G.M. Story" is an added attraction.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 24 (AP) — He was a far cry from the suave, slick-haired Cesar Romero of yore.

He had the same Latin dash but now he looked more distinguished, with handsome streaks of grey in his black hair. He appeared that way for his role in "East Continental," and he sported at the idea of dyeing his hair black.

"Why should I?" he asked. "This is the way my hair is, and this is how it's going to stay."

I remarked that other actors, such as Spencer Tracy and Cary Grant, allowed their hair to grey, too.

"That makes sense," remarked the Latin from Manhattan. "I'm 44 and I'm not going to play juveniles any more. Grant is a few years older than I am and Tracy is in his 50s."

Some Dye

Others who take no pains to disguise their grey hair: Clark Gable, Humphrey Bogart, Ronald Colman, Dick Powell, James Stewart, Barbara Stanwyck.

Romero laughed about one actor who has kept the dye pots busy for more than a decade. "He's not fooling anybody but himself," Romero remarked.

"I remember another actor who was a big star aliPre when I was there in the old days. He was 50 then but he still wanted to play romantic leads. He was dyeing his hair and trying to keep his figure.

"At that time he was worried because the studio wanted him to take a role as Tyrone Power's father. He wouldn't do it." The star soon declined to B pictures.

Romero has been doing all right since he left 20th-Fox a year or so ago. He went to Europe for "Happy Go Lovely" with Vera-Ellen and the film is being hailed as one of the brightest musicals to come from British Isles.

SCHNURR A HOLDOUT

Kitchener, April 24 — (CP) — Playing Manager Don Gallinger of Kitchener Legionnaires said Monday Bobby Schnurr, pitcher-infielder and former playing manager is a holdout.

Schnurr said he refused a $900 cut. He asked to be traded but Legionnaires are not making any decision on this point.

Gallinger said Schnurr was asking as much for playing four months this season with the Inter-County Baseball Association senior club as he received for five months last season. Gallinger said salaries had been slashed in an effort to avoid further financial losses. Last season, he said, the club lost $9,000.

FORT FRANCES ON WAY

Fort Frances, Ont., April 24 — (CP) — Fort Frances Canadians, Ontario Western Canada senior hockey champions, left Monday for Owen Sound, where they will meet Owen Sound Mercurys in a best-of-seven series for the Allan Cup and the Dominion title.

Canadians won the western title by eliminating Manitoba's Letellier Maple Leafs in three straight games in a semi-final playoff. They went on to sidetrack Nanaimo Clippers, winners against Edmonton Mercurys in another semi-final event, 4-1.

Owen Sound took the eastern title Sunday, defeating Dolbeau Castors from Quebec, 3-1 in games.

FATHER DIES

He is survived by his widow and his son.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.)

New York, April 24 — (AP) — An early report from the Pacific Coast Baseball League lists about 30 rookie standouts this spring, with every club except Hollywood getting its share. From this distance, the one who impresses is Jim Marshall, playing first base for Oakland. . . . Jim drove in 17 runs in his first 19 games and he won't be 19 years old until May 30. . . . Jerry Jones is hopeful of importing featherweight Roy Ankrah, who hails originally from Africa's Gold Coast, for a shot at Sandy Saddler's title. The catch is that Roy has with the British Empire championship from Ronnie Clayton first. . . . Ankrah is the lad who throws so many punches — mostly misses — that a London sports writer tried to count them. After tallying 213 in two rounds the scribe gave up.

Re Sheulds Been Pitching

In the recent Oklahoma U. - Oklahoma Aggies ball game, Joe Buck, the Aggie slugger, batted two home runs and a double his first three times up. . . . On his fourth appearance, Joe drew four wide pitches, then one that was close. . . . Umpire Hugh Willingham sang out "Ball four" and the Oklahoma catcher beefed mildly. . . . The next one also was close but the ump ruled it ball four. . . . "You sure put him in base that time," the backstop complained. . . . "They were close," Willingham admitted. "But you gotta give me credit for one thing — I held him to one base."

WHY WE SAY

. . . Named after beer
This choice cut of beef got its name from the place where it was traditionally served. In the early days of New York this cut of beefsteak was quite often served in taverns where porter (a very dark-brown beer) was sold.

GOVT.

As for the lack of additional taxes on liquor, he believed the limit had been reached where additional levies would mean diminished revenue. Substantially-high taxes on liquor would serve only to encourage bootlegging.

House Given New Angle

John Sinnott (L—Springfield) gave the government a new angle on how to lick inflation. He suggested it give industrial and agricultural producers a 25 per cent concession on their 1951 taxes on all they produce over and above their 1951 output. This would encourage farmers and workers "to get out and work."

To finance food subsidies, he proposed new taxes of two cents an ounce on hard liquor, one cent an ounce on wine and a further levy, to be worked out later, on each glass of beer.

George Hees (PC— Toronto Broadview) proposed a new health insurance scheme that would take the something-for-nothing out of socialized medicine.

He suggested the patient pay 25 per cent of his medical bills directly, with the remaining 75 per cent being met out of a national health fund to which all Canadians would contribute. This would ensure that only those who really need medical treatment will apply for help under the scheme.

John Charlton (PC—Brant-Wentworth) asked the government to make wider use of the Agricultural Prices Support Act to ensure farmers of an adequate return for their produce and to stimulate the output of food.

Difficult to Enthuse

Dan Riley (L-St. John-Albert) said it is difficult for people of the Maritimes to become enthused about the St. Lawrence Seaways project when their own transportation problems receive little support.

He said the Royal Commission on transportation in its recent report had recommended against constructing any of the Gaspe canal. The canal would cut through the isthmus of land joining Nova Scotia to New Brunswick and separating the gulf of St. Lawrence from the bay of Fundy.

Mr. Riley said he is not opposed to the St. Lawrence Seaway project, but he finds it difficult to become enthusiastic about it when the transportation commission raised such opposition to the Chignecto Canal.

W.J. Browne, Progressive Conservative member for the Newfoundland constituency of St. John's West, verbally rapped over the knuckles Canada's Minister of Defence Claxton for criticising United States foreign policy.

Said Mr. Browne representative of the one Canadian province where the U.S. has long-term leases on defence bases:

"The statement of other countries, whose contributions do not compare with those of the United States, I think should be taken from publicly rebuking the United States for performing the duties which leadership of that nature requires."

No Reference to Bases

(In a recent speech in Toronto, External Affairs Minister Pearson said the United States should not take it for granted that Canada will follow her in all foreign policy decisions).

Mr. Browne made no reference to the defence bases held in Newfoundland as a result of 99-year leases granted by Britain before the island colony became a Canadian province in 1949. But he did not say that without United States there probably would be no United Nations.

He added:

"If it had not been for the action of the United States, Korea now would be under Communist control, and it is quite feasible that communist forces would have since invaded Formosa or even Japan.

"Because of the magnificent leadership of the United States in world affairs, I think it was rather surprising that the secretary of state for externals affairs should speak as he recently did in Toronto. Some country must take the lead in upholding the principals of international justice and the morality. What nation is better qualified to do that than the United States which, for several years past, has been distributing largess to all the nations of the world with a lavish hand from its vast resources!"

Bevan's speech, said the Daily Telegraph, "has undoubtedly alienated much sympathy that might have been his."

The News Chronicle said "By the time he had finished his speech . . . it seemed clear that the feeling of the House was against him."

Joining with Labor members in the Parliamentary cold shoulder were Winston Churchill's Conservatives, who have been lashed by Bevan too often to give them any affection for the rebel, despite any damage he may do their Socialist opponents.

Bevan told the Commons he quit the cabinet to protest the government's new budget. He said the United States had dragged Britain into a ruinous arms drive which might bring more chaos than could the communists themselves.

JUNIOR

The Bevanites and the regular party men left the meeting still at odds, But both sides seemed determined to avoid doing anything which would cause Attlee's downfall.

Most observers feel now that Attlee can hold his thin margin of power in the House of Commons at least until autumn.

But it also seems certain that the struggle for power inside the Labor party will become more bitter.

The Daily Herald, usually up on cabinet development, predicted that Aneurin Bobens, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Fuel, will replace Bevan as Labor Minister. It said Sir Hartley Shawcross, now Attorney - General, will replace Wilson on the Board of Trade, and that Solicitor - General Sir Frank Soskice will become Attorney - General.

Bevan's anti - American speech found few sympathizers in the Commons yesterday.

House Against Him

The Daily Express said the fiery Socialist veteran from the Welsh coal - fields "was heard in a silence broken only by one half - muttered 'Hear! Hear!' The Express called the speech a "frizzling flop."

"Tom, we've got our telephone!"

"I just had to call you and tell you the good news."

It's a big event for us too—and it is taking place in homes and offices, in cities and villages every day—bringing more and better telephone service to more and more people.

In the past five years we've connected over one and a half million telephones to meet new requests for service. We've added well over two million miles of wire to carry the ever growing volume of local and Long Distance calls.

In fact we've packed as much growth into the past five years as we did in the first fifty years of our history.

We're going right on with the job. If you haven't service, we want you to know we're working at it. Your place on the list is being protected and your telephone will be installed just as soon as possible.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

Paul Panciera's comment on Tim's announcement that he had been thinking of forming a dress design firm of his own was immediate. "Naturally, Mr. Reese," he said. "With your talent for design you will have no great difficulties. Especially if you have Miss Roland with you." Then, Mr. Panciera added casually, "only the business end might possibly prove a problem."

"I imagine you can always hire someone for a job like that," Tim Reese replied.

"The right man is not always at hand, I am sorry to say. If you saw a place for me in the firm—if firm there is going to be — I could very well conduct the business end for you."

"I might be able to use you at that." Tim, looking him over carefully, nodded. "I'll probably need someone to front for me. That's not in my line."

Mr. Panciera disguised his elation. "I shall be happy to be at your service," Mr. Reese," he said with a little bow.

At that instant, as Mr. Panciera was speaking, Tim, glancing about the room, discovered the tiny gold mannequin on the table where Mr. Panciera had put it the night before.

Dramatically, the little mannequin held his gaze. This was what Mr. Panciera was going to send him, while here it was before him, here where apparently it belonged.

The gold mannequin was a small thing, but as Tim stared at it, it grew until it hugely and brutally dominated his entire consciousness. Slowly, it became for him a massive corroboration of the suspicion of lying and deceit he had entertained at the ball.

Now, gradually, Tim saw the man in the room, something he had not seen at first because of his fascination with the many pictures of Jean Roland.

Now Tim saw the man's easy chair by the table that held the gold mannequin. He saw the cedarwood cigar humidor on the lower shelf of the table. He saw the book of sporting prints near the humidor. He saw other awards on the mantle of the fireplace beyond the chair. He saw the man himself standing before him the key of possession in his pocket.

Now Jean's lies and evasions crawled out from the dark into the light and he recognized them for what they were.

Now, he knew why she had made light of Mr. Panciera on her visits to the hospital, why she hadn't telephoned him on her return from Europe, why she had not told him of the ball. Now he knew why she had feigned affection for him and why she had not wanted him to come to New York Now, he knew why he had been kept such a secret.

There had been no place for him, the man in the wheel chair in their romantic and luxurious life. He had been the meal ticket and something of a necessary nuisance, and that was all.

Mr. Panciera, unaware of Tim's realization that he had been the dupe of an elaborate deception, talked glibly and happily on, giving his ideas of the new firm with a three-way partnership as he saw it.

But Tim could not hear him. He could not hear him for the roar of his dream world crashing into pieces within him.

Nor, turned toward the fireplace, grimly seeking out new evidence of deceit, did he see Jean Roland, every hair in place, radiant in a voluptuous morning robe making a smiling entrance.

Jean, discovering Mr. Panciera frowned her displeasure. But he, eager to remove any misconceptions, went quickly to her.

"Good morning, Miss Roland. I dropped in for our morning conference and found Mr. Reese here I took the liberty of telling him how highly wou think of him." He turned to Tim. "Here is your beautiful lady, Mr. Reese."

But Tim, unheeding, was laboriously getting to his feet.

Jean suddenly saw the dark intensity on his face, flashed a questioning look at Mr. Panciera. But Mr. Panciera, having just discovered Tim's intensity himself, was as bewildered as she.

Tim, walking awkwardly and with difficulty, went to the table by the fireplace. He picked up the tiny gold mannequin, stared down at it.

Jean disturbed now, went swiftly to him.

"Tim darling! You're walking without canes!" She was rapturous. "It's wonderful! Wonderful!"

He looked slowly up at her. His jaw was taut, his eyes burning. She was startled.

"That mannequin—" She tried to interpret his hostility—"that's from last night. That's yours."

Tim Reese's jaw stayed hard, his eyes continued to burn. Jean Roland saw the hurt and resentment on his face.

"You're angry?" She was fearful of the worst. Her voice broke a little. "Why? Why, Tim?"

Mechanically Tim turned the tiny gold mannequin over in his fingers. Paul Panciera diplomatically slipped out the door, closing it noiselessly after him. Neither Tim nor the girl was aware of his going.

Tim's silence became a reproach more overwhelming than words.

Jean Roland was uncomfortable. For the first time in the company of Tim Reese she had come face to face with a situation she did not understand and could not handle. Jean did not know what happened between Tim and Mr. Panciera, but she did know the gold mannequin Tim held in his hand was the cause of it.

She moved close to him. "I love you, Tim," she whispered suddenly. "You're the only man I've ever loved."

Tim Reese relaxed slightly, found words. "Here." He gave the tiny mannequin to Jean. "I've had all I want of gold mannequins for a while."

"Won't you believe I love you? She was emotional, pleading now.

"No, Jean." His words had a cool, quiet finality to them. "Even if it were true, I couldn't believe it. I could never believe you again."

He passed by her moving clumsily to the door. He stumbled once but did not fall. He went out closing the door quietly after him.

Jean, stunned, watched him go. It was a long moment before she recovered. Then, in panic, she raced for the door.

"Tim! Don't go! Please don't go!" She cried out into the hall, pleading wildly. "Believe me, Tim! Please don't go!"

The only sound in answer was the whir of the elevator on its way to the ground floor.

Jean whirled back into the room, ran for the rear of the apartment.

"Martha!" she screamed as she ran. "Martha! My shoes! Stockings! A dress! Hurry, Martha! Hurry!"

Tim Reese, rushing away from the shop, as if in some wild hope of leaving his heartbreak behind him, moved with painful and clumsy speed along the slippery sidewalks. Twice he slipped and only the quick hands of passers-by saved him from falling. Once he stumbled and fell to one knee. It was only with torturing effort, holding to the sill of a store window, that he was able to get back on his feet. People passing him on the drab, cold day thought him drunk or demented, or both.

His hurt now blinded him and his mind was blurred with madness. He wanted to move faster, faster. He weaved, tottered, slipped. Cars barely missed him and horns cursed him as he stumbled across traffic crazy streets.

He was headed for his hotel, but only vaguely. He went south, then west, then south, then west. His one clear purpose was to get away as quickly and completely as possible from Jean and the past.

He came to Fifth Avenue. The light flashed red against him as he reached the curb. Traffic leaped forward. But Tim did not stop. He lunged forward through the moving cars. One car avoided him, then a second car. A third, a cab turned sharply as it bore down on him. Tim stumbled.

A horn barked widly, brakes screeched. The cab skidded. Its front wheels swerved, avoiding Tim as he lurched about trying to regain his balance. But the body of the swerving cab sideswiped him, threw him to the pavement.

The cab driver slipped out of his cab, made his way through the crowd that had immediately ringed Tim on the pavement.

"Drunk as a hoot owl," the cab driver muttered.

Tim, struggling painfully, got to his knees. "I'm all right," he said. "Just give me a minute."

A traffic officer on duty at the intersection, pushed his way through the crowd. He came as Tim, holding to the cab, had grimly worked himself halfway to his feet.

"Take it easy, bud," the officer said. "Better stay where you are.

"I'm all right," Tim said.

Then, his knees crumpled, and he pitched forward to the street and lay there.

A few minutes after the ambulance had taken Tim off to the hospital, and the crowd had hardly dispersed, a cab came to a stop at the same crossing. In the cab was Jean, hurrying to Tim's hotel. Every hair in her silvered gold head was still in place but her lovely young face, usually relaxed and luminous was strained and dark with impatience and anxiety.

She leaned forward in her seat unable to understand why the cab had stopped. "What's the matter?" she asked the driver.

"Traffic light, ma'am," he replied.

"Hurry, won't you?" she pleaded with the driver. "I have to get to the hotel immediately. It's terribly important! Please!"

Christmas had come to Cedarbrook and gone. At the hospital, Midge stood on a tall step-ladder taking down the ribbon-bowed green fir sprays from over the fireplace in the recreation room.

Tim, in his wheel chair, was back a distance, watching her. The two were alone in the room.

"Be sure to keep the red ribbon," he called to her. "We're going to need it next year."

"Thought you were going to be rich next year," Midge called down to him over her shoulder.

"Yup. But come here a minute." He held up a booklet. "Just take a look at this."

He wheeled the chair over to the foot of the stepladder. She climbed down, joined him. The booklet was from a real estate agent and in it was a picture of an avocado ranch. The white, red-tiled ranch house stood on a little rise commanding a slope dark green with an avocado grove.

"For sale." Tim grinned. "Back in my old stamping ground, California."

Midge whistled. "I guess I'd better save more than ribbons."

He put his arm around her. "Don't worry, hon. Cochet is going to pay me plenty. And so far as running the ranch is concerned, I'm one of the best ranch hands in the business." He saw her glance down at the wheel chair, smile. "You look at me," he reproved her, "not at the wheel chair."

"Mad man." she ran her fingers affectionately through his hair.

"All right. You wait and see." He looked around to make sure they were alone in the room, then quickly he kissed her. "Remember," he said with his grin, "I can still wiggle my toes."

UN Troops Pull Back on Central Front

Tank Columns Stop Reds in Tracks On Eastern Front

Communists Crush Forward On Entire West Half of Line

By OLEN CLEMENTS

Tokyo, April 25 — (AP) — Waves of communist troops crushed forward along the entire western half of a 100-mile battle front today in their third invasion of South Korea.

But to the east, counter-attacking Allied tank columns stopped the reds in their tracks and even hurled them back at some points.

On the west-central front, United Nations forces pulled back abruptly and broke contact with the reds. The withdrawal was so rapid some rear elements were trapped.

One was ambushed by communists wearing white civilian garb or the blue denim uniforms of South Korean supply bearers.

U. N. troops rolled southward toward Seoul in a long column stretching for miles.

Orderly Traffic Jam

"From the air it looked like an epic and orderly traffic jam," Associated Press correspondent William C. Barnard reported. "There was a solid line of military traffic — vehicles of all kinds.

The tanks came last. Their guns were silent although one had already infiltrated further south. Communists on the hills commanding the highway let the tanks roll.

In the extreme west, allies fell back in orderly fashion before pressure from Chinese, exploiting their Imjin River crossing. They were less than 25 miles north of Seoul, South Korean capital out of which refugees poured in dusty clouded columns.

A tank-led relief column fought its way to the trapped U. N. battalion of Indians.

Allies expressed confidence the battle would be won by the Allied enormous superiority in fire power and all types of weapons, in fact a tremendous superiority in everything except numbers."

The battle of the Chinese on the west were pouring down the Yongchon — Uijongbu invasion route. This highway also leads to Seoul. Allied fighter planes and bombers attacked them all day long.

Red advances were made by leap-frogging one division after another. Fresh troops pushed through dead, wounded and fatigued reds on the dusty battlefields.

Twice they cut off sizeable allied forces, but both times the allies escaped with slight losses. First it was the Turks, then the Belgians.

(Reuter News Agency said the units cut off were a Canadian battalion and a Belgian force. There was no amplification and the report quoted no source.)

Front-line officers, like the top command, were confident. But not Korea's civilians.

They left southward into Seoul, and again southward out of Seoul, in great dust-clouded columns. It was their third disheartened flight ahead of a red invasion.

This pattern had been disrupted by a gigantic allied end-run in the centre where South Koreans retreated. Fresh U.N. forces plugged the gap.

The reds were stopped there seven miles south of the parallel and four miles north of the highway leading from Chunchon to Seoul.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 25 (CP) Synopsis: Wet weather continues in the Southern Ontario area. It will end off and on during the early hours today and there is no prospect for any real improvement until Thursday.

Colder areas of the unsettled weather is a low pressure system centred over Illinois this morning which will move across southern Ontario Thursday morning. This will end the rain and there is a chance of some sunshine by Thursday afternoon. There will be little change in temperature.

NON-CONFIDENCE MOTION BY C.C.F. DEFEATED 127-53

Budget Debate Fast Drawing to Close

Ottawa, April 25 — (CP) — By a vote of 127 to 53, the Commons last night rejected one of two opposition motions of non-confidence in the government, bringing the prolonged budget debate towards its close.

It was a straight government-versus-opposition vote on a C.C.F. motion criticizing the administration for "failure" to exempt from the 20-per-cent defence tax the incomes of single persons earning up to $1,500 a year and married persons earning up to $3,000.

Still before the Chamber is a Progressive Conservative motion censuring the government for failing to take action against profiteering and the rising cost of living.

As the debate tapered off for the vote, George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, declared his support for the C.C.F. motion and said the budget bears most heavily on those least able to pay additional taxes.

The budget should have encouraged "saving and eased the pressure of high living costs.

Start Recruiting

In the opening stages, Defence Minister Claxton announced that recruiting will start this summer for women for the R.C.A.F. and for the reserve services of all three services.

Prime Minister St. Laurent said the government has tightened its passport restrictions in recent years.

Start of Project May be Postponed For Another Year

Toronto, April 25 — (CP) — Robert H. Saunders, Ontario hydro chairman, said last night that he has received "discouraging news" from Ottawa and Washington which makes it appear that a start of the St. Lawrence seaway will be postponed for another year.

In a radio address he called for an immediate start on the development and charged that it is being delayed by "selfish" interests.

"I cannot stress too strongly the urgency of proceeding with this project right away and the need for getting it started so that work will clear the way within the next few weeks," Mr. Saunders said.

At Ottawa, Transport Minister Chevrier, in the Commons last night has indicated Canada will consider starting the project alone if there is no United States ratification soon, said he knew nothing of the "discouraging news" mentioned by Mr. Saunders.

Committee Approves Emergency Defence Budget of $6,468,206,000

Washington, April 25 — (AP) — The appropriations committee of the House of Representatives approved today a $6,468,206,000 emergency defence budget and readied itself to consider another military request which may exceed $70,000,000,000.

The amount recommended today for House consideration is for emergency purposes growing out of the stepped - up tempo of war in Korea.

It is in addition to $48,000,000,000 already voted the military by Congress for the fiscal year ending June 30.

In the immediate offing is the regular military budget for the year starting July 1. The appropriations committee predicts it will be close to $70,000,000,000. This figure would be $10,000,000,000 more than the president had estimated in his January budget.

Included in the emergency measure which the committee sent to the House floor today are funds for the Atomic Energy Commission "project X," for a quick build - up in the armament of the army, the navy, the Marine Corps and the air forces; and for a speedup in procurement of tanks, guns, guided missiles and planes.

The largest allotment in the bill is for the army, which gets $2,850,584,000. The navy share is $1,640,815,000, and the air force's allotted $1,925,000,000, which includes a large chunk of money to tool up and expand the aviation industry.

The Atomic Energy Commission gets $46,800,000, much of it for project "X," a top-secret project.

Recruiting Women for Armed Services Will Begin Soon Defence Minister Tells House

Ottawa, April 25—(CP)—Canada will begin this summer to recruit women for the armed forces and indications are they will play a major role in the R. C. A. F.'s radar units.

Defence Minister Claxton ended months of speculation when he told the commons yesterday that the decision has been taken to recruit women for the regular R. C. A. F. and for the reserve forces of the three services. The reserves train two nights a week. Married women won't be recruited.

A spokesman said priority will be given to filling jobs "in the electronics end of things."

Women recruited will be given equal status and pay alongside men of the same rank, and there will be no women's corps such as existed during the Second World War. The wartime corps, numbering about 48,000 in the three services, were disbanded shortly after the end of the war.

Mr. Claxton said in the event of a general war, manpower shortages would make it essential to employ women on a range of duties beyond those in the last war. He said only a "limited number" of women would be recruited at first, but other sources indicated there might be as many as 5,000 enlisted by the three services.

New Uniforms Planned

And the girls will receive newly-designed, "new-lookish" uniforms.

The navy said it is completely redesigning Second World War uniforms for women, but had no details. The army plans a new-type uniform with false pockets and a fold-back-hood raincoat. The air force will offer a uniform made like a tailored, four-button suit. Air force girls will obtain a feminine version of the wedge-type hat.

In the three services, Mr. Claxton said, there were a number of duties which can be done as well "or better" by women than by men. He mentioned clerks and stenographers, and added that there now is a whole new group of occupations related to radar and communications.

Deluged With Calls

Headquarters of Ottawa's radar squadron, a reserve unit, was deluged last night with telephone calls and girls coming to make personal applications, to join the air force.

Sqdn. Ldr. Francis J. MacNamara, commanding officer of the unit, said dozens of girls were "champing at the bit" to get into the R. C. A. F.

"Probably, he said, he had no official orders on the matter.

The majority of the girls applying had no previous service experience, he said.

Morrison Pledges Britain Will Cut Living Standard Before Slashing Arms Program

London, April 25—(AP)—Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison pledged today that Britain would cut her standard of living before slashing the proposed rearmament program.

Morrison's statement, made in a speech here, came as the high command of the Labor party crushed a left-wing rebellion over the rearmament program and the party pledged itself to support Prime Minister Attlee's policies.

The statement by Morrison, at a luncheon of the American Chamber of Commerce was looked upon as Attlee's answer to the rebels, who had complained that the United States was dragging Britain into a ruinous expenditure for arms.

Departing from his prepared speech, Morrison told his audience, mostly American citizens, that the problem of raw materials for British home production, export and rearmament is causing "most serious concern."

Objections by rebellious Aneurin Bevan e.s to the size, speed and method of financing Britain's rearmament was overruled by the party's national executive at a regular monthly meeting.

Bevan, Minister of Labor, quit government posts in the biggest single revolt against Labor policies since the party swept to power in 1945.

COMMISSION TOLD RACE BETTING IS ON WIDE SCALE

News Piped Into Canada By Phone and Telegraph

Toronto, April 25 — (CP)—The Ontario Legislature's Crime Committee moved today to subpoena an appropriate official of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada to testify about the use of telephone facilities by bookmakers.

The motion was made by William Houck, Liberal member for Niagara Falls, who said he was "amazed" by testimony yesterday by Deputy Attorney - General Clifford Magone that bookies make widespread use of telephones to carry on their horse - race betting activities.

Mr. Houck's motion was seconded by Attorney - General Porter, chairman of the newly - appointed seven-man committee.

May be Glad to Appear

Mr. Porter noted that the telephone president lives in Montreal. "For all I know he may be glad to appear before the committee," he said.

The company will be anxious to help us as much as they can," Mr. Porter added.

Mr. Magone testified at the committee's first meeting yesterday that betting establishments, outside of Toronto, operate in many cities, are fed racing news from the Toronto bookmaking clearance telephone and telegraph systems.

The deputy, first witness called by the committee which is investigating administration of justice in Ontario, told of cases where scores of telephones and multiple switchboards had been installed in private Homes. Their obvious purpose was for providing gambling information, he said.

Hopeless Task

'Mr. Jolliffe asked why the Telephone Co. could not trace the calls for the police department and supply information which might lead to arrests and convictions.

"Well, they can do that," Mr. Magone replied, "but they say it is hopeless task. They say they don't know whether a telephone is being used for gambling or not.

Mr. Magone cited a Toronto case where police raiding a private home found 80 telephones installed and six girls operating behind the United States border leading into the house carried

Three Bear Cubs Without Mother Now in Captivity

Kinmount, Ont., April 23 (CP) — Three black bear cubs, deprived their mama because Bill Scott and Herb Hancock found her in a tough mood.

The two trappers came face to face with mama last week while trapping in this area, 40 miles north of Lindsay. But she wasn't friendly and came after them. Hancock shot at her with his light .22-20 rifle. The shot didn't get over but she was quickly on her feet and lumbered away.

Three days later the men found the three small cubs and they now are in captivity at Kinmount.

The three troopships carrying the Canadians sail directly to Korea now are on the high seas.

NO PROTESTS MADE

Tallahassee, Fla., April 25 (AP) — Not a voice was raised in protest yesterday when the Florida House voted to rip masks off the Ku Klux Klan. The unmasking bill will be sent to the Senate, which passed an almost - identical bill in the 1949 session. The 1949 bill died in a last-minute snarl of that session.

Accident Occurs Short Distance Off Florida Coast

Key West Residents See Plane Plunge into Ocean

Key West, Fla., April 25 — (AP) — A commercial airliner and a navy training plane collided and crashed into the ocean a mile off Key West's south beach today. Soon after a woman's body was found at the scene.

Soon after, Pan-American World Airways reported that a four-engined DC-4 plane operated by its affiliated company, Compania Cubana De Aviation, was overdue on a Miami-Havana run with 34 passengers.

Capt. William R. Carruthers, acting head of the naval submarine base here, said eyewitnesses to the collision saw the navy plane spun into the water immediately after the collision.

In 30 Feet of Water

The airliner remained in the air for about 30 seconds before crashing into about 30 feet of water between one-half and one mile offshore.

Carruthers said two bodies identified as navy men had been recovered and "we are recovering some other bodies which are being brought ashore but have not been identified."

The navy plane, he said, was on "a planned operational flight."

A flotilla of rescue crew, including a diving crew, went into the scene. Coast Guard, navy and other aircraft flew over the area looking for possible survivors.

First reports said the airliner vanished in the water but that bits of wreckage were floating to the surface when the first navy rescue boat reached the area.

The plane left Miami at 11:03 a.m. EST and was due in Havana at 12:16 p.m.

No Survivors Seen

Several residents of Key West saw the four engine craft plunge into the water a mile off the south beach. A navy plane took off immediately, flew over the crash scene, and reported it saw no sign of wreckage or survivors.

Later, bits of wreckage began to float to the surface and the navy reported a female body had been recovered. The navy had two boats and a dirigible at the scene.

Six-Cent Wage Boost for U.S. Railroad Workers

Washington, April 25. (AP)— Economic Stabilizer Johnston today approved a six-cent-an-hour wage increase for 1,000,000 railroad workers even though it pierced the government's 10-per-cent ceiling on pay boosts.

Johnston said he agreed with a three-man panel, which investigated the case, that special consideration had to be given to the rail workers.

He said that under the Railway Labor Act, it takes longer for them to win new contract objections.

The six cents was due under a cost-of-living clause in contracts the railroad workers signed March 1.

That contract, negotiated at the White House, gave them an increase of 12 1-2 cents March 1.

Woman Acquitted Of Manslaughter

Toronto, April 25—(CP)—Mrs. Marie Lopees, 24, today was acquitted of manslaughter in the kitchen-knife stabbing March 4 of her 26-year-old husband.

Mrs. Lopees, formerly of St. Catharines, pleaded that her husband had beaten and abused her and threatened to kill her. She added, however, that she had loved him and had not wanted to kill him.

Canadian Battalion Named as One Breaking Out of Red Korean Trap

Tokyo, April 25 (CP) — Reuters News Agency today a Canadian battalion was one of two that broke out of a communist trap in the west central sector yesterday. The report was unconfirmed.

Reuters said the Canadians, along with a Belgian battalion, were cut off when the Chinese threw in several attacks against a new allied line south and southeast of Yonchon.

The report said the two battalions were rescued, but gave no details.

P. E. I. Election Probably Last Under Old System

Charlottetown, April 25. (CP) — Wednesday's P.E.I. general election may be the last under the Island's unique electoral system.

Both old-line parties have said they will study and possibly reform the system, which now calls for election of two types of representatives — assemblymen and councillors.

Voters must have varying qualifications to cast ballots for the two types, and it is legally possible for one voter to vote for all 30 candidates.

Platforms of both the Liberal and Progressive Conservatives mentioned the subject. The C.C.F., running only five candidates, could not win control of the House.

The Liberals, in power for the last 16 years, have said: "It is hoped to improve the Election Act to reform districts by referendum. We have eventually one member only in each district elected by a franchise vote."

Promise Reform of Act

The Progressive Conservatives, who formed a six-man opposition to the 24 Liberals in the last House, have promised "to reform the Election Act to the Effective Act to the effect that every voter shall have a general franchise in conformity with the principle of the Dominion Election Act. Property qualifications will be dispensed with."

Under the present act, a voter owning $325 worth of property in a district can cast two votes.

Voters will elect eight men to Seoul, and again southward out of Seoul, in great dust-clouded columns. It was their third disheartened flight ahead of a red invasion.

This pattern had been disrupted by a gigantic allied end-run in the centre where South Koreans retreated. Fresh U.N. forces plugged the gap.

The reds were stopped there seven miles south of the parallel and four miles north of the highway leading from Chunchon to Seoul.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 25 (CP) Synopsis: Wet weather continues in Southern Ontario area. It will end off and on during the early hours today and there is no prospect for any real improvement until Thursday.

Colder areas of the unsettled weather is a low pressure system centred over Illinois this morning which will move across southern Ontario Thursday morning. This will end the rain and there is a chance of some sunshine by Thursday afternoon. There will be little change in temperature.

U.S. Military Aid Given Chinese Nationalists

Washington, April 25—(AP)— State Secretary Dean Acheson said today the American military aid program for Nationalists on Formosa is being sent under an agreement that will be used for "internal security" and "legitimate self defence."

Acheson made public at a press conference an exchange of notes with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's government which lays down that basic policy as to the arms sent to his forces on the big island off the China coast.

Congressional critics of the administration's far eastern policy—chiefly Republicans—have been demanding that these troops and arms be employed against the Chinese communists. Gen. Douglas MacArthur also has urged the use of these troops. It was one of the points of difference which led President Truman to fire MacArthur from the far eastern commands.

Acheson said the basic United States policy for aid to Formosa is that which was proclaimed last June 27 by President Truman following the attack of the north Korean communists on south Korea.

At that time, Truman ordered the U. S. seventh fleet to protect Formosa. He also demanded that Chiang Kai-Shek cease all attacks on the Chinese mainland.

The president said he took these steps because occupation of Formosa by the communists would be a direct threat to United States forces entering the Korean war.

Associated Press Chief of Bureau At Prague Missing

London, April 25 (AP) —William N. Oatis, Associated Press chief of bureau at Prague, has been missing since Monday.

The United States embassy at Prague told the London office of the AP by phone today that it had asked the Czech foreign office for help locate him.

Oatis, 36, went to Prague last June.

One of Oatis' American colleagues said he was last seen going to see Rudolf Peuger, foreign press chief in the Czechoslovak government of communists.

This correspondent, Russell Jones of the United Press, reported that inquiries about Oatis' whereabouts brought "only very vague replies."

Poor Outlook For Opening of Trout Season

The trout season opens on Saturday and many city and district anglers are readying for the occasion.

But there's bad news for them unless the weather man comes through with exceptionally mild weather during the next three days.

Water in the northern lakes and streams that are free of ice is the highest in years. In fact, a Department of Lands Forests official said today, anglers will have extreme difficulty in negotiating several of the streams.

Water level in the Hanscroft area is very high and a few days ago roads leading to Barry's Bay were flooded in low places, reducing motor traffic to a minimum.

Be A Sportsman

So unless the weather changes for the better, anglers are due for disappointment, according to the official who added——

"Don't feel compelled to take the limit allowed for the various kinds of trout. Limits are only maximum's not must's. Take only what you intend to eat. Carefully remove from the hook all fish not required while they are still in the water. These fish will then be ready for the next time you go fishing and will also be free to reproduce.

"Remember that it is illegal to keep trout under seven inches long measured from the tip of the snout to the posterior edge of the tail. Let them go they will be bigger next year.

"Know your fishing laws and adhere to them. This is the mark of a true sportsman.

Only 15 p. c. Displaced Persons Brought in Now on Farms

Only approximately 15 per cent of the 320 displaced persons from Europe placed on farms in Ontario since 1946 are still working in agriculture, it was stated today by Mr. H. E. Reed, local manager of the national employment service.

This was the estimate of the number of DP's now actually working in agriculture in this district, but it was pointed out that a number of men, who have served their year on farms have expressed intention of returning to agriculture.

"These are the men who want to go into farming on their own, but who cannot see their way clear to earn sufficient money as hired men to make a down payment on a farm," Mr. Reed said. These men have accepted other jobs at higher pay until they can make sufficient money to go into farming on their own.

Some of the DP's wanting to remain in agriculture but not on their own", are hired farms on shares. In this way circumventing their lack of capital.

Must Spend Year

Under the terms of their contract on coming to Canada DP's are required to spend a year in agriculture. Minimum wages to DP farmers is $45 per month, including room, board and washing. Many of the DP's have married since coming to this country, others, already married, have brought their families from their homelands.

No figures as to the number of DP's families in the Bay of Quinte district were on file at the local employment office. It was explained that placing of Dutch families was handled by the Immigration Department after 1945. In 1949, 53 Dutch families were placed in Hastings and Prince Edward, about 70 families going to the latter county where additional labor force is required for canning crops.

Still Being Brought In

Displaced persons are still being brought in for agriculture, with about 35 expected to be placed in this district this year. Since the opening of navigation this year about ten DP's have been brought in with the Belleville office.

There are about 15 applications now on file at the local employment office by farmers for year round men.

Three Young Girls Hitch-Hiking From N.B. Are Picked up Here

Short just 100 miles of their trip Sunday while hitch-hiking trip from St. John, N.B., to Toronto, three 18-year-old girls had their trip to Queen City interrupted early this morning, when they were picked up by provincial police near the Ontario School for the Deaf just west of the city.

The girls were attempting to hitch a ride to Toronto from Belleville, and were first seen by police.

Dissatisfaction with school classes coupled with a desire to see the world, was the motivation for the trip, the girls stated. They planned by the three girls, all of whom are wards of the Children's Aid Society in the city of St. John. One of the girls said she had an uncle in Toronto where she planned to visit.

The three girls started their trip Sunday morning and said they stayed at a police station in northern New Brunswick that evening. In the morning they were allowed to continue their journey.

Monday night the girls stayed at the YWCA in Quebec City, paying for their night's lodging with money given them by a kindly truck driver. Tuesday they hitch-hiked their way to Belleville and were planning to continue their way to Toronto when they were picked up by police early today.

The girls will be returned to St. John, it was stated by Don Bateman, investigator for the local family court, who with a representative of the local Children's Aid Society, interviewed the girls.

Closing of Several Cheese Factories Causes Concern to District Farmers

Considerable concern is being felt by farmers in the Bay of Quinte district over the closing of several cheese factories in the area, as it is feared that at least the cheese production will fall off in Hastings county, one of the big cheese producing counties of the province.

Four factories in the immediate Bay of Quinte which operated last year will not run this year and two of them are holding sales to dispose of equipment. The factories closing are Cressy, Wooler, Acme and Quinte.

Dwindling milk supplies has been given as the reason for the closing of factories, part of this being due to the fact that some farmers are switching from dairy to beef herds.

Farther north in Hastings the Roslin factory will not open this year and equipment is being sold. Also Bogart, Pinegrove and Victoria factories in the Tweed area have stated they are considering closing.

Tweed district farmers are considering the possibility of a cooperative factory though many formation of several present units but note that this could not be constructed until the first of the 1952 season.

The Shannock factory at Stirling commenced operations last week, the company having signed a contract with the Kraft manufacture 40-lb square rindless cheese. The Kraft factory will also manufacture for Kraft, while it is reported that Zion Hill will also make the 40-lb square cheese.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 25 — (CP) — Prices levelled off at their lower levels on the stock market today.

Following yesterday's late selling streak prices dropped in early trading. Trading continued its recent sluggish trend and price changes were generally small.

In industrials papers, steels, agriculture, construction, foods, refining oils, liquors, manufacturing companies and retail stores showed a majority of losses. Utilities, textiles and banks were mixed.

Most industrial price changes were in small fractions but there were a few exceptions. Powell River was the only paper ahead as it climbed briskly to a new high at $82 and then settled for a $4 gain at $82.

Western oils eased quietly over a broad front.

Golds drifted lower in continuation of their recent inactivity. Losses were mostly small.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 25 (CP) —Trading was steady with prices 25-50 cents lower at the Ontario stockyards today. Receipts: Cattle 400; calves 160; hogs 380. There was an estimated holdover of 1,270 cattle.

Medium to good weighty steers brought $33-$34.50 and common to medium light steers and heifers sold at $29-$32. Medium to good cows were $27-$29 with fed yearlings $31-$34 and stockers $30-$33.

Calves were steady at $37-$38 for choice vealers and $30-$35 for common to medium.

Grade A hogs sold at $32 and dressed sows at $27.

FRIENDS RAISE $20,000

Baltimore, April 25 — (AP) — His friends raised $20,000 to pay his back taxes, but Dr. William B. Wardrop of Silver Springs still has to serve four months in jail for income-tax evasion. Judge William C. Coleman, in sentencing the doctor yesterday, said physicians have no right to preferential treatment "merely because communities need their services."

COW AWARDED CERTIFICATE

Toronto, April 25. (CP)—A 17-year-old Holstein cow, Mina Fayne Korndyke, has produced more milk than any other living cow in Canada.

Owned by J. H. Jose and Sons of Newcastle, Ont., Mina just completed her 13th performance test, giving her a lifetime total of 187,446 pounds of milk and 7,035 pounds of fat with an average test of 3.75 per cent butterfat.

Her owners have been awarded a gold seal certificate of longtime production by the Holstein Friesian Association of Canada.

AN INDICATION OF GROWTH

An important step in the development of Canada as a self-sustaining country and as a power in world trade was accomplished Tuesday when oil from Alberta flowed into the refineries at Sarnia. The turning of the valve that released the flow heralded a new era in Canadian economy and indicated that this country, for many years to come, will be able to back her industrial expansion with her own resources.

Only four years ago, Canada was in an oil box; she had only 75,000,000 barrels of the liquid gold remaining in the Turner Valley area. Imperial Oil had sunk 133 experimental wells in an attempt to find more reserves. On the 134th attempt, the city fathers of the fabulous Leduc field, 194th attempt, the city fathers of the fabulous Leduc field, and a new chapter opened in the story of Canada. In four short years, oil reserves have been estimated as being more than one billion barrels; the same amount of dollars will have been injected into the economy of the west by the end of this year; and independence has been gained from United States supplies.

That independence itself means that $150 millions will cease to flow into the United States for oil. A large measure of relief to the government has resulted, for its oil royalties, which were less than 1 million dollars in 1046, have risen to 33 times that amount in the four years.

The pipeline that carries the liquid gold from the west to Ontario extends 1,126 miles of country, through three Canadian provinces and three American states. Its extension by ship carries it another 662 miles to the port of Sarnia.

Figures, for the most part, and particularly when they are in the millions and billions class, do not carry much of the tale. To the industrialist, they are the barometer of a rising and pulsing industry; to the financier, they are an indication of a solid future for investment in the country; to the companies who have poured time, money and effort into the search for oil, they are reassurance. But to the average Canadian, they do not carry much weight.

The significant part of the story is that Canada, through the expansion of her oil reserves, has pulled herself up by her bootstraps. We are now producing more than one-third of the oil we use, and that percentage will be increased as yet undiscovered oil is discovered yet. Thus far, we are producing what our industrial capacity demanded in 1938. That, incidentally, gives an insight into the steps Canada has taken industrially and economically since 1938. The joyous part of the situation is that we are at least now on the way to keeping pace in a natural resource field.

Oil will put dollars in Canadian workers' pockets. It will keep dollars in this country which have formerly been flowing to the United States, as mentioned before. For Alberta, it means a strengthening of industrial muscles and a great deal of revenue. And it is a re-affirmation of faith in Canada as a growing nation by a splendid leader in Canada's oil industry, the Imperial Oil Company.

LABOR FACES A CRISIS

Deepening rift in the Labor party of Britain may be the sign for a general election in that country. Aneurin Bevan, Labor member of Premier Attlee's government, resigned his post after voicing displeasure at the budget brought down by Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Gaitskell.

Mr. Bevan's chief objection to the budget was that it sacrificed part of the free health scheme for defence and rearmament purposes. In addition, he condemned his own government for not adopting a foreign policy of its own, rather than basing it on the one already established by the United States. He does not agree that Mr. Gaitskell's budget was in line with the raw material situation in Britain and the world.

Following Mr. Bevan's forceful exit from his post as Labor Minister, financial experts forecast that his action would precipitate further eruptions. They were correct, for now Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, has followed in the imprints made by Mr. Bevan. Further, and despite a feeling that the government would look well before they leaped, John Freeman, secretary to the Minister of Supply, has turned in his resignation. Perhaps the end is not yet in sight.

The Labor hierarchy has certainly suffered hard blows in the past few weeks. Mr. Attlee himself is in hospital suffering from an ulcer ailment; Ernest Bevin, long a wheelhorse of the party, and one of its more brilliant, if plodding, workers, is dead; and now, Bevan, Wilson et al are in revolt. The government hopes to be able to hang on to its position until autumn, despite its reverses. First indication that it might do so came as Mr. Bevan, even though he has resigned his position, united with his government on a fiscal foreign charge question. If the other rebels are satisfied to follow Mr. Bevan in his latest move, the government might be able to keep control.

The political crisis has been building up in Britain for some time, and it appears that final resolution of it will only be accomplished by an election. The Labor government is crippled, and finds itself limping. Such a government is always at an increasing disadvantage.

NICE TYRANT

Talk of tyrants! One I know
Rules without a firing wall,
But so mercy will he show.

Sleeps he holds us, one and all.

Puts American is he!
Neither Russian nor Chinese
Move to his kingdom (truth I pen)—
All obey as he decrees.

Moscow's mustached Uncle Joe
Orders rebels put to death.
But the tyrant that we know
Merely runs us out of breath.

Everyone his summons heeds.
All he frightens when he frets.
Every thing he thinks he needs,
Wise or no, he always gets.

Terrifying now and then
Is the way that he behaves,
Home his kingdom (truth I pen)—
He a tyrant; we the slaves.

Still we love him and are glad
Subject to his will to be.
Serving such a little lad
Makes it glorious slavery.

Interesting papers on "Saving Bees and Conservation of Energy" were read by Mrs. Ralph Stafford and Mrs. R. S. Sleeth. A discussion followed the reading of the papers in which a large part took and which proved to be most interesting and instructive.

The subject of the debate was "Resolved that local option would be in the best interests of the city". Mr. R. McCreary and Mrs. W. J. Grant spoke in the affirmative and Mr. J. Foster and Mr. Montgomery supported the negative.

Upon a vote being taken the affirmative won by a large majority.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TRUSTABLE FOLKS

After reading one's newspaper and noting the large number of people who disregard all rules of honor, responsibility, and decency our regard for trustable folks mounts to a new high. They are the only people we want around us. They give to us hope and assurance.

What a joy it is to do business with those who honor their obligations, their appointments and the trust that other people place in them. It's such a paying proposition—this thing of making one's self always trustworthy—that it seems strange it is not universal. Among people it is difficult to understand, but it is more difficult to understand why there are nations that shirk their responsibilities of honor.

Now there are any number of people who are thoroughly trustable, in every way, and they are the ones to tie to and keep for associates, companions, and friends. I once knew a chap who was so dependable they called him "Dependable Jim," and another honor name he had earned was mankind!

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

TO GOD'S GLORY AND MAN'S

Someone was telling me the other day about a minister of no great ability who had served one church for sixty years and who was so unpopular that now in his mid-nineties he still has important commissions assigned him by the church officials and performs them with his customary efficiency.

He is an example of a man who uses and always has used everything he has. First of all he has fine character. Again, he has good health, in the third place, he is most personable and knows how to heal wounds instead of how to make them. He is a good executive.

All these years he has done what he could in his church and let others do what they could do better. He has never been a forceful preacher, so he stayed out of the pulpit and let a number of eloquent people who have been associated with him through the years do the preaching. He has done faithful and loving work among his people. He has built up the Sunday school and he is also in the fine character. Again, he has good still appears in the pulpit almost every Sunday and takes some brief part in the service. The congregation just likes to look at the man who for 60 years has meant so much to generations of men and girls as they have intermingled—fathers and sons, grandparents and great-grandchildren.

OUR TOWN

By JACK SCOTT

Discovering a little common sense in these days is bewildering as finding a fin of uranium and I've come upon a other today.

Here is a copy of an address given recently in Ottawa by Dr. Chester Burton Bruce, Ph.D., professor of English at McGill, and this, it seems to me, is what is the very few reasonable voices in our land.

There's a strong and constant temptation these days to stand up and be counted, to take a forthright stand and to cling to it as one might cling to a raft in a heavy sea. But Prof. Phelps suggests that we cherish our doubts, that we continue to think, however much it hurts to think, that we betray ourselves in the inner side of the world is at the same time the crusade for good democracy.

War, as he says, is a mighty exhilarant and there are, indeed, many who are glad to fight heartedly. An American leader says, "We are fighting mad" and by the tall, let's bash its brains out." In Korea we have "Operation Killer" and in this country with a sense of "doing a necessary job."

The second group comprises those who, without considerations, a great mass of citizenspectators who may be identified as "Mr. Everyman." Everyman is a waiting, baffled look, who are told that a publication is censored and ever ready for negation, who suffer from a creeping paralysis of the will, the dulled fear, cynicism, too inert for protest.

Prof. Phelps says, "I feel that the world is in a dreadful mess and perhaps at a dead end, and with nothing to be done about it. Things have gone wrong somewhere and there is no way out. Watch the cost of living going up. Watch the standard of living going down. Watch the precarious subsistence of poor human beings up into the privileged pockets of the rich and shrug your shoulders; you can't do anything about it; it's just the way things are going. Maybe there will be a universal annihilation; maybe there won't; what does it matter."

And in these stolid ranks stand many thousands of young men and women.

It's in the third group that Prof. Phelps puts his hope and finds his optimism.

"These are members (and they come from all walks of life) who people by any temperament or training serious and analytical, who have a kind of thoughtful love for decency and equity and justice, and a sense of personal responsibility towards the betterment of the world."

These are Canadians who are slow to accept the doctrine of "my country, right or wrong."

"They try to keep their heads by using them," the professor says, "and they hold their place in mind as will keep clear the shape of the other fellow's case as well as that of their own. When a general refers to his men as 'cannon fodder' and 'Chinese', members of this group are appalled at the sheer stupidity unimagination in humanity."

They are, he says, "simply a group of cool, sane and sensible troubled men and women of our day."

What do such people believe in? Professor Phelps examines their thoughts.

They believe that other men and women are similarly concerned everywhere among all the peoples of this little world.

They believe in the sanity, humanity and wholeness that are always "just on the edge of believing that war is never justified."

They believe that a brave new world is in the making for the hitherto deprived peoples of the East and that "however we may be to forestall or thwart the bad in it, we must assess and respect the good in that vast process."

They believe in the cool examination rather than the hot opinion. Such troubled minds ask themselves if it may not be possible that the American picture of Russia is as out of focus as the Russians' grotesque distortions of America; if Russia and Japan are not viewed with genuine alarm America's military bases and strategy.

Professor Phelps finds cause for optimism.

"It is a patent fact," he writes, "that the conscience of the modern world is such that the Americans and Russians need, and know they need, to hate each other out as fiendishly bad without mitigation in order to keep on with the doing their respective peoples. This is surely a sign of the world's basic moral health."

And, finally, he believes in our democracy, not as a nation as a nation to bring change.

He believes, he writes, "that even yet, of this Canada of ours, this young country, this brave new world, through our churches, her universities, her service clubs, cried out of the wilderness, the world the moral climate of the world could change. Still, we believe, do the churches, not a voice, from the universities, organizations like the service clubs, the shouts from the band-wagon."

Letter to the Editor

Made no Promise To Reduce Taxes

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

Regarding Mr. A. F. Everson's letter to the editor, I would respectfully point out that at no time did I during my election campaign make any promise to reduce the taxes, but that during this year have been slightly reduced and not anticipated and, in the face of rising costs, is a distinct tribute to the economies exercised by the Council.

The policy of the charging of the cost of operation of the street sweeper, which was purchased in 1930, as a local improvement against the ratepayers on streets serviced, was authorized by a by-law passed by previous council in December, 1930, at which time I was not a member of the city Council. I understand that the opinion of council at that time was that street sweeping should be considered as a local improvement as it street olling, which is charged directly to the properties involved.

It might be added the old sweeper was purchased under the same plan, that being, the cost was charged against the property lies, which it served.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In a busy and fashionable restaurant the other day a young couple entered, the mother carrying a pretty little girl of about two years of age, all beautifully dressed and shook hands heartily with the young couple, and made a fuss over the child. The introductions were affected all around the table. Then the child, naturally, began to scream.

The parson, one of those rugged-headed, energetic gentlemen of the cloth, reached down in the sugar bowl and handed the little darling a cube of sugar. The child promptly some brief part in the service. The congregation just likes to look at the man who for 60 years has meant so much to generations of men and girls as they have intermingled—fathers and sons, grandparents and great-grandchildren.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

From many years of correspondence with readers of all sorts I am well aware that most of the fuddy-duddies in the population—you know, geeks past 30 years of age—are just as certain today as they ever were, that diseases of the respiratory tract, including colds and whatnot are due to dampness, drafts, change of weather, insufficient clothing, wet feet or cooling off too quickly after becoming overheated.

These reactionaries are downright cantankerous about it and they pronounce my teachings concerning the harmlessness of such "exposure" (aside from frostbite) crazy and dangerous. I shall never forget the testy editor who summoned me to his sanctum and admonished me that my teaching about exposure was wrong for he himself could not walk from office to pub without an overshoes, if the pavement was at all damp, without taking cold or getting sore throat. And in this year of grace, 1941, and others who know what exposure means. Here is a report from a World War II veteran.

"May I add my little bit on wet feet cold weather etc? Three years on the railroad, six days a week, eight hours a day, working outside in rain, sleet, and cold. If I wasn't walking in it I was lying in it. Never had what people call a cold.

"Two years with the army in the mountains of Burma, getting out of a damp bed into damp clothes in near freezing weather. No ill effects. Finally was done in by the low coolntry where the temperature was generally 90 or higher. There I mingled with a few thousand G!'s—and sure enough, with the usual run down with the C!!

Some unbeatable old fogies will tell you that the soldiers was probably indoctrinated before he left home.

I can't deny that, although I hope he was taught about the C-R-I in school or by his parents.

On the other hand, people with a nineteenth century outlook have to acknowledge the woodsmen, sailors, arctic hunters and explorers who not get pneumonia or other illness from exposure—but they brush the help facts aside with the explanation that such persons are "used to it," or that that isn't enough then the hunters, fishermen, woodsmen, soldiers, sailors and arctic explorers who happen to have "good resistance."

Good resistance is a lot of fun, because it is a term whether the fancy is put forward by a postman, lineman or by a trick specialist. No reputable physician can define "resistance" other than immunity. Then when an honest doctor talks about immunity he refers to it in a specific sense against this or that germ, bacteria, immunity to typhoid fever or smallpox, for example, and never in the vague intangible way that wiseacres and charlatans use the term "resistance."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Baked Potato Skin

Q.—Would eating baked potato skins or any citrus fruit seeds cause appendicitis? (Mrs. K., M.)

Ans.—It is better to eat the baked peel along with the inside, or, if you like it, as I do, the skin without the inside. Certainly the inside portion is the part to eat because it is the part that such foods may cause appendicitis.

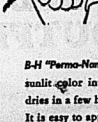
Daughter 1 1-2 years old craves sugar from early milk and eats the soil out of flower pots. Is there any way to stop this?



(Mrs. F.T.)

Ans.—Many young children do this. No great harm in it. She will stop it when she finds other things to play with.

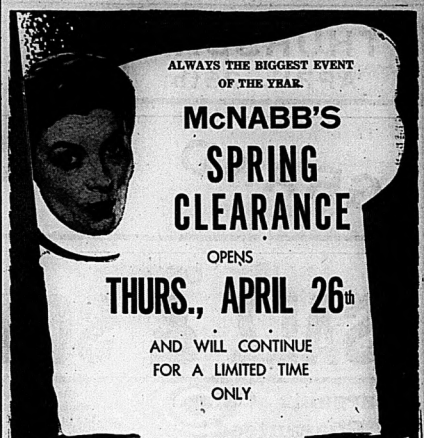
CANNOT BE DONE



Los Angeles, April 23, (AP)—Nick Contino's counsel Tuesday said he hopes to get a new army physical examination for the $4,000-a-week accordionist, but the U.S. Attorney's office replied it can't be done.

Lawyer Gerald Kales announced, as Contino was arraigned on a second draft evasion charge, that he is seeking the new physical for his client, who says he suffers from claustrophobia.

But Ray Kinnison, assistant United States attorney, told a reporter:

"There's no provision in the law for it."

Report From Westminster

Twilight Days of Socialism's First Period of Rule Near

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 25 — (CP) These appear to be the twilight days of socialism's first period of majority rule.

Morale among Labor members has never been lower. Nothing less than a political miracle, it is widely argued, can stave off a Conservative victory in the general election which must surely be held within the next six months.

Certainly the party's struggle for its soul, which began when the realities of rearmament were seen to be conflicting with social idealism, draws to a climax amid unfavorable portents.

The Prime Minister is in hospital, two of his most trusted policy makers are out of the picture and the restless left has launched what most Conservatives and some Socialists interpret as an outright bid for power.

All these misfortunes have been suffered within the last year. Illness drove Sir Stafford Cripps into retirement, removing a respected figure who insisted on economic realism. Ernest Bevin died shortly after leaving the Foreign Office, and Labor lost its most cohesive personality, a man who could easily win trade-union support for a right-wing policy.

Chief Architects

Most political observers regard Cripps and Bevin as the chief architects of official policy in the years of Labor rule that started in August, 1945.

"It was Mr. Bevin first, and Sir Stafford after 1947," says the independent Weekly Economist, "who fashioned from the raw aspirations, the ideals and the untested theories of 1945 measures that took account of the real nature of the contemporary world."

The Economist's article, which appeared before Aneurin Bevan announced his resignation as Labor minister, argued that the loss of key men such as Bevin and Cripps had accelerated the "galloping paralysis" of government.

The resignation of Bevan, followed by Harold Wilson's decision to quit the Board of Trade, makes things even more gloomy for Labor. The party may rally and close ranks, but Bevan's attack on his former colleagues in the government seems unlikely to attract any wavering voters.

C OF C STARTS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

The response of the membership notices sent to all members of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce is very encouraging. Up to noon yesterday over $1,000 had been received and more are pledged.

The objective is $4,000 in membership fees, and there is every indication that it will be reached.

Fire Destroys Four Buildings, 500 Capons Lost

Picton—A large barn, driveshed, pig pen and hen house were destroyed by fire yesterday at the farm of Harold Miller, at Milford, seven miles south of Picton. Also lost were 500 capons, a quantity of hay and grain, two pigs and a cow.

The fire was noticed in the early morning hours and had gained such headway that it could not be controlled. The burned buildings adjoined one another.

Neighbors were quickly on the scene and were able to save the cattle and horses. The RCSA fire truck responded to the alarm but could do little. Though the house was close by, it was not endangered as it has a metal roof and siding. Cause of the fire is a mystery, and is believed to have started in the driveshed.

U.S. Weather Balloon Drops At Cherry Valley

Picton—A weather balloon which was released by a United States weather bureau at Buffalo, N.Y., was found in a field near the home of Ray Greene, Cherry Valley Road. A card attached stated that the balloon would travel to a height of 13 miles. After it burst, the instruments attached would fall down slowly on a parachute. While in the air, the instruments, in a box-like affair, act as a radio broadcaster of temperature, air pressure and moisture content of the air through which it passed.

Mrs. Greene noticed the instrument land on its small parachute and is returning it to the Weather Bureau at Joliet, N.Y.

DENIES ALLEGATION

Los Angeles, April 25 — (AP)— Former actress Pola Negri said yesterday that a New York perfumer threatened her with physical harm if she did not pay $6,572 which she says she doesn't owe him. Two weeks ago Gus Fragus said he loaned Miss Negri the money, and that she deceived him by saying departing Nazis had abandoned some jewels in her villa in France. Miss Negri denied this in her counter-suit.

Community Honors Young Couple With Gifts

Thomasburg — An enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mrs. H. B. Richardson on Saturday evening when friends of the Thomasburg community met to honor Mrs. Richardson's daughter, Elsie and her husband, Mr. Mrs. Fred Hosking, of Oshawa, upon the occasion of their recent marriage.

Miss Doris Mumby made the presentation of a purse of money for which Fred and Elsie both expressed their sincere appreciation, extending an invitation to their friends to visit them in Oshawa. Mr. Bedford, uncle of the groom, also spoke briefly and all joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows."

PROPOSES NEW SET-UP

Toronto, April 25. (CP)—Ontario Liberal leader Walter Thomson Tuesday night proposed a more centralized and integrated provincial police system.

"We could develop a voluntary system," he told a special meeting of the suburban Parkdale Liberal Association. To prevent jurisdictional conflicts, municipalities could come under central police.

Criticizing the current provincial crime probe, he said he "had never heard of anything as ridiculous as a man investigating his own department".

JUDGE REFUSES REQUEST

Brampton, Ont., April 25. (CP) —Three youths who asked to be sent to Kingston penitentiary rather than a reformatory were sentenced Tuesday to one year to Guelph Reformatory for escaping from the Brampton Training School.

Judge Archibald Cochrane turned down the request of James VanKoughnet, 19, Glen Charleton, 18, and Edward Goodbrand, 20, to be sent to Kingston so they could see the "wide open spaces."

The youths are already serving sentences of 18 months for the theft of a car used in the escape. The sentence will be consecutive.

Stage Presentation of 'Snow White' Superbly Done by O. S. D. Students

Once upon a time, in a far-off land, there lived a jealous, wicked queen and her beautiful stepdaughter, the fairest maiden Snow White—but this is running ahead of the story. For the third evening in a row, the students of the Ontario School for the Deaf, under the direction of Miss Jean Gordon, assisted by the ladies' choir of Bridge Street United Church and Mrs. William Burgoyne, as soloist, last night superbly re-enacted before a capacity audience, the beloved fairy story of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Scanning the sea of faces and hundreds of eager eyes of fathers and mothers, boys and girls, teachers and friends, intently watching the unfolding of the story of baleful jealousy, and kindly love, one was led to believe, that underneath all the modern materialism of this 20th century hearts were not, after all, so different from those of the 19th, whose daily fare and nightly bedtime story also centred around some fair-faced character with its sweet moral bearing so interestingly applied.

Superintendent Voices Appreciation

As on previous evenings, Mr. W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the school, spoke briefly, welcoming the guests, and voicing his deep appreciation for the manner in which Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs had been received during its three-night run. He told of how the girls had made the lovely costumes in the sewing room of the school, and of the boys making the attractive scenery.

Prior to play proper, a humorous, pantomime skit, entitled "I'm Going Away for the Week-end" was depicted showing the vast difference between the girl, and her requirements, of the 1890's and the fair maid of 1951. Maureen MacDonald, as Miss 1890 with her voluminous and many-undergarments, black cotton stockings—secret vault of treasured monies—long, trailing skirt of green, long sleeved, white blouse and wide, leghorn hat and old time telescope grip was a decided contrast to Joan Zwaygrh, the maid of 1951, fully dressed in a beige suit, blouse with tiny matching hat, her neat overnig case, containing, only her toothbrush, showed how different were those essentials. Both portrayed were exceedingly well done, and greatly applauded.

The "Rhythm Band," also an outstanding feature, both in their attractive appearance with their golden-lined blue capes, standing behind tall, wooden music stands holding the musical scores, was expertly conducted by Peter Klym who carried the overture through to a perfect finale.

The play was an arrangement of eight scenes in three acts, the first scene taking place in the ballroom of the castle where a bevy of beautifully gowned ladies and equally attractively attired lords was assembled in company with the Spanish wicked Queen and her step-daughter, Princess Snow White, were enjoying a most lovely and stately dance. Here, the theme, of baleful jealousy, was introduced, and continued throughout the play, finally culminating in the death of the Queen, herself, who was constantly asking both the king her husband, and father of Princess Snow White and the magic mirror, "who was the fairest lady in the land?"

The last act depicts again the ballroom of the castle, with the king and his courtier present. Two by two, the little page introduces the various lords and ladies to his majesty, the king, till at last enters the beautiful princess, Snow White in all her bridal loveliness, with Prince Charming at her side. Then followed the beautiful dance, making of this scene one of the loveliest, next to that of the angel seen in the forest.

The beautiful hoop-skirts of the lovely gowns, the lilting rhythm of the dance as they bowed and crossed and re-crossed, forming twos, and bowing, together with the soft draperies, and pencil and golden chandelier, made of this one enchanting picture. "And so the beautiful princess and prince charming lived happily ever after."

Between acts one and two, Mrs. Keon read a brief description of the work at the OSD and congratulated it with other schools whose method of training was different from that of lip-reading, as taught at this school. She also emphasized the point that the school was never known as the "Ontario School for the Deaf," and not the School for the Deaf and Dumb, bringing out the vast difference between being deaf and being dumb. These children, as they exhibited in the evening's performance, were everything but dumb in the usual meaning of the word.

In charge of the dances, Miss H. McCammon and visual aids, Mr. J. Chard.

The music which added so much to the evening was written and composed by Alec Gordon for this special occasion.

Mr. Morrison extended appreciative thanks to the ladies of Bridge Street choir, to Mrs. Burgoyne, to Mr. Alec Gordon, to all members of the staff who helped in various ways to prepare and present the concert.

The cast was recalled and recalled for curtain bows by sustained applause with a special handclap for Grumpy, whose mischievous face was seen peeping out 'n the armpits of the other actors. The 'prop' assistants were also given a curtain call, which voiced the appreciation of the huge audience for their splendid timing.

Lawyer Provides First Inkling Of Break-Up

New York, April 23 (AP) — A lawyer provided the first official inkling that the story-book romance of the prince and the princess—Aly Khan and Rita Hayworth—is headed for a non-fairy tale crackup.

The actress' counsel, Bartley Crum, asked about long-standing and oft-denied reports that Rita will seek a divorce from the Moslem prince, said:

"No decision has been reached yet."

This was the first time anyone able to speak for the actress admitted a split-up was under consideration.

When Rita returned here from Europe April 5 she said there was no truth about divorce reports.

GULL RIVER FLOODS

Minden, April 23 — (CP)—The Gull River has flooded several cellars and inundated at least one street in this Haliburton village. Residents say the stream has not yet reached peak level.

Several persons already have rowboats and canoes ready for use. They are 'preparing' for a flood session similar to that of 6 years ago when boats were necessary along the main street and in many other parts of the village.

Minden is 40 miles north of Lindsay.

Canada Expected To Produce Garrand Rifles

News, April 25—(CP)—Canada disappointed over failure to reach agreement on a standard Atlantic pact rifle, now is expected to go ahead and produce the American Garand automatic principally for her own troops.

Canada's hopes for becoming a rifle and ammunition producer for the United Kingdom were dashed when London decided to adopt a new .28-calibre rifle.

The British decision was taken, an authoritative source here said, after a disagreement with the U. S. on economic principles to be considered in adopting a new weapon.

Canada, along with Britain, the U. S. and France, have been taking part in discussions seeking a rifle that all four can accept. These have broken down over the British decision.

This means that Canada now will:

1. Embark on a program of producing American-type .30-calibre Garand rifles and amunition, principally for her own use.

2. No longer be able to supply Britain with rifle and rifle ammunition in the event of a third world war. Canada supplied both .303 Lee-Enfield rifles and bullets to Britain in the Second World War.

The informant says the British-American breach occurred when Britain indicated it had decided to adopt the new .28 rifle, throwing away tactical advantage in favor of economies.

With the lighter weapon and smaller bullet, a soldier would be able to carry more bullets on his person and manufacturing would be less expensive, all in all a saving in defence expenditures.

The United States took the opposite view. In various standardization conferences, it advanced the theory that the countries should standardize on the "biggest and the best" equipment available.

DID NOT BRING CADILLAC

Toronto, April 25. (CP)—A man with artificial legs, Roy Scott Fenwick, 39, of Stouffville, Ont., Tuesday night was charged with theft of $6,110 from Clifton Fink of Woodstock. He will stand trial in Simcoe.

Fink told Simcoe police Monday he gave a man with-artificial legs $6,110. The man was to return with a new Cadillac for Fink. He didn't.

Police said they found $800 in cash on Fenwick when they arrested him here Tuesday night. All but $20 was in new $100 bills. Fink had told police $6,100 of his money was in new $100 bills.

BRIGHTON MAN KILLED

Huntsville, April 25 (CP) — Harold Clifford Horsley, 46, of Brighton, Ont. was killed Tuesday under the wheels of a Canadian National Railways freight train. He tried to board while it was moving and lost his grip. Huntsville is in the Muskoka district.

Price Rollbacks Over Wide Range Ordered for U.S.

Washington, April 25 (AP) — Nearly one-fourth of the American economy today went under a single sweeping price order which the government said was designed to roll back "the general level of manufacturers' prices."

Price director Michael V. DiSalle, expects the factory ceiling covering 75,000 plants, to wipe out part of the runaway price boom that followed the Korean war.

The country will find, DiSalle predicted that his office of price stabilization has "not been playing pat-a-cake with prices"—and that the program "is tougher than (it has) been led to believe."

The O.P.S. will follow up with three more major ceilings within a week. These will cover machinery, cotton textiles, and wearing apparel including shoes.

The new order will bring some price increases, but these will be outweighed by the rollbacks, DiSalle said.

Stripped to essentials, each factory's new price ceiling will be: the pre-Korea price, plus wage increases and increased cost of materials. On most materials, increases only up to Dec. 31 can be counted.

Even entitled firms must give 15 days' notice before marking up the price tag.

The array of products affected includes:

Consumer "hard goods" including radios, refrigerators, ranges, furniture, hardware etc.; many processed food and grocery items; a wide group of miscellaneous items including auto trim, some building materials, paper and paper products, rayon and some other textiles.

Brookside Hospital Reclaims Alcoholics

Address by the members CTU given in the YMCA F. Everson, the guest speaker for the occasion, described the Brookside Hospital at Erindale, which is located on No. 5 Highway west of Toronto at the corner of Dundas Highway and Mississauga Road. The plant consists of 10 acres of land and a building 18 rooms of Credit Valley stone, which was formerly used by the Jesuit Order as a retreat house.

This property was purchased by the Ontario government in 1949 for $40,000 and converted into the first publicly-owned hospital for alcoholics. The University of Toronto and the three leading hospitals in Toronto, Toronto General, St. Michael's and Western are co-operating in the Ontario Health Department's program. This hospital is a government sponsored experiment for the rehabilitation of alcoholics and represents a unit in a treatment movement which may well be destined to make history for Canada.

Act Passed

The idea of such an institution was first presented to the government by the Ontario Temperance Federation. It was later pressed by Alcoholics Anonymous, who persuaded the Hon. Russel T. Kelly, former Minister of Health, to persuade the cabinet to undertake the project.

In 1946 the legislature passed an act to establish an Alcoholic Research Foundation patterned almost entirely along the lines laid down in the Cancer Research Foundation. This legislation and a grant of $100,000 started the provincial venture, which now has seven patients under the care of a staff, although Brookside has not been yet officially declared open for service.

Major John Foote deserves credit for se lengthat Brookside alone could never be anything but a partial approach to the problem of the alcoholic. Accepting advice from scientific leaders such as Dr. J. S. W. Ferguson, head of the Department of Pharmacology, University of Toronto and H. Ward Smith, professor in the same department, Major Foote urged upon the government the importance of research facilities.

Three-Point Program

As a result a master plan was submitted by Dr. A. B. Stokes, head of the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital calling for the simultaneous establishment of a three-point program to include.

1. An out-patient clinic;
2. An emergency treatment service;
3. Hospital treatment.

Brookside was designed to provide the last named service. Overnight for administration in these later stages has been in the hands of Mr. H. David Archibald, director of research for the Liquor Control Board. It is anticipated that in the near future the co-ordination of these various re-habilitation services along with essential research on the total problem will become the function of a department separate from the Liquor Control Board and under direction of Mr. Archibald.

AP Sets up New Teletypesetter Press Circuit

Charlotte, N.C., April 25 (AP) —The Associated Press today began delivery of its news reports by teletypesetter circuit to a group of newspapers in North Carolina and Virginia.

Teletypesetter is an automatic typesetting device. Through the medium of code punched in a tape, an operator in one central location actually operates the typesetting machines in distant newspaper offices.

Teletypesetter equipment has been in use in individual newspaper plants for many years. The AP previously had helped its members set up their own teletypesetter circuits in New York, Illinois, Arkansas, Kansas, Minnesota, New Mexico and Texas. Some of these have been edited by AP men. But today's new circuit is the first ever operated directly by any news service.

Transmitting point for the new circuit is Charlotte.

Canada Will Participate In Materials Plan

Ottawa, April 25. (CP)—The Defence Production Department Tuesday announced that Canada will participate in the controlled materials plan to be launched in the United States next July 1.

This will mean Canada will be able to have her own defence needs considered in the over-all priority system to be clamped on essential goods in the U.S.

Included in the program will be products of steel, copper and aluminum. Defence projects in both countries will get their share of these items first. What is left over will go towards meeting the need for consumer goods.

A program, similar to the one to be launched next July, was in operation the latter part of the last war.

But one of the essential differences, said the department, is that not all production will be brought under the new program.

"The present plan will apply to all defence and defence-supporting items but will not cover consumer goods as such."

In the last war, consumer goods were covered.

NON-CONFIDENCE

In the budget debate, the Chamber heard a Liberal member — Alan Macnaughton (Montreal Mount Royal) — call upon the government to restrain price mark-ups and "insist on fair play for producer and consumer."

He did not object to a mark-up based on physical cost but the mark-up on taxes "savors of pyramiding and hence gouging the public." Many prices had been deliberately raised in recent months in anticipation of ultimate price control.

Common Warned

He warned that Canada is in for a "great period of unrest", if parliament does not find some effective remedy.

E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops) criticized government spending and called for economies. The government had "failed miserably" in attacking the problem of reducing non-essential expenditures. If there had been economy, tax increases would have been unnecessary.

Howard Green (PC—Vancouver-Quadra) suggested the government had formulated a policy of "drift and indecision" on the vital questions of air-raid precautions, a Pacific defence pact, profiteering and inflation and troops for Europe.

Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC—MacLeod) said the government is more concerned with maintaining its "iniquitous" debt-creating financial system than about the welfare of the people.

$172,000 in Fees

Mr. Fulton referred to the fact that Walter Thomson, Ontario Liberal leader, had received $172,000 in fees from the federal government before becoming member of parliament for Ontario riding.

Mr. Fulton noted that Monday Mr. Thomson had been described as the man relied on by Liberals to "fasten" Premier Frost of Ontario.

"I must say," he added, "that in so far as placing that honorable gentleman in a financial position to carry out his job, this government appears to have done the best they possibly could. As revealed in a return made to this House, that honorable member, before he was a member of the House, received under the heading of professional and special services the sum of $172,000 for work which he had done for a government department."

Mr. Thomson, a Toronto lawyer, had received the fees for work done for the veterans' department.

Mr. Macnaughton said the public should be better informed on what the government is doing.

He urged improvement in the government's information services and said it is important that information should always be available to the press, radio and other channels of communication.

He said "all is not well" so far as the volume of information going out from Ottawa is concerned. He had been told the main news services were making adjustments which appeared at first sight to amount to drastic curtailment.

Waste Move Newsmen

He also said there should be more Canadian newspaper men in London, Washington and Lake Success.

"At a time when world affairs are in such a jittery state," he said, "I would have thought it essential that the United Kingdom, the centre of Commonwealth activities; Washington, the centre of North American and Pacific activities, and Lake Success, the centre of world activities, should have a great many more accredited Canadian correspondents reporting the news for the Canadian public."

There was an "incredibly small" number of full-time Canadian reporters at Washington and Lake Success, Mr. MacNaughton said.

He commended the Lake Success correspondent of the Montreal Star, and he said the CBC's news coverage continued to hold a high standard and its foreign representation "appears to be healthily on the increase."

Tighten up Regulations

The Prime Minister said that Canada has tightened up passport regulations in the last four or five years and he now hopes that all loopholes have been closed.

He was commenting on a statement Monday by Benjamin Gitlow, one of the original organizers of the American communist party, that he had travelled to Moscow several times on a Canadian passport. Gitlow was testifying before a United States government committee.

Mr. St. [illegible] said he did not know [illegible] signed years ago but he [illegible] that close attention [illegible] been given to tightening the regulations in recent years.

"I think that we now have a fairly strict control," he added, "and the general indication is that in any case of doubt the secretary of state for external affairs himself should be consulted."

racing information and a loudspeaker system had been set up to broadcast the results into telephones as fast as they came over the wire.

The committee continues its sittings today. Waiting to be called to give evidence are Inspector William Tomlinson, head of the Ontario Provincial Police anti-gambling flying squad, and Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner W. H. Stringer.

Here's why the G-E POLISHER makes floors gleam so quickly

The full 16-pound weight of the G-E Floor Polisher is on two 5½-inch brushes which lie flat on the floor. An electric motor whirls the brushes over the floor at 600 revolutions per minute. This rapid rotation of the brushes with 16 pounds weight on them, makes floors really gleam in a hurry—eliminating all the old-time, back breaking labour. A demonstration will convince you—see your G-E dealer.

Easy to use

The G-E polisher is so well balanced that even a youngster can guide it easily with one hand. Brushes rotate in opposite directions to counter-balance one another.

Barrie Flyers Take 3-2 Lead In Junior Series

Barrie, Ont., April 25—(CP)—The crucial Memorial Cup semi-final series between Barrie Flyers and Toronto Citadelles bumped in all its bitterness last night, and the result was a wild display of hockey little short of being a farce.

While officials struggled to keep numerous scattered tussles from breaking into all-out fights, Barrie piled up a 10-1 margin over the Citadelles. The lopsided victory gave the Flyers a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series. Sixth game will be played in Quebec Thursday. Venue of the seventh hasn't been decided yet.

Referee Pat Patterson of Toronto, toiling endlessly with flaring tempers, handed out 41 penalties. 22 went to Quebec, there were two match misconducts, five majors and a 10-minute misconduct.

The bitter feeling was the result of an argument over the end of last night's game. Quebec had balked at playing at Barrie, demanding that this game be held in Toronto.

The Citadelles threatened to withdraw if the venue were not changed. When the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association got the hint and awarded the series to Barrie, the Citadelles relented and flew here for last night's game arriving late.

Shove Players In

From the start a howling crowd of 4,340 fans saw that it was going to be rough. Referee Patterson let officials averted fights by shoving the players into the penalty box on a wholesale scale.

Sticks were carried high, charging was committed in every corner and players slashed at every opportunity.

Quebec team officials declined to comment on the game, but Hap Emms, Barrie coach, charged the Citadelles with going out "to get" his players in the last two periods.

"They knew we were too far ahead of them so they just wanted to get rough. Sure we dished it out, but Citadelles made it into a fiasco. We should take them in Quebec. None of my boys were hurt, but several are bruised."

Given Two Makers

The lighter players jumped into a 4-0 lead in the first period, extended it to 7-0 in the second and then outscored Quebec 3-1 in the final period.

Norm Devigny, quick-tempered Quebec player, was the chief offender in the penalty columns. He was given two majors, a 10-minute misconduct and a minor. Match misconducts went to Bill Hagan of Barrie and Copper Leyte of Quebec for coming to a fight in the penalty box after starting it on the ice in the second period.

Jean Marc Bellveau, highly-publicized star of the Citadelles, contributed his share with a major and three minors.

Little Jack Wind led the scoring with three goals for Barrie while Jim Morrison had two. Doug Towers, Real Chevrefils, Don Emms, Jack McKnight and Leo Labine got one apiece. Bruce Cline got the only Quebec goal.

$600 Cheque Mailed to Widow Of Hockey Player

Indianapolis, Ind., April 25 — (AP)— A check for $600 was mailed Tuesday to Mrs. John Holota of Hamilton, whose hockey player husband was killed in an automobile accident last winter.

Hal Jackson of Indianapolis, hockey official and former player, assembled memorial donations from hockey teams and individuals. He said Mrs. Holota is expecting her third child.

Jackson said contributors included the Cincinnati hockey club, St. Louis Flyers, Boozer Club, St. Paul hockey club, Indianapolis hockey club, Boston Bruins, Cleveland Barons, Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens, New York Rangers and Buffalo Bison Booster Club.

Holota, formerly with the Indianapolis Capitals, was a member of the Denver team in the United States League at the time of his death.

TWO SIGN CONTRACTS

Toronto, April 25 (CP)— Defencemen Bill Juzda and Fern Flaman Tuesday signed contracts to play for Toronto Maple Leafs in the next National Hockey League season. They followed veteran goalie Turk Broda, first player to get his name officially on the roster of the Stanley Cup champions for next year.

15 Horses Are Expected In Trial Stake

Lexington, Ky., April 25 (AP) —Heavy drop in the entry slips today for tomorrow's $25,000-added Blue Grass Stakes, colorful little Keeneland track's big test for the Kentucky Derby.

And, indicating just how wide open is this year's $100,000-added Derby, at least 15 three-year-olds are expected to run in tomorrow's mile-and-one-eighth stakes.

The big race itself, the famed "Run for the Roses" at Louisville's historic Churchill Downs May 5, perhaps will draw 16 to 20 horses. Last year's Derby field totalled 14.

That's the present outlook for the Derby in this Blue Grass horse country. For there are some being counted on, to go in the Derby even though they pass up the Blue Grass stakes.

Those include Repetoire, winner of the Experimental No. 1 and the Wood Memorial in the east. He was flown into Louisville yesterday. Coming down with Repetoire was Sonic, who got off at Keeneland for tomorrow's stakes.

Repetoire's trainer, Alfred Jensen, said the cold will prey at the Downs, deferring a racing start until the Derby trial Bernwood, already in Louisville, is considered a certain starter. He will go in Tuesday's Derby trial.

From the March nomination list of 123, the Derby Hopeful class already has been narrowed drastically. But, as one veteran turf follower observed, many hadn't been considered much in the running for some time.

Declared out of the field yesterday were To Market, Longleaf and Mr. Music. Lord Putnam and Long Bow were considered doubtful.

Uncle Miltie, the winter book favorite, earlier was declared out, following two poor races in the Experimental No. 2 and the Wood. And last season's two-year-old champ, Battlefield, was taken out of training last week temporarily.

Expected to come into Kentucky soon are Count Turf, Battle Morn and Tinsely Reward. But word from the west coast has it that Gold Capitol has been withdrawn. Trainer Carl Roles speaking for owner Mrs. Nat Goldstone, said he believes the horse

Four Players Sign Contracts For Next Season

Montreal, April 25—(CP)—Four players of Montreal Canadiens, the team that eliminated in the Stanley Cup final early last Saturday—signed next season's contracts Tuesday.

They are Bert Olmstead and Calum MacKay, forwards, and defencemen Bud MacPharon and Tom Johnson.

General Manager Frank Selke said he would see more of his players today, possibly goalie Gerry McNeil and forwards Floyd Curry and Ken Mosdell.

Selke said he hoped to have the whole squad, if possible, signed this spring so all will be free to get down to the business of hockey early next fall.

Nine-Team Loop In Intermediate Ball Formed

Woodstock, April 25 (CP) — A nine-team representation at a schedule meeting here Tuesday night indicated a wholesale revival of Intercounty Intermediate Baseball this summer.

The group was divided into two sections with Hespeler, Kitchener, Fergus and Listowel in the east and Woostock, Tillsonburg, London, St. Thomas and Paris in the west.

Each group will play a double schedule with other members of their own schedule and an inter-locking single schedule with the other group.

Although the western unit will play 36 games to the east's 32, all results will be tabulated in one whole scale group. The top six teams will make the playoffs leading to the Intercounty Intermediate championship.

"not good enough" to carry the Derby weight of 126 pounds a mile and a quarter.

Korean Briefs

Hong Kong, April 25—(Reuters) — A Japanese Peace Treaty excluding China and Russia would be "the signal for aggressive war" Kuo Mo-Jo, chairman of the China People's Committee for world peace and against American aggression, said in a Peiping broadcast yesterday.

Pusan, South Korea, April 25— (Reuters) — The first air - raid alarm of the war wailed last night over Pusan, main U. N. seaport and seat of the South Korean government. Planes did not appear, however.

Taegu, South Korea, April 25— (Reuters) — A Republic of Korea Battalion commander held a summary court - martial and then executed 187 villagers at Kochang, 35 miles southwest of Taegu, a South Korean government spokesman said today. The victims were accused of collaboration with communist guerrillas. Heavy red partisan activity has been reported in the Kochang area.

New York, April 25 (AP)—Dr. Helen Kim, a South Korean University president, yesterday predicted that the Korean War will last three more years and kill one-third of Korea's 30,000,000 population. Dr. Kim, president of Ehwa University, Seoul, is here on a good-will mission.

Washington, April 25 — (AP)— Senator Joseph McCarthy (Rep.-Wis.) charged last night, today the British government is actively helping the Chinese communists while British boys are dying in Korea." "Out of 10 ships going into communist ports with war materials, seven ships are sailing under the British flag," McCarthy told the Senate. McCarthy said Prime Minister Attlee's Labor government does not represent the British people.

San Francisco, April 25 (AP)— The Chinese communist radio at Peiping yesterday claimed American planes dropped Japanese - made bombs during an asserted raid on Manchuria March 30. There was no confirmation from Allied headquarters of the raid propaganda report.

MAKE THEIR CHOICE

Listowel, April 25 (CP)—The Linstowel Legionnaires baseball team, competing this season in both the Western Ontario Athletic Association and the Intercounty Circuit, announced Tuesday that it will seek to enter the Ontario Baseball Association through the Athletic Association.

Regulations require that a team entered in two leagues declare before schedules start which one it will represent in the playoffs.

GET-TOGETHER TONIGHT

Plans were completed today for the First Annual Get-together of the Belleville Hockey Association's minor hockey being held in Memorial Arena tonight. Individual trophies will be presented to various winners with champions in the lower brackets given crests. Guest speaker is Gus Bodnar, Chicago Black Hawk star who will be here with Chicago scout, Bob Wilson. The general public is invited with a special invitation to parents of the minor players.

A feature of the evening will be a draw for a hockey stick autographed by members of the Black Hawks National Hockey League team. The draw is for players only and some lucky youngster will be the proud possessor of the "stiffstick" tonight.

RASSLE-DASSLE!

Shrill war-whoops will probably echo in Memorial Arena Friday night when Chief Suni War Cloud, a full - blooded Indian, and the latest addition to the ranks of the sensational in wrestling circles will go to the mat here in the season opener. The Chief, we are informed, utters some blood-curdling shrieks while in the throes of combat and his war-dance is something to be seen.

* * *

Heading the first card of the year is that ruffle-tactic Leering Lee Henning. The "Leer" is well-known in Belleville and his tactics, it is said, have not improved since he appeared here last year. He meets the dashing Lord Athol Layton, of "donk old England, b'jove", a society idol who turned to wrestling some years ago. His Lordship has wrestled in the Far East and held championships in Malaya and Singapore. Tall, dark and handsome he is the model answer the top-flight gentlemen of the wrestling fraternity, and the bout with Henning should be well worth seeing.

TURKEY FED

The poor turkey hasn't got a chance. He struts around a month or so before Thanksgiving or Christmas, if he's lucky enough to live that long, the cynosure of hungry eyes. An axe falls, and he or she has had it.

But times are getting tougher for the King of the Barnyard. Any gobbler or hen turkey who has visions or reposing for a year or two in the cool seclusion of a deep-freeze cabinet had better crawl to the farthest corner, for other knife and fork skullduggery tending to shorten his stay in the glacial chamber, is or has been afoot.

And that applies to his counterpart which has been given a lease of life and is wintering comfortably in a turkey - house or wherever gobblers make their winter home.

* * *

Any suit - respecting gobbler should give any human that resembles a bowler a wide berth. For the lads of the alleys have adopted him as the pin-down of the year, with special attention given at the annual bowling get-togethers.

* * *

We emerged unbloody if slightly bowed from the tenth round with Kid Gobbler in the Knife and Fork Annual Bout the other night. Ten times the silverware has bitten deeply into the luscious white meat, with an occasional drumstick tossed in. Ten times the decision has come this way. Ten neckties bear irrefutable evidence of bouts with the gravy bowl. Ten times we have dreamed of being chased by ferocious axe - armed gobblers, with half-grown strapping brothers in the rear, clutching huge butcher knives and barnyard forks. So far we have eluded them.

* * *

On one occasion, the tables were almost turned. At least that is what we believed when pinned down beneath the weight of a giant gobbler, we felt the shock of his huge mashie strike us in the neck. Awakening in cold sweat, we heard a boyish guffaw of delight. There at the bedside stood the family hopeful, clad in Indian garb with huge feathers adorning his head. In his hand he held his bow. He had pinned us by the jugular with a rubber arrow. We swore off turkey there and then. From now on we'll take beef.

* * *

We have come to the conclusion, after being closely associated with several bowling leagues, if not in a playing capacity, that this sport is one of the best, especially in the winter calendar. Unlike hockey, baseball and other reigning sports, it gives its participants more time to know their fellows. Bowlers, whether brokers, bankers or chimney sweeps meet on a common level in the alleys. There is no class distinction, and there is a camaraderie existing among the bowling fraternity that approaches that enjoyed by those of the armed services. Proof of that is seen in the annual banquets and get-togethers where keglers meet to receive trophies and prizes and enjoy an hour or so of social amenities that is heart - warming to say the least. The keen rivalry that exists during the playing season is forgotten and the fellows meet on an equal plane, whether champions or otherwise.

* * *

And we presume the same conditions exist in the ladies' leagues. We have never attended one of the gals' get-together, being a mere male, although we have "sat in" at a mixed league affair. However lady bowlers of our acquaintance have yet to emerge minus gobs of hair or black eyes, so it is safe to presume the femmes enjoy their annuals just as much as their male counterparts.

Sydney Loses To Valleyfield By 9-6 Count

By VIC MORRIS, JR.,
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 25 — (CP) — Coe Hector (Toe) Blake of Valleyfield Braves was not happy last night despite his team's 9-6 victory over Sidney Millionaires in the fourth game of the eastern Canada senior hockey championship for the Alexander Trophy.

"That was the weirdest game I've seen in my life," said Blake, who was a star performer on the famous punch line of Montreal Canadiens two years ago.

Blake's description of the game which squared the best-of-seven series at two games each was shared by a great number of the 9,327 fans They were almost bewitched by the sensational uphill fight of the Bluenosers after they trailed by seven goals at the end of the first period.

The Braves also added a potion to the bewitching brew when they slapped four goals into the Sydney net in 65 seconds.

Sydney came alive in the second and third periods and almost hustled a victory out of their top-heavy goal deficit. Their performance in these frames was one of the gamest performances seen on Montreal ice this season.

A double penalty to Sydney midway through the first session contributed largely to their defeat. It was while playing a three-man defence that Braves poured four goals on five shots past net-minder Nick Pidsodny.

Willie Werle, Pirate Hurler Increases Rickey's Reputation As a Judge of Ball Players

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Every time Willie Werle goes to the mound for Pittsburgh he increases Branch Rickey's reputation as a master judge of players.

Two years ago Rickey, then head of the Brooklyn Dodgers offered $200,000 for the left-handed relief specialist. The Pirates turned it down. Rickey, now general manager of the Pirates is thankful they did.

Werle has appeared in four of the Pirates' six contests and Pittsburgh has won them all. He saved three and received credit for the other.

Werle came to the rescue of starter Vernon Law yesterday, holding the Cubs scoreless for two innings to preserve Pittsburgh's 6-4 victory in Chicago. Werle now has 10 scoreless innings of relief.

Wally Westlake accounted for four Pittsburgh runs with a three run homer off loser Omar (Turk) Lown and a clutch single.

The victory tied Pittsburgh with Chicago for second place, a half game behind the National League-leading Dodgers, who were beaten 7-4 by Boston Braves in Brooklyn.

The Cardinals edged into the first division with a 9-1 decision over Cincinnati in St. Louis. The Phillies handed New York Giants their sixth straight loss with a 6-4 victory under the Philadelphia lights.

Bob Feller kept the Indians in first place in the American League standing Chicago White Sox 8-3 in Cleveland. Runner-up Washington remained half-a-game behind, upsetting the Red Sox 7-5 in Boston's Fenway Park. The defending champion Yankees, behind the five-hit pitching of Ed Lopat, shut out Philadelphia Athletics 2-0 in New York. Detroit and St. Louis Browns were rained out.

Three-Run Homer

Sid Gordon's three-run homer off reliefer Carl Erskine after starter Preacher Roe had left with a pulled hip muscle, helped Boston come from behind to snap the Dodgers' five-game winning streak.

Ellen Musial broke out of a batting slump, cracking three singles to spark the Cards' nine-hit attack against Willie Ramsdell and two successors. Max Lanier spaced eight hits.

Washington's Bob Kuzava became the second visiting southpaw to pitch the distance and win in Fenway Park this season. Last year only two lefthanders — Hal Newhouser and Gene Bearden — did the trick. Kuzava surrendered six hits, three of them homers by Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr and Clyde Vollmer which accounted for all the Red Sox runs.

The Yankees gathered all their runs in the first inning getting half of their six hits off Bobby Shantz. Joe Dimaggio, Jackie Jensen and Johnny Mize batted in the runs.

The Phillies socked six Giant flingers for 12 hits including five doubles and a triple, Bob Miller gained credit for the victory but needed help from Jim Konstanty to get the final out. Rookie Roger Bowman was the loser.

College football's greatest array of players — the Associated Press All-Time All-American team, will meet at the National Celebrities Golf Tournament June 2-3 to receive awards from the Touchdown Club of Washington.

Ted Smith, general sports editor of the Associated Press, will make the awards June 2.

Proceeds of the tournament are used to help combat juvenile delinquency. Famous figures of government, the entertainment world and sports compete in it.

The AP All - Time All - American team was selected by a poll of the country's sports editors and newscasters, in co-operation with the National Football Hall of Fame at Rutgers.

Citation, greatest money-winning thoroughbred in history, will not run in Saturday's $60,000-added Bay Meadows Handicap at San Mateo, Calif.

Calumet Farm trainer H. A. (Jimmy) Jones said Tuesday he would not start his star in the 1 1/16 - mile race. He made the decision following the assignment of weights, in which Citation was given top poundage of 126.

The Eastern Amateur Hockey League Tuesday jumped its membership to six teams, adding Philadelphia and Washington squads to next year's roster.

Four teams now in the league are Johnstown, Pa., Boston, Atlantic City, and New York.

British speed ace, Lt. - Col. A. T. (Goldie) Gardner, will make a bid for six world records on the Salt Lake Flats, Utah, next September.

Driving his record - busting M. G. Midget Gardner will attempt runs ranging from 50 kilometres through to 100 miles and 200 kilometres.

Don Cockell, British and European light heavyweight champion, pounded out a one-sided decision over Freddie Beshore of Harrisburg, Pa., Tuesday night in a non-title 10-rounder before a capacity crowd of 10,400 at Harringay Arena, London. Beshore outweighed the Londoner, 185 to 181.

Blond Freddie first lost $420 in the afternoon for weighing three pounds over an agreed 182 and then took a shellacking from the 25-year-old Englishman in the evening.

Blame it on the weather, TV, General MacArthur or the cost of living, but major league baseball attendance is off some 33 per cent for the first week of the season.

Actually more home dates were played this year than last, 45 to 40, and there were fewer postponements than last spring.

The two-league total for the week was 673,306 compared to 769,068 in 1950, a drop of 95,762. Figured on a per game basis, the percentage drop is roughly 22 per cent.

American League figures show the most marked decline, particularly at Boston, Detroit and St. Louis.

Int. Loop Opens Today in Three Canadian Cities

(By The Canadian Press)

International League baseball returns to Canada's capital today after an absence of 53 years.

Barring rain, a crowd of about 8,500 will see Ottawa Little Giants play Springfield Cubs in one of the league's four scheduled home-coming games for northern clubs.

Other games are in Toronto, where between 15,000 and 17,000 will see the Maple Leafs play opening day host to Rochester Red Wings; Montreal where between 10,000 and 12,000 will turn out for a game with Baltimore; and Buffalo, where the Bisons meet Syracuse Chiefs.

Rain in some proportion is predicted for all three Canadian cities, but it will take a full-fledged downpour to discourage opening-day crowds, particularly in Ottawa, where interest in the new triple-A entry is running high.

The Little Giants, farm club of the New York Giants, were moved to Ottawa from Jersey City where International League baseball folded at the end of last season.

Ottawa, far from the attendance-clipping effects of television and big-league baseball stadiums, expects to exceed its total of 100,000 fans who saw games last season when the city was represented in class C Border league.

Great Interest Manifest

Officials report interest has been great with demand for tickets beyond expectation despite the fact the team has a 1-4 record in its five games on the road.

Coach Hugh Poland is expected to start veteran Andy Tunasic on the mound. The stocky right-hander won his opener at Springfield a week ago. Al Ihde will probably be the choice of manager Al Bill Kelly.

Mayor Grenville Goodwin will toss the first ball with L. B. Pearson, Canada's External Affairs Minister, at bat/ The mayor of Hull, Alphonse Moussette, will catch.

Toronto returns home with .500 record and its hopes pinned in the coaching ability of Joe Becker, retired one of the best managers in triple-A ball.

John Hetki who stopped Rochester to give Leafs their first win of the season will probably start. Manager Johnny Keane of the Red Wings will probably counter with either Bob Tiefenauer, a knuckleball artist, or Jackie Collum, a southpaw.

Montreal Royals are in third place for their home opener and they'll have Clarry Podbelan on the mound. Either Steve Ridzik or Carl Drews will hurl for Baltimore.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Batting: Wally Westlake, Pirates—Clouted a home run and single to drive in four runs, and lead Pittsburgh to 6-4 victory over Chicago Cubs.

Pitching: Ed Lopat, Yankees—Doled out four singles in pitching New York to a 2-0 shutout over Philadelphia Athletics.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, April 25 (AP) — Our teacher for today is Dean Jagger, who has some good advice for struggling starlets. His words: stop struggling.

Jagger is an ideal choice for teacher. Isn't he one of Hollywood's most respected and more important — most consistently working actors? And didn't he soar to stardom a year ago because of his work in "12 o'clock Hlfek," for which he copped his Oscar?

Now he doesn't argue that you should go bald to make a success in the movies. It isn't that simple. But he does have a word of caution for the suspension-happy youngsters who give their studios much trouble.

"The important thing is to keep working," he opined. "You can't make it when you're at home on suspension.

30 Year Man

Jagger who has been in pictures over 20 years, recalled his fledgling days on the Paramount lot. Among his classmates were Ray Milland, Fred MacMurray and a girl named Clara Lou Sheridan (later known as Ann). They went on to film fame but a lot of the young hopefuls of the same vintage have long since been forgotten.

Jagger's main advice to actors is contained in two words: be self-sufficient.

"A lot of actors have only one life—their career," he explained. "They do get tense, and lose all sense of proportions."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The special signals in bridge are very efficient in a number of situations. Such is the case of an overcall in opponent suit. Although considered a defensive bid, it may be used by aggressors.

Defensively, an overcall in opponent suit shows nice tricks, no losers in opponent suit.

This convention can be used by the opening bidder's side. If used by them, however, nine tricks are not needed. Its aim by such a bid is to show no losers and a game between them.

There came the deal you see here:

NORTH
♠ None
♥ Q J 5 3
♦ Q J 5
♣ K 9 7 2

WEST
♠ A Q J 10
♥ 9 8 2
♦ 9 7 4
♣ None
♣ J 10 6 3

EAST
♠ 8 5 4
♥ 7 6
♦ 10 9 8 7 4 3 2

SOUTH
♠ K 7 3
♥ A K 10 4
♦ A 6
♣ A Q 5 4

The bidding started off like this:

South	West	North	East
1 H	1 S	2 S	Pass

When north bid two spades over the west one spade, he said he would lose no tricks in spades. Therefore, south knew right there that his partner had the ace of spades or was void in spades.

In a spot like this, such a bid also promises tricks enough to make a game. Not by itself, but with the help of what partner has shown up to this point. So, it also means the same as a jump takeout.

As the bidding progressed, south learned that north had heart support. South then used the ace and king convention to learn how many aces and kings north could promise.

When north responded to show no aces and two kings, south was advised that north was void in spades. Why? north had no spade losers and did not have the ace, he must be void in that suit.

Such a convention will confuse a beginner. He is not grounded in the needs that lead up to it. But you may know it. If so, you can begin to call yourself a bridge player.

WHY WE SAY "ON THE LEVEL"

. . . Perfectly flat
This expression, which is now applied in a slang sense to something that is supposed to be legitimate, came into the language from masonry where a level is used to check whether the job is completed perfectly.

46 FIRE FATALITIES

Toronto, April 25 — (CP) — Fires took the lives of 46 persons and injured 95 in Ontario in the first three months of this year. The quarterly bulletin of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office, released Monday reports damage was $4,465,390, a decrease from $4,875,249 the previous year.

Major Airlines Will Assist RCAF With Manpower

Harrison Hot Springs, B.C., April 25. (CP)—Canada's major airlines will assist the R.C.A.F. manpower-pool while trying to expand.

Skilled aircrafts employees will man five maintenance depots across Canada to help keep air force planes in the air, a high-ranking R.C.A.F. officer announced here Monday.

Air Vice-Marshal D. M. Smith, of Ottawa, air member for technical services, told the semi-annual convention of the Air Industries and Transport Association of Canada that the program has been necessitated by the shortage of skilled maintenance men.

After negotiations have been completed with Trans-Canada Air Lines and Canadian Pacific Airlines, depots will be opened in Calgary, Winnipeg, Scoudouc, N.B., and two other undetermined eastern points to carry out heavy maintenance.

While he believed there is no other solution, the air vice-marshal said the plan is by no means permanent and will likely be scrapped within four years.

"It is our strong feeling," Smith said, "that this scheme should not be continued any longer than necessary."

He blamed the situation on a variety of causes: the number of jobs available in civilian life, the increasing complexity of airplanes and their equipment, and the resulting need for higher qualifications.

Fuchs Discovers Secret Of Detonating H-Bomb

London April 20 (AP) —The Recorder said Saturday Klaus Fuchs, German-born scientist jailed for handing atom bomb secrets to Russia, has discovered how to trigger the hydrogen bomb. The weekly newspaper said the report was "common gossip" among physicists. The government declined comment. The Recorder said Fuchs worked out the trigger formula in his cell at Bradford prison where he is serving a 14-year sentence.

Body of Flyer Found in Wreck Of Mustang

Halifax, April 25 (CP) —The body of Flt. Lt. Robert E. Kent of Vancouver was found Tuesday in the wreckage of a Mustang fighter in the wild New Brunswick-Quebec-Maine border country today, it was reliably learned here.

There was no word as to whether the pilot had lived following a crash of the plane last Thursday. The body is being taken to the United States air force base at Presque Isle, Me., by RCAF helicopter.

The wreckage was first spotted yesterday and immediately a ground search party started into the scene from Cabano, Que., seven miles away.

General Election Campaign Ends

Melbourne, April 25 (Reuters) —Leaders of Australia's political parties last night wound up their radio electioneering for Saturday's general election.

Government spokesmen were confident the voters would continue the swing away from socialism started in the 1949 election. Labor spokesmen were just as convinced they were heading back to power.

Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, broadcasting from Brisbane, said that in the new parliament he will make it his "main and personal business to deal with defence, communism and economic stability."

Labor Leader Joseph B. Chifley called for support "in the name of the great Australian Labor movement.

Two Children Burned to Death At Waubashene

Parents at Barn Milking Cows When Fire Started

Waubashene, Ont., April 26 — (CP) — Two children were burned to death in their home early today while their parents were at a nearby barn milking cows.

Eva Elizabeth Cronin, 10, and her sister, Rose Marie, 2, were trapped in their beds in the frame farmhouse. Fire swept through the dwelling 10 minutes after the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cronin, set out for the barn.

Firemen said they believe the children were unconscious when the flames reached them. The farm where the fire occurred is near the Georgian Bay community of Waubashene, 20 miles northwest of Orillia.

The parents noticed the fire at 6:45 a. m. but flames blocked their attempts to enter the house, which was destroyed.

Tried to Break Windows

"I tried and tried to break in the windows," said Mrs. Cronin, who was cut about the hands and face. "Flames and smoke poured out from everywhere."

"By God's mercy they were sleeping and we think they were overcome by the smoke—they don't know what happened."

Neighbors said in the five and a half-hours out 30 minutes later, the children would have been awake, since the 5-year-girl usually woke them to go to school.

The parents left the house at 5 a. m. A fire was burning in the kitchen stove. First warning came when smoke entered the barn where they were doing morning chores. Frank Cronin also works at a nearby Indian Reserve.

The Cronin family have farmed in this district for more than 30 years. Two sons — Murray, 22, and Paddy, 19, work at the International Nickel plant at Sudbury. A third son, John, 24, works at a sawmill near Waubashene.

When they were unable to enter the burning house, Mr. and Mrs. Cronin ran half a mile to the nearest neighbor's telephone.

Neighbors of the children were found later by firemen in the burning embers, which collapsed into the cellar of the farm house.

U.N. Terminates Two-Year Career Of Correspondent

United Nations, N.Y., April 26 (AP)—The United Nations yesterday terminated the two-year career of Stephen Weinberg, internationally-known masquerader, as an accredited U.N. correspondent.

Weinberg's most — flamboyant exploit was in 1951 when he posed as a state department protocol officer and presented Princess Fatima of Afghanistan to President Harding.

For the last two years he had been representing the Erwin News Service at the U.N. under the name of Stanley Wyman.

His undoing came when he asked the State Department whether employment by a foreign delegation would affect his status as an American citizen or give him diplomatic immunity.

The department came up with a think answer for Weinberg and it was decided he would be better employed elsewhere than in the delicate area of international affairs.

Survives 16 Days In Cold Chamber, Rum for Liniment

Auckland, N.Z. — (CP) — Some people might like to be shut up for 16 days with unlimited supplies of rum and tomato juice, but Jim Dunkley, 44-year-old Jamaican stevedore, is not one of them.

After loading cargo into the ship's refrigerator at Kingston, Jamaica, Dunkley went to sleep and awoke to find himself locked in a refrigerated chamber by mistake.

Luckily the freezing apparatus was not working but cold from an adjoining chamber bit into his bones. While the ship Phillips lay in harbor, Dunkley had hopes he would be found. But when the vessel put to sea his plight became desperate. He started to bang against the walls of his prison, but his calls were unheard.

He had to fight off a compelling numbness as the air in the chamber became stale, and he seldom dared go to sleep. With a six-inch nail he scratched out inscriptions on the only cargo in the hold. He used rum to massage his body to prevent circulation when the cold became too intense.

Eventually he broke through the cork lining of the door, but came to a layer of zinc which his six-inch nail could not penetrate. After 16 days the chief officer opened the chamber at sea on a visit of inspection. He found Dunkley still exhausted from exhaustion and starvation, lying near the door trying to get air.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, April 26 (CP) Synopsis: In contrast to Wednesday's warm weather today, the cool spell means weather today. The disturbance which drenched many areas with over ½ inch of rain is now moving eastward across the Maritimes and Newfoundland. A northerly current of drier air and it looks like a good day for the Maritimes and Eastern Ontario.

This morning the thin blanket of cloud over Southern Ontario gave every sign of dissipating. Northern Ontario was clear and clear weather prevailed over the prairies almost to the west coast.

Ontario may look forward to a clear cool night followed by a pleasant Friday. Maximum temperatures tomorrow will range from the low 50s in the west western sections of the province and the high 60s in the eastern section.

CONSERVATIVES OPPOSE SALES TAX FOR PROVINCES

Drew Urges Parliament Not to Endorse Plan

Ottawa, April 26 — (CP) — George Drew has lined up his Progressive Conservative party against a move to allow the provinces to collect a sales tax of up to three per cent.

He told the commons yesterday that parliament should refuse to endorse a provincial sales tax, which some provinces say they need if they are to participate in a national scheme for contributory old-age pensions for Canadians of 70 or over.

The provincial governments want new considerd constitutional amendments, which must be approved by parliament, to open the way for contributory pensions plan and an indirect provincial sales tax to finance provincial contributions.

Mr. Drew declaring his opposition to the proposal as the budget debate moved to a close, said a sales-tax amendment would represent a serious threat to the living standards of the people and to the confederation and serve only to divide the country.

His declaration drew no comment from Finance Minister Abbott, who followed him into the debate to defend his budget against Progressive Conservative criticism that the country's wheat production is the key to the defeat of inflation.

Bullen, 30, graduated last night as a registered nurse first man in British Columbia history to do so.

Along with the 110 girls in his graduating class from the Vancouver School of Nursing, Bullen wore white — white slacks and tunic, white shoes and stockings, but he settled for a flower in his lapel.

"I was in the medical corps during the war and I saw 'the need for male nurses," Bullen said.

"It's been fun" he said of his three years in training.

UN Troops, Possibly Canadians, Fight off Main Chinese Attack With Heavy Losses to Enemy

Editor's Note: From the West' central front in Korea, breaking under the weight of an all out Chinese offensive, Bill Boss, Canadian Press correspondent with the Princess Patricias since they landed in Korea nearly five months ago writes graphically of one phase of the current enemy offensive. His censored dispatches from the front cannot yet mention Canadian troops, the Patricias or the home towns of individuals.

West Central Sector, Korea, April 26 (CP) —The Chinese had enough. They withdrew.

Through the evening, night and part of Wednesday, the Chinese communist hordes attacked United Nations positions on a steep hill on this west central sector of the fighting front. They out-flanked and encircled these troops who until now had met with only token resistance as they advanced northward.

But they failed to break the line held by such stalwarts as the sergeant who threw his empty rifle like a spear at the head of the enemy. Or the young company commander who coolly ordered mortar and artillery fire upon his own position when his men ran out of ammunition.

Then the hill stood steep as rocks as the enemy in his massed hundreds assaulted their hill from the front, from the flanks and finally from the rear when the Chinese grew very under sheer weight of numbers. By 8 a.m. yesterday the enemy had had enough. His withdrew down the hill and dug in.

But he was only 100 yards away, separated by a thick curtain of smoke, behind which he undoubtedly was building up for another attack. But at least for the time being, the enemy had been turned back.

Hard-Won Victory

It was a hard-won victory. Time and again the Chinese swept around United Nations frontline positions and at one time the ammunition of one defending company was cut off. And then a young captain, fighting his first battle as company commander, ordered his men into all-out attacks and called artillery and mortar fire directly upon the hill.

For three hours the guns of three field regiments and two battalions of mortars poured down on the position as the captain and his men fought desperately. That was too much for the Chinese. They moved back.

Choice of Peace or Greater War Rests With Communists Truman Tells Press Conference

Washington, April 26 (AP) — President Truman said today it is up to the communists to choose peace, instead of the threat of war or seeking a peaceful settlement.

He did not elaborate and he specifically refused comment at a press conference on a statement that LL-Gen. Matthew Ridgway had authority to bomb Manchuria if he deems it necessary.
